Bailment Agreement.

Atlantic

The Atlantic Refining Company, ... a Pennsylvania corporation, hereinafter called Atlantic, and ..... hereinafted called Buyer, of ..... County of ..... State of ....., who represents that he is the ..... of certain premises at:

County of ....., State of .....

Witnesseth, that in consideration of the mutual promises and undertakings of the parties hereto, it is agreed as follows:

1. Equipment Loan. Atlantic, reserving the right of addition, change, substitution, and maintenance, lends to Buyer for the purpose of storage and sale of motor fuel purchased solely from Atlantic and for no other purpose, equipment that has been installed or which Atlantic may install, which shall remain personalty and the property of Atlantic, and which Buyer shall not remove, but shall repair and maintain, as follows:

2. Sale and Delivery. Buyer shall buy from Atlantic and Atlantic shall deliver to Buyer for sale from said equipment.....gallons of motor fuel annually. Atlantic shall not be required to deliver and Buyer shall not be obliged to accept more than one-eighth of such annual gallonage in any calendar month. Atlantic shall deliver on Buyer's order and Buyer shall order and accept not less than one-twentieth of such annual gallonage in any calendar month. The times, manner and quantities of deliveries shall be in accordance with Atlantic's current practice in effect from time to time. Buyer is not and shall not hold himself out as the agent of Atlantic. Buyer shall take such steps as may be necessary to so inform the public, and shall conduct all business in such motor fuel in Buyer's name, conspicuously displaying his name on the premises.

3. Price and Terms. Buyer shall pay for all products delivered hereunder the price established from time to time by Atlantic for buyers in the same classification as Buyer in effect at the time and place of delivery to Buyer, together with all taxes which Atlantic may be required to pay or collect with respect to the manufacture, sale, delivery or use of such products. Payment shall be in cash at the time of delivery unless credit has been extended; Atlantic, in its sole discretion, may modify or terminate the extension of credit terms.

4. Delivery Tolerance. Buyer shall not be obligated to accept deliveries if unable to operate his business upon said premises by reason of fire, flood, war, civil commotion, strikes, blockade or other causes beyond his control. Atlantic shall not be responsible for any loss or damage resulting from any delay or failure in delivery due to fire, flood, storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, war, military operations, national emergency, civil commotion, strikes or other differences with workmen or unions, or from any delay or failure in delivery when the supplies of Atlantic, or the facilities of production, manufacture, transportation or distribution which otherwise would be available to Atlantic, are impaired by causes beyond Atlantic's control or by the order, requisition or request of any governmental agency or acting governmental authority, or Atlantic's compliance therewith, or by governmental proration or regulation, or from any other delay or failure due to any cause beyond Atlantic's control, similar or dissimilar to any such causes. When such cause or causes exist, Atlantic shall have the right in its sole discretion to restrict or cease deliveries hereunder.

2117 5. Indemnity. Buyer shall indemnify and save harmless Atlantic, its successors and assigns, agents or employees, from any and all liability or claims for loss, damage or injury to any person or property, including the person or property of Buyer, his agents, employees and all other persons and property, resulting directly or indirectly from any leakage, fire or explosion of any products stored or contained in, passing through or removed from equipment lent under this agreement, or resulting from the installation, maintenance, repair, use or condition of such equipment, and any attachments or appliances used, connected, installed or furnished therewith.

6. Quality. All products delivered to the premises by Atlantic shall be sold by Buyer under their respective trademarks and brands and shall not be adulterated, mixed or blended with any other substance. Atlantic, at any reasonable time, may enter upon the premises, inspect equipment used for storing or dispensing products purchased from Atlantic, test and take samples of such products.

7. Time. This Agreement shall be in effect from ....., 19..... to ....., 19..... or until.....gallons of motor fuel are delivered to Buyer for sale from said equipment, whichever shall last occur, and from year to year thereafter unless cancelled as hereinafter provided.

8. Termination and Cancellation. This agreement may be terminated by either party, effective at the end of the original term or of any subsequent year, by sixty (60) days' prior written notice to the other party. At any time upon breach by either party the other party may cancel this agreement effective upon written notice to the other party. Issuance or entry against Buyer or the premises of any judgment, execution, distress for rent or other process, or financial embarrassment or insolvency or involvement in bankruptcy of Buyer, shall constitute a breach of this agreement by Buyer. Any notice by Atlantic to Buyer shall be deemed to be sufficiently given if either delivered to Buyer or mailed by registered mail, postage prepaid, and addressed to Buyer at the above identified premises, whether or not received.

Upon termination or cancellation for any cause Atlantic shall have the right to enter upon the premises with or without legal process and remove the equipment or any part thereof without liability for injury or damage. Upon cancellation by Atlantic for any breach and exercise by Atlantic of its right to remove equipment Buyer shall pay to Atlantic the sum of.....Dollars ($.....) as reimbursement for the agreed upon cost of installation and removal of the equipment and improvements, or, at its option, Atlantic may leave the equipment in place and upon demand Buyer shall pay the sum of ..... Dollars ($.....) the agreed upon value of the equipment and improvements and upon payment title thereto shall pass to Buyer.

At its election Atlantic may keep the equipment in place for a reasonable time to negotiate for its sale or other disposition. In no event shall Atlantic be obligated to remove any underground equipment.

9. General Provisions. Buyer shall secure all necessary licenses and permits, and all renewals thereof, now or hereafter necessary in connection with the possession or use of the equipment or conducting business on the premises, and shall pay all taxes, imposts or charges imposed by any governmental authority incident thereto or arising therefrom. Buyer shall promptly provide Atlantic with the written consents to this agreement of the owner and of all holders of liens secured by said premises, confirming Atlantic's title to and right of removal of the equipment and shall, in the event of any subsequent sale of the premises, or subsequent attachment of lien, provide Atlantic with similar consents from such subsequent owners or lien holders. This agreement is not assignable, constitutes the entire understanding of the parties and may not be changed except by a written agreement executed by both parties.

In Witness Whereof, the parties have executed this agreement as of the day first mentioned.

Atlantic

Agreement made this.....day of.....19....., between The Atlantic Refining Company,....., a Pennsylvania Corporation, hereinafter called Atlantic, and.....hereinafter called Buyer, Witnesseth:

Sale: Atlantic agrees to sell and Buyer agrees to purchase Atlantic Automotive Lubricants herein named as ordered by Buyer estimated for each successive 12-month period at.....barrels, during the period between....., 19....., and....., 19.....

Atlantic shall not be required, without its written consent, in any one month to deliver more than one-eighth (⅛) of the estimated 12-month purchases mentioned above.

Duration: Upon the expiration of the original term, this Agreement shall continue in effect from year to year, unless terminated at the end of the original or any subsequent term by either party giving to the other, at least thirty (30) days prior written notice, Except that if Buyer makes no purchases hereunder during twelve (12) consecutive months, this Agreement hereupon shall terminate without notice by either party.

Prices: Buyer shall pay for products purchased hereunder at Atlantic's established prices therefor in effect at the time and for the place of delivery as shown in the "Atlantic Automotive Lubricants Price Schedule." A copy of the current schedule effective.....is attached to this Agreement and made a part hereof. Atlantic reserves the right to change without notice at any time during the term of this Agreement the prices and discounts specified in the "Atlantic Automotive Lubricants Price Schedule." Prices referred to, or provided for in this Agreement, do not apply to purchases by Buyer at service stations.

Terms: Cash, unless credit is established with Atlantic Credit Department. If credit is established, and during the continuance of this Agreement, in the opinion of Atlantic, the financial responsibility of Buyer becomes impaired or unsatisfactory to Atlantic, deliveries may be suspended until arrangements are made for security satisfactory to Atlantic or for the payment of cash on delivery and until any money owing to Atlantic hereunder is paid. All payments under this contract are to be made at par.

Force Majeure: Buyer shall not be obligated to accept deliveries if unable to operate his business by reason of fire, flood, war, civil commotion, strikes, blockade or other causes beyond his control. Atlantic shall not be responsible for any loss or damage resulting from any delay or failure in delivery of any product due to fire, flood, storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, war, military operations, national emergency, civil commotion, strikes, or other differences with workmen or unions, or from any delay or failure in delivery when the supplies of Atlantic, or the facilities of production, manufacture, transportation or distribution which otherwise would be available to Atlantic, are impaired by causes beyond Atlantic's control or by the order, requisition, request or recommendation of any governmental agency or acting governmental authority, or delay or failure due to any cause beyond Atlantic's control, similar or dissimilar to any such causes. When such cause or causes exist, Atlantic shall have the right in its sole discretion to restrict or cease deliveries hereunder.

Assignment: This Agreement shall not be assigned or transferred by Buyer, in whole or in part, without the written consent of Atlantic.

General: This Agreement constitutes the full understanding between the parties hereto with reference to the Atlantic's compliance therewit or by governmental proratio regulation or priority; or from any other subject matter hereof. Neither party shall claim any amendment, modification, extension or release from any provision hereof by mutual agreement, acknowledgment, acceptance of purchase-order forms, or otherwise, unless the same is in writing, signed by the other party, and specifically stating it is an amendment or extension of this Agreement.

Failure of Atlantic to deliver in the packages ordered shall not be considered a breach of this Agreement.

Atlantic shall not be responsible under any circumstances for any consequential damages or injuries.

All products when shipped shall be uniform in quality and up to Atlantic's standards.

This Agreement cancels and supersedes as of the beginning of the 12-month period set forth above, all former Atlantic Automotive Lubricant Agreements now in effect between the parties.

2122 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 93.

COMMISSION AGREEMENT

This Agreement made this day of 1951 between The Atlantic Refining Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, herein called "Atlantic" and of herein called "Dealer",

Witnesseth

That in consideration of the promises of the parties hereto it is mutually covenanted and agreed as follows:

1. The Atlantic agrees to deliver to the Dealer at the Atlantic service station leased to Dealer at within days after the date of this Agreement, upon consignment, for sale by the Dealer, gallons of gasoline. During each week thereafter the Atlantic will deliver to the Dealer at said service station that number of gallons of gasoline which when added to the number of gallons then in the Dealer's tanks shall equal gallons, thus replacing the gasoline sold by the Dealer since the preceding delivery.

2. At the time of each weekly delivery the Dealer will pay to the Atlantic an amount of money equal to the number of gallons then delivered, multiplied by the price per gallon then posted at the Dealer's service station, less a commission of on the number of gallons delivered, plus rent equal to for each gallon delivered. (The number of gallons delivered will equal the number of gallons sold since the preceding delivery.)

2124 3. At the end of each month the Atlantic will determine the number of gallons, exclusive of the first delivery, delivered by the Atlantic to the Dealer during that month. That number shall be multiplied by 3¢. If the result is less than $216.00, the Atlantic shall forthwith pay to the Dealer the difference between $216.00 and the result.

4. The Atlantic will fix the service station price which the Dealer will post and at which the Dealer will sell the gasoline consigned by the Atlantic to the Dealer hereunder.

5. The Atlantic shall have a right to enter upon the Dealer's premises at any time for the purpose of determining the number of gallons of Atlantic's gasoline then on hand.

6. If at the time of any weekly delivery when a weekly payment is due from the Dealer to the Atlantic the Dealer fails to pay the amount then due the Atlantic hereunder, the Atlantic may forthwith terminate this Agreement and may take possession of and title to a sufficient amount of personal property belonging to the Dealer, located on said premises, which at the invoice price thereof to the Dealer will equal the amount then due from the Dealer to the Atlantic, and the Atlantic shall apply said invoice price of said personal property in reduction of the indebtedness of the Dealer to the Atlantic.

7. The term of this Agreement is one year from the date hereof; provided, however, that either party may terminate this Agreement on thirty days' written notice delivered to the other party, and this Agreement shall terminate on the 30th day following the delivery of such written notice. Written notice may be delivered by depositing the same in the United States registered mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the Atlantic at and to the Dealer at said service station.

8. This Agreement will terminate prior to the expiration of the term hereof if that certain lease of said service station from the Atlantic to the Dealer terminates prior to the expiration of the term of this Agreement.

2126 9. Except as herein specified, the Atlantic shall have no control whatsoever over the operation of said service station by the Dealer, the purchase and sale of other commodities by the Dealer, the number or nature of employees employed by the Dealer, or otherwise.

Executed the day and year first above written.

COMMISSION DEALER AGREEMENT

This Agreement made as of the day of , 195 , between The Atlantic Refining Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, herein called "Atlantic" and of herein called "Dealer",

Witnesseth:

That in consideration of the obligations of the parties hereto it is mutually agreed as follows:

1. Within ten (10) days after the date of this Agreement Atlantic shall furnish upon consignment to Dealer in tanks at the service station located at gallons of Atlantic gasoline (hereinafter referred to as "Consignment Inventory"), for sale by Dealer.

2. From time to time thereafter Atlantic shall deliver to Dealer into said tanks at said service station a quantity of gasoline which, when added to that then in the tanks, shall equal said Consignment Inventory. At the time of each delivery under this Paragraph 2 Dealer shall pay to Atlantic an amount of money equal to the number of gallons of gasoline then delivered multiplied by the price per gallon in effect at the time and place of delivery, as established by Atlantic under Paragraph 4 hereof, less a commission based upon the difference between the service station price and the Dealer Tank Wagon price in effect at the time and for the place of delivery, to be determined and applied in accordance with the following schedule:

1.5 or less	.0	1.5

3. If, in any calendar month, Dealer's commission hereunder, based on the above schedule in Paragraph 2, is less than Two Hundred and Sixteen Dollars ($216.00) excluding commission credited to the Dealer's rent account, Atlantic, by the twentieth day of the following month, shall pay to Dealer the difference between said amount and the commission already received for that month by Dealer. If this Agreement is in effect for a portion of any calendar month the amount of Two Hundred and Sixteen Dollars ($216.00) shall be adjusted ratably for such month to reflect the number of days that this Agreement is in effect during such month.

4. Atlantic shall establish the service station price which Dealer shall post and at which Dealer shall sell the gasoline consigned by Atlantic to Dealer hereunder.

5. Atlantic shall have the right to enter upon the premises at the above location at any time for the purpose 2132 of determining the number of gallons of Atlantic gasoline consigned hereunder then on hand.

6. Title to gasoline delivered from time to time to Dealer to replenish or augment the original Consignment Inventory shall not pass to Dealer, but it shall be considered as though said gasoline had been part of the original Consignment Inventory.

7. If Dealer is lessee from Atlantic of the above service station under a lease on Atlantic's B-3191 form, during the continuance of this Agreement, Atlantic shall reimburse Dealer for Dealer's expenditures covering charges for sewerage, water, gas and electricity consumed or used by Dealer at said service station and all expense of heating same. Atlantic shall also reimburse Dealer for expenditures covering any municipal licenses or charges based on the number of gasoline dispensing pumps on said service station and the storage of gasoline therein. In addition, during the continuance of this Agreement, paragraph 2 of said B-3191 lease and any amendment or modification thereof now in effect shall be suspended and in lieu thereof the following provision shall be in effect:

"2—Lessee shall pay to Atlantic rental at the rate of one and one-half cents (1½¢) per gallon on each gallon of gasoline delivered to said leased premises required to replenish the Consignment Inventory under lessee's then current Commission Dealer Agreement."

Upon termination of this Agreement the rental as provided for in said suspended paragraph 2 shall become reinstated, subject to any amendment or modification of said paragraph 2 which was in effect on the date hereof.

8. This Agreement may be terminated by either party upon giving thirty days' notice to the other party. Any notice from one party to the other shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been given if sent by registered mail addressed to Atlantic at 260 South Broad St., Philadelphia 1, Pennsylvania and to Dealer at the leased premises, subject to the right of either party to designate in writing a new address to which notices may be sent.

9. Notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 8 hereof, if the service station to which deliveries are made is leased by Dealer from Atlantic and if such lease is terminated, this Agreement shall terminate concurrently with said lease.

2134 10. Upon termination of this Agreement, Dealer shall account to Atlantic for the consigned gasoline as follows:

(a) Gasoline on hand shall be returned to Atlantic; or Dealer, at Dealer's option, shall purchase such gasoline at Atlantic's prevailing Dealer-Tank Wagon price applicable at that location on date of termination.

(b) The difference between Dealer's "Consignment Inventory" and the quantity of gasoline on hand on date of termination shall be settled for as provided in Paragraph 2 hereof on the basis of the service station price established by Atlantic and effective on date of termination.

11. Except as herein specified, Atlantic shall have no control whatsoever over the operation of said service station by Dealer, the purchase and sale of other commodities by Dealer, the number or nature of employees employed by Dealer, or otherwise.

Executed as of the day and year first above written.

2136 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 95A-C.

Authorized Distributor's Agreement.

This Agreement made this ..... day of ....., 195..., between The Atlantic Refining Company, ..., a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, hereinafter called Atlantic, and ..... of ....., County of ..... State of ....., hereinafter called Buyer,

Whereas Atlantic is a marketer of Atlantic branded petroleum products, and

Whereas Buyer is desirous of obtaining the privilege of acting as an authorized distributor for Atlantic of such petroleum products,

Wittnesseth:

Product and Quantity. Atlantic agrees to sell and Buyer agrees to purchase, ... gallons of Atlantic White Flash and ..... gallons of Atlantic Hi-Arc and such additional quantities of each product as Buyer shall order from time to time, provided that Atlantic shall not be required to deliver in any one year more than ..... gallons of Atlantic White Flash or more than ..... gallons of Atlantic Hi-Arc.

Deliveries Deliveries hereunder shall be made in tank car or truck transport in approximate equal monthly quantities to the following bulk plant or plants of Buyer:

Resale In Authorized Territory In consideration of Atlantic's granting to Buyer the privilege of acting as an authorized distributor for Atlantic in and about the territory described below, Buyer's purchases under this agreement shall be only for resale to consumers and to regularly established dealers by tank truck delivery. Buyer shall diligently further the sale of Atlantic's products during the period this agreement is effective.

Period Of Time This agreement shall extend from ..... and from year to year thereafter unless terminated by either party at the end of the original term or at the end of any subsequent contract year by giving at least ninety (90) days prior written notice to the other party.

Price The price shall be determined as follows:

2137 Freight Charges When shipments are made "freight collect", allowance for freight will be made on the face of the invoice.

Terms of Payment

If credit is established, and during the continuance of this agreement, in the opinion of Atlantic, the financial responsibility of Buyer becomes impaired or unsatisfactory to Atlantic, deliveries may be suspended until arrangements are made for security satisfactory to Atlantic or for the payment of cash on delivery and until any money owing to Atlantic hereunder is paid. All payments under this agreement are to be made at par.

Shipments Buyer shall give Atlantic shipping instructions at least ten (10) days prior to the time shipments are desired, and when possible inform Atlantic the quantity desired for any one month thirty (30) days before the first day thereof.

Tank cars or truck transports shipped hereunder are not to be diverted or reconsigned without written permission of Atlantic first obtained.

Taxes Any tax or other charge now or hereafter imposed by law, domestic or foreign, on any product herein sold, or on the production, manufacture, sale, transportation or delivery thereof, or on this agreement, which Atlantic is required to pay or collect, shall be added to the price herein provided for and paid by Buyer.

2138 Unloading Buyer promptly shall receive shipments or unload the transportation facilities employed, return empty cars as instructed and pay demurrage, tank car rental and all other charges or damages for delay in receipt or unloading.

Tetraethyl Lead Regulations Buyer shall distribute and sell any tetraethyl lead treated gasoline purchased under this agreement in accordance with the rules and regulations now or hereafter issued by Atlantic's suppliers of tetraethyl lead, United States Public Health Service or any governmental agency having jurisdiction thereof, and Buyer at all times shall keep any purchaser for resale of said gasoline informed of all said rules and regulations, and shall require that said purchaser for resale comply with said rules and regulations and that he inform all who purchase from him for resale of said rules and regulations. Buyer shall afford medical and mechanical representatives of such suppliers every reasonable facility to inspect any apparatus, equipment or other property used by Buyer in connection with the distribution and sale of said treated gasoline; and Buyer shall require that each purchaser for resale afford similar facilities for medical and mechanical inspection by such suppliers.

Force Majeure Buyer shall not be obligated to accept deliveries if unable to operate Buyer's business by reason of fire, flood, war, civil commotion, strikes, blockade or causes beyond Buyer's control. Atlantic shall not be responsible for any loss or damage resulting from any delay or failure in delivery due to fire, flood, storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, war, military operations, national emergency, civil commotion, strikes or any other difference with workmen or unions, or from any delay or failure in delivery when the supplies of Atlantic, or the facilities of production, manufacture, transportation or distribution which otherwise would be available to Atlantic, are impaired by causes beyond Atlantic's control or by the order, requisition or request of any governmental agency or acting governmental authority, or Atlantic's compliance therewith, or by governmental proration or regulation, or from any other delay or failure due to any cause beyond Atlantic's control, similar or dissimilar to any such causes. When such cause or causes exist, Atlantic shall have the right in Atlantic's sole discretion to restrict or cease deliveries hereunder.

Claims No claim of Buyer on account of shortage in quantity or defect in quality of the products delivered hereunder or for any other cause shall be allowed unless Buyer immediately upon receipt of the shipment and at least twenty-four (24) hours before the unloading thereof notifies Atlantic in writing or by telegram addressed to Atlantic at 260 South Broad Street, Philadelphia 1, Pa., of such claim and extends to Atlantic the opportunity of making an investigation.

Advertising Atlantic shall loan to Buyer, under separate bailment agreement, the globes or lenses required for gasoline dispensing equipment used by Buyer or Buyer's customers in the distribution of such products purchased from Atlantic. Atlantic, at Atlantic's option, may also loan to Buyer, under separate bailment agreement, Atlantic's approved advertising signs. Buyer shall supply all other dispensing equipment and advertising signs.

Trade Marks Atlantic grants to Buyer during the period of this agreement the right to use and display Atlantic's trade mark or marks, covering the products purchased from Atlantic, but such right or privilege shall cease at the termination of this agreement.

Conflicting Laws Or Regulations This agreement contemplates full compliance with all laws, ordinances, and regulations, from whatever authority the same may emanate, having application to the parties hereto or subject matter hereof; and in the event this agreement, or any procedure or action therein imposed upon either party hereto, shall at any time appear to be determined to be in conflict with any legal requirements imposed by any such authority, then this agreement shall immediately become inoperative and ineffective with respect thereto; and in any such event either party hereto shall have the right to cancel this agreement, subject to the obligation of Buyer to settle any unpaid balances due hereunder; and any obligation of Atlantic to make further deliveries hereunder shall terminate on the date of such cancellation.

Default Except for causes referred to above under the title "Force Majeure" a default under this agreement shall occur upon the happening of any of the following events: (a) failure of Atlantic to make deliveries to Buyer as herein stated; (b) failure of Buyer to order, accept or pay promptly for material in accordance with the provisions hereof; and (c) any adulteration or misrepresentation by Buyer of the product or products of Atlantic.

Liquidated Damages In the event of any default, the party not in default may terminate this agreement by written notice to the other party given at any time within ten (10) days after knowledge of the existence of such default. If this agreement is so terminated Buyer shall be obligated to settle any unpaid balances due hereunder and the party in default shall be obligated to pay to the party so terminating the sum of one cent (1¢) for each gallon of product which for any reason is not delivered, or accepted, as provided herein up to the minimum quantities specified. Such sum shall be deemed full liquidated damages for all losses resulting from such default. Waiver of any one or more defaults hereunder shall not preclude either party from exercising the right to terminate this agreement by reason of any subsequent default.

Sale of Business Should Buyer at any time during the period of this agreement desire to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of Buyer's petroleum business, or any substantial part thereof, Buyer shall give written notice to Atlantic of the price and terms of any offer to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire said business or part thereof, and Atlantic shall have the first option to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire such business or part thereof at the price and upon the terms of each such offer. Such option shall extend for a period of sixty (60) days following receipt of such notice by Atlantic, and if not exercised within said period it shall thereupon lapse. Any such sale, lease or other disposition by Buyer or failure of Atlantic to exercise any option hereunder shall not prejudice Atlantic's rights hereunder, and this agreement shall be and remain in full force and effect until its termination date.

Assignability This agreement shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other party.

Constitutes Whole Agreement This instrument embodies the whole agreement between the parties and there are no oral promises or other understandings or conditions inducing its execution or qualifying its terms.

In Witness Whereof, the parties have caused these presents to be duly executed in duplicate the day and year above written.

2140 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 95D-F.

Atlantic Authorized Distributor's Agreement

This Agreement made this day of , 195 , between The Atlantic Refining Company, , a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, hereinafter called Atlantic, and of , County of State of , hereinafter called Buyer,

Witnesseth:

Whereas Atlantic is a marketer of Atlantic branded petroleum products, and

Whereas Buyer is desirous of obtaining the privilege of acting as an authorized distributor for Atlantic of such petroleum products,

Product and Quantity Atlantic agrees to sell and Buyer agrees to purchase, gallons of Atlantic Gasoline and gallons of Atlantic Premium Gasoline and such additional quantities of each product as Buyer shall order from time to time, provided that Atlantic shall not be required to deliver in any one year more than gallons of Atlantic Gasoline or more than gallons of Atlantic Premium Gasoline.

Deliveries—Deliveries hereunder shall be made in tank car or truck transport in approximately equal monthly quantities to the following bulk plant or plants of Buyer:

Resale In Authorized Territory—In consideration of Atlantic's granting to Buyer the privilege of acting as an authorized distributor for Atlantic in and about the territory described below, Buyer's purchases under this agreement shall be only for resale to consumers and to regularly established dealers by tank truck delivery. Buyer shall diligently further the sale of Atlantic's products during the period this agreement is effective.

Period of Time—This agreement shall extend from and from year to year thereafter unless terminated by either party at the end of the original term or at the end of any subsequent contract year by giving at least ninety (90) days prior written notice to the other party.

Price—The price shall be determined as follows:

Credit Card Privilege—Atlantic will accept from Buyer assignment of accounts which result from retail credit sales made by Buyer at its own service station retail outlets or by service station Dealers purchasing Atlantic petroleum products from Buyer and will pay or credit Buyer the amount thereof, subject to the terms and conditions outlined by Atlantic from time to time. This arrangement will continue so long as Buyer continues to handle Atlantic petroleum products, unless terminated by either party giving to the other not less than forty-eight (48) hours advance written notice of termination.

Freight Charges—When shipments are made "freight collect", allowance for freight will be made on the face of the invoice.

Terms of Payment

If credit is established, and during the continuance of this agreement, in the opinion of Atlantic, the financial responsibility of Buyer becomes impaired or unsatisfactory to Atlantic, deliveries may be suspended until arrangements are made for security satisfactory to Atlantic or for the payment of cash on delivery and until any money owing to Atlantic hereunder is paid. All payments under this agreement are to be made at par.

Shipments—Buyer shall give Atlantic shipping instructions at least ten (10) days prior to the time shipments are desired, and when possible inform Atlantic the quantity desired for any one month thirty (30) days before the first day thereof.

Tank cars or truck transports shipped hereunder are not to be diverted or reconsigned without written permission of Atlantic first obtained.

Taxes—Any tax or other charge now or hereafter imposed by law, domestic or foreign, on any product herein sold, or on the production, manufacture, sale, transportation or delivery thereof, or on this agreement, which Atlantic is required to pay or collect, shall be added to the price herein provided for and paid by Buyer.

2141 Unloading—Buyer promptly shall receive shipments or unload the transportation facilities employed, return empty cars as instructed and pay demurrage, tank car rental and all other charges or damages for delay in receipt or unloading.

Tetraethyl Lead Regulations—Buyer shall distribute and sell any tetraethyl lead treated gasoline purchased under this agreement in accordance with the rules and regulations now or hereafter issued by Atlantic's supplies of tetraethyl lead, United States Public Health Service or any governmental agency having jurisdiction thereof, and Buyer at all times shall keep any purchaser for resale of said gasoline informed of all said rules and regulations, and shall require that said purchaser for resale comply with said rules and regulations and that he inform all who purchase from him for resale of said rules and regulations. Buyer shall afford medical and mechanical representatives of such suppliers every reasonable facility to inspect any apparatus, equipment or other property used by Buyer in connection with the distribution and sale of said treated gasoline; and Buyer shall require that each purchaser for resale afford similar facilities for medical and mechanical inspection by such suppliers.

Force Majeure—Buyer shall not be obligated to accept deliveries if unable to operate Buyer's business by reason of fire, flood, war, civil commotion, strikes, blockade or causes beyond Buyer's control. Atlantic shall not be responsible for any loss or damage resulting from any delay or failure in delivery due to fire, flood, storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, war, military operations, national emergency, civil commotion, strikes or any other difference with workmen or unions, or from any delay or failure in delivery when the supplies of Atlantic, or the facilities of production, manufacture, transportation or distribution which otherwise would be available to Atlantic, are impaired by causes beyond Atlantic's control or by the order, requisition or request of any governmental agency or acting governmental authority, or Atlantic's compliance therewith, or by governmental proration or regulation, or from any other delay or failure due to any cause beyond Atlantic's control, similar or dissimilar to any such causes. When such cause or causes exist, Atlantic shall have the right in Atlantic's sole discretion to restrict or cease deliveries hereunder.

Claims—No claim of Buyer on account of shortage of quantity or defect in quality of the products delivered hereunder or for any other causea shall be allowed unless Buyer immediately upon receipt of the shipment notifies Atlantic of such claim, with subsequent confirmation in writing, and extends to Atlantic the opportunity of making an investigation.

Advertising—Atlantic shall loan to Buyer, under separate bailment agreement, the globes or lenses required for gasoline dispensing equipment used by Buyer or Buyer's customers in the distribution of such products purchased from Atlantic. Atlantic, at Atlantic's option, may also loan to Buyer, under separate bailment agreement, Atlantic's approved advertising signs. Buyer shall supply all other dispensing equipment and advertising signs.

Trade Marks—Atlantic grants to Buyer during the term of this agreement the right to use and display Atlantic's trade mark or trade marks, covering the products purchased from Atlantic, but such right and privilege shall cease at the termination of this agreement and Buyer shall discontinue the use and display of Atlantic's trade mark or trade marks.

Conflicting Laws or Regulations—This agreement contemplates full compliance with all laws, ordinances, and regulations, from whatever authority the same may emanate, having application to the parties hereto or subject matter hereof; and in the event this agreement, or any procedure or action therein imposed upon either party hereto, shall at any time appear or be determined to be in conflict with any legal requirements imposed by any such authority, then this agreement shall immediately become inoperative and ineffective with respect thereto; and in any such event either party hereto shall have the right to cancel this agreement, subject to the obligation of Buyer to settle any unpaid balances due hereunder; and any obligation of Atlantic to make further deliveries hereunder shall terminate on the date of such cancellation.

Default—Except for causes referred to above under the title "Force Majeure" a default under this agreement shall occur upon the happening of any of the following events: (a) failure of Atlantic to make deliveries to Buyer as herein stated; (b) failure of Buyer to order, accept or pay promptly for material in accordance with the provisions hereof; and (c) any adulteration or misrepresentation by Buyer of the product or products of Atlantic.

Liquidated Damages—In the event of any default, the party not in default may terminate this agreement by written notice to the other party given at any time within ten (10) days after knowledge of the existence of such default. If this agreement is so terminated Buyer shall be obligated to settle any unpaid balances due here under and the party in default shall be obligated to pay to the party so terminating the sum of one cent (1c) for each gallon of product which for any reason is not delivered, or accepted, as provided herein up to the minimum quantities specified. Such sum shall be deemed full liquidated damages for all losses resulting from such default. Waiver of any one or more defaults hereunder shall not preclude either party from exercising the right to terminate this agreement by reason of any subsequent default.

Sale of Business—Should Buyer at any time during the period of this agreement desire to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of Buyer's petroleum business, or any substantial part thereof, Buyer shall give written notice to Atlantic of the price and terms of any offer to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire said business or part thereof, and Atlantic shall have the first option to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire such business or part thereof at the price and upon the terms of each such offer. Such option shall extend for a period of sixty (60) days following receipt of such notice by Atlantic, and if not exercised within said period it shall thereupon lapse. Any such sale, lease or other disposition by Buyer or failure of Atlantic to exercise any option hereunder shall not prejudice Atlantic's rights hereunder, and this agreement shall be and remain in full force and effect until its termination date.

Constitutes Whole Agreement—This instrument embodies the whole agreement between the parties and there are no oral promises or other understandings or conditions inducing its execution or qualifying its terms.

2148 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 98A-G.

This Agreement made as of this ..... day of ..... 19....., by and between The Atlantic Refining Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, hereinafter called "Atlantic", and ..... of ....., hereinafter called "Distributor".

Witnesseth:

1. Atlantic hereby constitutes Distributor a representative solely for the purpose of the sale, distribution and marketing of petroleum products, namely, gasoline, furnace oil, kerosene, motor oil and greases, of Atlantic upon the terms and conditions and within the territory hereinafter designated.

2. Distributor shall offer for sale and make sales of said products only in the vicinity of Lakewood, New Jersey.

3. Atlantic will ship to Distributor on consignment petroleum products, including gasoline, furnace oil, kerosene, motor oil and greases, which shall hereinafter be referred to as "consigned merchandise" for sale by Distributor in the territory covered by this agreement. All such consigned merchandise shall be received by Distributor and stored at the bulk plant which has been provided by Atlantic at Lakewood, New Jersey, and shall at all times remain the property of Atlantic until sold by Distributor. All tanks, drums or containers at said bulk and used for the storage of said consigned merchandise, shall always be marked so as to show that the contents thereof are the sole property of Atlantic. Distributor shall provide and pay for the necessary employees to properly handle, protect and safeguard the property of Atlantic and shall be liable for all losses, shortages or thefts of said property from said bulk plant.

2150 4. With respect to all persons at any time employed by, or on the payroll of Distributor, or performing any work for or on behalf of Distributor, or in connection with or arising out of the business thereof, Distributor agrees to and does hereby accept full and exclusive liability for the payment of any and all contributions or taxes for unemployment insurance or old age retirement benefits, pensions, or annuities, now or hereafter imposed by the government of the United States, or any State or political sub-divisions thereof, whether the same be measured by the wages, salaries or other remuneration paid to such persons, or the number of such persons, or otherwise; it being understood that no such persons shall be deemed the employees of Atlantic.

5. Distributor shall sell Atlantic's products at Atlantic's regular marketing prices as the same shall be announced from time to time by Atlantic to the Distributor and posted at the aforesaid bulk plant. Distributor shall be governed in all respects by the general marketing policy of Atlantic in respect to ~~whole~~ wholesale prices, discounts and other matters pertaining to price structure of Atlantic's products marketed by Atlantic.

6. Upon the sale by Distributor of any of the consigned merchandise, deliveries thereof shall be made by Distributor from the supply stored at said bulk plant.

7. Distributor, at all times, shall provide and maintain an adequate number of salesmen and other employees to carry on properly the business herein provided for and shall apply himself energetically to the management and direction of the sales organization employed by him hereunder and to the sale of Atlantic's products and building up of Atlantic's business in said territory, and, at all times, shall maintain the prestige of Atlantic for fair dealings and honorable business methods.

2151 8. Distributor shall pay all salaries and wages of employees necessary to carry on said business and shall pay all other costs and expenses of said business, except those herein specifically required to be paid by Atlantic. Distributor shall provide and maintain suitable motor trucks for delivery of the aforesaid consigned merchandise.

9. Atlantic shall supply Distributor with equipment for dispensing gasoline and motor oils. Said equipment may be loaned to Distributor's customers only with the approval of Atlantic and under Atlantic's standard forms of agreement. Atlantic shall be the sole judge of the amount, kind or character of equipment to be furnished to Distributor.

10. Distributor shall be governed in granting credit to Distributor's customers by the credit policy of Atlantic and shall collect daily all money due for goods sold to Distributor's customers and make deposits daily of the money collected for Atlantic's account in a depository designated by Atlantic. The account of said depository shall be carried in Atlantic's name and subject to withdrawal only by Atlantic.

11. Distributor shall collect with due diligence all accounts from customers whose credit has been approved by Atlantic. If said accounts are not collected by Distributor and remitted to Atlantic within 90 days from the date of the sale of the products covered by such account, Distributor shall refund to Atlantic any commission or commissions paid Distributor on said accounts. The account of any customer to whom credit has been given by Distributor beyond the line of credit established for said customer by Atlantic, and the account of any customer to whom Atlantic has refused to extend any credit are to be charged to Distributor and the amounts thereof shall be deducted from any commissions due Distributor by Atlantic.

2153 12. Atlantic will allow and pay to Distributor commission on the sale and delivery of the products herein mentioned as follows:

Atlantic Hi-Arc Gasoline—1¼¢ per gallon
Atlantic White Flash Gasoline—1¼¢ per gallon
Atlantic Rayolight Oil (Kerosene)—1¼¢ per gallon
Atlantic Furnace Oil—1¼¢ per gallon
Atlantic Motor Oils—20% of the selling price thereof (exclusive of taxes) as established under the provisions of Paragraph 5.
Atlantic Package Goods—20% of the selling price thereof (exclusive of taxes) as established under the provisions of Paragraph 5.

These commissions are payable only upon the consigned merchandise sold by Distributor through the aforesaid bulk plant, and no commissions shall be payable upon any sales of gasoline, furnace oil, kerosene, motor oil and greases that may be made by Atlantic in tank car quantities or otherwise. All commissions due hereunder shall be paid on or before the 15th day of each month for business done during the preceding month, less any charges against same herein authorized.

13. With respect to any service or filling stations operated by Distributor within the territory covered by this agreement for the purpose of selling at retail products of Atlantic, Distributor shall make such withdrawals from the supply or stock of consigned merchandise as may be necessary for Distributor's said retail service station business, and shall pay for the consigned merchandise so withdrawn in cash at time of delivery at Atlantic's published wholesale price. Distributor shall be allowed and paid the same commission on all such consigned merchandise so withdrawn as Atlantic allows Distributor on like consigned merchandise sold to Distributor's customers.

14. Atlantic shall pay all Federal, State or other taxes based on ownership of property and levied or assessed against the property of Atlantic used by Distributor

2155 and any license fees required by Federal, State or other laws or ordinances for carrying on the wholesale business contemplated by this agreement. Distributor shall pay all taxes or license fees imposed upon the use and operation of Atlantic's property in Distributor's retail business, as well as for such taxes and license fees or others imposed upon Distributor for carrying on Distributor's retail business and upon property owned or furnished by Distributor for either the wholesale or retail business.

15. Distributor shall not sell, offer for sale or handle within the territory herein provided for, in any manner, petroleum products, derivatives therefrom, or substitutes therefor, except those manufactured or offered for sale by Atlantic.

16. Distributor shall keep proper and adequate records of all receipts of consigned merchandise, of all sales made by Distributor and of all consigned merchandise withdrawn from said bulk plant, which said records shall be at all times open to the inspection of Atlantic.

17. Atlantic shall supply and furnish Distributor with the products necessary to carry on the business herein provided for, unless prevented by any cause or causes beyond the reasonable control of Atlantic.

18. If remittances are not made promptly for all consigned merchandise withdrawn by Distributor, or if, in the sole judgment of Atlantic, Distributor's financial responsibility is unsatisfactory or Distributor displays lack of business energy in carrying on the business herein provided for or Distributor violates or fails to comply with any of the terms and conditions of this agreement, Atlantic, at Atlantic's sole option, forthwith may cancel and terminate this agreement at any time, and Atlantic at once shall be entitled to receive back, and Distributor shall deliver to Atlantic free of any liens, cost or expense at said 2157 bulk plant, all of Atlantic's property, including all said consigned merchandise.

19. This agreement or any interests therein may not be assigned or in any wise transferred by Distributor without written consent of Atlantic.

20. Failure of Atlantic to enforce any of the provisions hereof or to exercise any option or to require any performance by Distributor of such provisions herein contained shall in no wise be construed as a waiver of such provisions or in any way affect the validity of this agreement or any part thereof or Atlantic's right to enforce thereafter each and every provision.

21. Distributor shall not incur any indebtedness or assume any liability in the name of Atlantic or for Atlantic's account without first having received the written consent of Atlantic to incur such indebtedness, or liability.

22. Distributor hereby agrees to provide at Distributor's own expense Workmen's Compensation Insurance for Distributor's employees. Distributor shall indemnify and save harmless Atlantic in and from all suits, losses, claims, liability or damage which may arise out of any injuries to Distributor, Distributor's employees, and any persons or property for or by reason of the violation of any ordinances, laws or regulations or by reason of or resulting from or in any incident to the negligent acts or omissions of Distributor, Distributor's employees or servants in connection with the operation of the business herein contemplated, or in connection with the trucks and equipment used or to be used in connection herewith or arising in any manner in connection with the sale, distribution or marketing of consigned merchandise under this agreement.

2159 23. Distributor shall furnish Atlantic, at Distributor's expense, with bond or bonds acceptable to Atlantic, and for such an amount as Atlantic from time to time may consider necessary and adequate for the faithful performance by Distributor of the terms and conditions of this contract.

24. This agreement, unless sooner terminated as provided in Paragraph 18 hereof, shall continue in full force and effect from ....., 19..... until terminated by either party giving to the other party sixty (60) days' written notice of intention to terminate the agreement. 2161 COMMISSION EXHIBIT No. 98H-K

Commission Distributor Consignment Agreement

First: The Atlantic refining Company, hereinafter called "Consignor", and .....of....., hereinafter called "Consignee", desiring to arrange for the sale and distribution of petroleum products at ..... and vicinity, agree as follows:

Second: Consignor shall deliver on consignment to Consignee stocks of gasoline at the bulk station operated by Consignee at above address and will establish the prices at which said products are to be sold by Consignee.

Third: Consignee shall have charge of said stocks, take inventories of same as required by Consignor, and be responsible for all stocks and containers delivered to him by consignor.

Fourth: Consigned stocks shall remain the property of Consignor until sold in the regular course of business, but Consignee shall be responsible for all shortages of bulk stock in excess of one half of one per cent (½%) of the monthly throughput.

Fifth: Authorized representatives of Consignor may inventory and inspect Consignor's property, stocks, goods and merchandise of whatever kind at any time during business hours.

Sixth: Consignee shall sell and deliver in a diligent efficient and business like manner the aforementioned products, in accordance with Consignor's Direct Marketing policies, now in effect and as changed from time to time to the accounts designated by Consignor in the geographical territory described in the attached map. Consignee shall be responsible for all said products delivered, and settle with Consignor each day of said products delivered by him that day.

Seventh: All of said products shall be sold by Consignee in strict accordance with Consignor's established prices in effect at time and place of delivery for dealers and consumers in the territory covered by this Agreement. Consignee shall remit to Consignor cash for all deliveries of consigned products made by him except in the case of deliveries to customers whose credit has been previously approved in writing by Consignor; credit deliveries 2162 shall be at prices and upon terms specified in writing by Consignor.

Eighth: Consignee shall transmit daily to Consignor's office at ....., on such forms as required by Consignor, written statements, showing in detail all sales and deliveries of said products made by him and shall remit daily to Consignor all moneys received by him from the sale of said products, together with signed receipts for both cash and credit sales.

Ninth: As soon as practical after the first day of each month, Consignor shall render a written statement to Consignee showing sales and deliveries during the preceding month, as reported by Consignee, and shall premit to Consignee after deducting any amounts due the Consignor hereunder the commissions earned on such sales and deliveries at the following rates:

Atlantic Gasoline —One & Six-tenths cents (1.6¢) per gallon

Atlantic Premium Gasoline—One & Six-tenths cents (1.6¢) per gallon

When deliveries of Gasoline are made to dealers in an area in which the price to dealers established by Consignor is below Consignor's posted zone tank wagon price for that area, or when deliveries of Gasoline are made to consumers under contract with Consignor, at prices below Consignor's posted commercial tank wagon price for the products involved at time and place of delivery, the commission payable will be as follows:

Up to and including 1.00¢ below Consignor's posted zone tank wagon price at time and place of delivery .....1.60¢ per gallon

When such prices go below this level, Consignor will share this decline half and half with Consignee to the minimum commission of 1.10¢.

In no event shall Consignee receive less than $2.00 per delivery to consumers.

Consignor in consideration for use of Consignee's storage facilities will pay the Consignee an additional commission of one quarter of a cent (.25¢) over and above the commission stated herein on each gallon of gasoline delivered by the Consignee from said storage facilities.

Tenth: Consignee shall have entire charge of the management and operation of his business; shall furnish and maintain all necessary buildings, improvements, storage and handling equipment and tools; shall furnish, 2163 maintain and operate his delivery equipment; shall have such equipment painted in conformance with Consignor's policy; and shall supply Consignor with gauge sheets properly calibrated for each truck loading at Atlantic Plants or Terminals that do not have printing meters at loading racks.

Eleventh: Consignee shall furnish all his own helpers and employees, and shall pay all expenses, labor, contributions, assessments, taxes, fees, licenses and other costs of like nature arising out of Consignee's business and upon his property, and Consignor shall in no event have any liability for the negligence of Consignee, or his employees, in conducting said business.

Twelfth: Consignor will buy from Consignee at prices agreed upon by the parties any and all Gasoline dispensing equipment that he may have installed at his own expense at locations of accounts to whom Consignee delivers gasoline hereunder, and will supply, maintain, and replace as needed all equipment for dispensing gasoline required by said accounts in accordance with Consignor's existing equipment program for Commission Distributors.

Thirteenth: Consignee may loan equipment to customers only with approval of Consignor and under Consignor's standard form of agreement.

Fourteenth: Consignee shall collect from customers and return to Consignor as directed all returnable containers without additional compensation, which service shall be included in the commissions specified in this agreement.

Fifteenth: Consignee agrees that he will procure and maintain workmen's compensation insurance and public liability insurance covering all equipment used by him in the operation of said business. Said public liability insurance shall carry liability of not less than $25,000.00 for one (1) person and $50,000.00 for one (1) accident, and a minimum of $5,000.00 property damage.

Satisfactory evidence of the existence of such insurance shall be furnished Consignor.

Sixteenth: It is expressly agreed and stipulated that neither Consignee nor the employees of Consignee shall be deemed or construed to be employees of Consignor.

Seventeenth: It is expressly agreed that Consignor shall have the right through salesmen, agents, drivers, or representatives to solicit business and make deliveries and 2164 sales of its products in any territory, and that Consignee shall not be entitled to any commission on sales and deliveries of Gasolines made by other than himself or his employees.

Eighteenth: This Agreement shall extend from..... to..... However, should Consignee fail to settle for any Gasolines delivered to him by Consignor as provided for in this Agreement, Consignor may immediately cancel this Agreement or suspend deliveries until settlement is made. Upon termination of this Agreement for any reason, Consignee shall delivery to Consignor all property, books and records in his possession or under his control by reason of this Agreement.

Nineteenth: If Consignee dies, the Agreement shall terminate automatically. If Consignee becomes involved in any insolvency or bankruptcy proceeding, or executes an assignment for the benefit of creditors, Consignor shall have the right to terminate this agreement.

Twentieth: This written contract contains the entire agreement between the parties and its execution has not been induced by any representation, understanding, or agreement of any kind other than those herein expressed. This contract is personal and cannot be assigned without Consignor's prior consent nor can it be amended except by written instrument duly executed by both parties.

Bulk Sales Agreement

This Agreement made this day of 194 , by and between The Atlantic Refining Company, , a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, hereinafter called Atlantic, and of , County of , State of , hereinafter called Buyer,

Witnesseth:

Quantity and Product — Atlantic agrees to sell and Buyer agrees to purchase , during the Period of Time — period commencing and ending with the understanding that Atlantic shall not be required to deliver and Buyer shall not be required to accept more than one-eighth (1/8) of the estimated maximum quantity specified in this agreement in any calendar month.

Price — The price shall be determined as follows:

2172-A Freight Charges

Terms of Payment

If during the continuance of this agreement, in the opinion of Atlantic, the financial responsibility of Buyer becomes impaired or unsatisfactory, cash payments or satisfactory security may be required by Atlantic as a condition precedent to the shipment of orders under this agreement.

Taxes — Any tax or other charge now or hereafter imposed by law, domestic or foreign, on any product herein sold, or on the production, manufacture, sale, transportation or delivery thereof, or on this agreement, which Atlantic is required to pay or collect, shall be added to the price herein provided for and paid by Buyer.

2172B Tetraethyl Lead Regulation Buyer shall distribute and sell any tetraethyl lead treated gasoline purchased under this agreement in accordance with the rules and regulations now or hereafter issued by Ethyl Corporation or United States Public Health Service or any governmental agency having jurisdiction thereof, and Buyer at all times shall keep any purchaser for resale of said gasoline informed of all said rules and regulations, and shall require that said purchaser for resale comply with said rules and regulations and that he inform all who purchase from him for resale of said rules and regulations. Buyer shall afford medical and mechanical representatives of Ethyl Corporation every reasonable facility to inspect any apparatus, equipment or other property used by Buyer in connection with the distribution and sale of said treated gasoline; and Buyer shall require that each purchaser for resale afford similar facilities for medical and mechanical inspection by Ethyl Corporation.

Shipments Buyer shall give Atlantic shipping instructions at least ten (10) days prior to the time shipments are desired, and when possible inform Atlantic the quantity desired for any one month thirty (30) days before the first day thereof.

Shipments hereunder shall be made in tank cars or truck transports from to the distributing station of Buyer at the following location or locations:

Tank cars or truck transports shipped hereunder are not to be diverted or reconsigned without written permission of Atlantic first obtained.

Force Majeure Buyer shall not be obligated to accept deliveries if unable to operate his business by reason of fire, flood, war, civil commotion, strikes, blockade or causes beyond his control. Atlantic shall not be responsible for any loss or damage resulting from any delay or failure in delivery due to fire, flood, storms, earthquakes, tidal waves, war, military operations, national emergency, civil commotion, strikes or any other difference with workmen or unions, or from any delay or failure in delivery when the supplies of Atlantic, or the facilities of production, manufacture, transportation or distribution which otherwise would be available to Atlantic, are impaired by causes beyond Atlantic's control or by the order, requisition or request of any governmental agency or acting governmental authority, or Atlantic's compliance therewith, or by governmental proration or regulation, or from any other delay or failure due to any cause beyond Atlantic's control, similar or dissimilar to any such causes. When such cause or causes exist, Atlantic shall have the right in its sole discretion to restrict or cease deliveries hereunder.

Claims No claim of Buyer on account of shortages in quantity or defect in quality of the products delivered hereunder or for any other cause shall be allowed unless Buyer immediately upon receipt of the shipment and at least twenty-four (24) hours before the unloading thereof notifies Atlantic in writing or by telegram addressed to Atlantic at 260 South Broad Street, Philadelphia 1, Pa., of such claim and extends to Atlantic the opportunity of making an investigation.

Tank Car Rental Buyer shall pay Atlantic rental for use of tank cars on the basis of $2.00 per day, with free time allowance of the first two calendar days following the day of actual or constructive placement of the tank car. Rental shall be paid for Sundays and holidays except when such days fall within the two days' free time. Buyer shall also pay any railroad demurrage charges. Buyer shall report to Atlantic the date of placement and release of tank cars on forms supplied by Atlantic.

Conflicting Laws or Regulations This agreement contemplates full compliance with all laws, ordinances and regulations, from whatever authority the same may emanate, having application to the parties hereto or subject matter hereof; and in the event this agreement, or any procedure or action therein imposed upon either party hereto, shall at any time appear or be determined to be in conflict with any legal requirements imposed by any such authority, then this agreement shall immediately become inoperative and ineffective with respect thereto; and in any such event either party hereto shall have the right to cancel this agreement, subject to the obligation of Buyer to settle any unpaid balances due hereunder; and any obligation of Atlantic to make further deliveries hereunder shall terminate on the date of such cancellation.

Default Except for causes referred to above under the title "Force Majeure" a default under this agreement shall occur upon the happening of any of the following events: (a) failure of Atlantic to make deliveries to Buyer as herein stated; (b) failure of Buyer to order, accept or pay promptly for material in accordance with the provisions hereof; (c) any adulteration or misrepresentation by Buyer of the product or products of Atlantic.

Liquidated Damages In the event of any default, the party not in default may terminate this agreement by written notice to the other party given at any time within ten (10) days after knowledge of the existence of such default. If this agreement is so terminated the party in default shall be obligated to pay to the party so terminating the sum of one cent (1¢) for each gallon of product which for any reason is not delivered, or accepted, as provided herein. Such sum shall be deemed full liquidated damages for all losses resulting from such default. Waiver of any one or more defaults hereunder shall not preclude either party from exercising the right to terminate this agreement by reason of any subsequent default.

Sale of Business Should Buyer at any time during the period of this agreement desire to sell or in any manner to dispose of Buyer's business assets or capital stock, or any part thereof or interest therein, Buyer shall give written notice to Atlantic of the terms of any offer of sale or other disposition thereof, and Atlantic shall have the first option of acquiring the same, upon terms identical with said offer. Such option shall extend for a period of thirty (30) days following receipt of such notice by Atlantic, and if not exercised within said period it shall thereupon lapse. Any such sale or disposition by Buyer shall not prejudice Atlantic's rights hereunder, and this agreement shall be and remain in full force and effect until its termination date.

Assignability This agreement shall not be assignable without the written consent of both parties.

Constitutes Whole Agreement This instrument embodies the whole agreement between the parties and there are no oral promises or other understandings or conditions inducing its execution or qualifying its terms.

In Witness Whereof, the parties have caused these presents to be duly executed in duplicate the day and year above written.

Contract Sales Agreement Trained Dealers

This Agreement made this ..... day of ....., 195...., between The Atlantic Refining Company, a corporation of Pennsylvania, herein called Atlantic, and ....., herein called Dealer.

In consideration of the promises hereinafter set forth, Atlantic and Dealer agree as follows:

1. Subject to prior Credit Department approval, Atlantic will deliver on consignment to Dealer in tanks at the service station, located at .... gallons of gasoline, hereinafter referred to as Consignment Inventory, for retail sale by Dealer at posted service station prices designated by Atlantic from time to time. Thereafter, Atlantic will deliver to Dealer into such tanks a number of gallons of gasoline, hereinafter called Replenishment Delivery, which when added to the quantity in the tanks shall equal the Consignment Inventory. All proceeds from the retail sale of Atlantic's gasoline shall be the property of Atlantic, and Dealer is hereby made a trustee of such proceeds for Atlantic's sole benefit. Dealer shall have no authority to disburse such trust funds except as follows: At the time of each Replenishment Delivery, Dealer will settle in cash with Atlantic for the number of gallons equal to such Replenishment Delivery on the basis of Atlantic's posted service station price at which the gasoline has been sold, less a commission equal to the Replenishment Delivery multiplied by 3.25¢ for Atlantic Gasoline and 3.75¢ for Atlantic Premium Gasoline when the difference between Atlantic's posted dealer price for Atlantic Gasoline and the posted service station price is 4.00¢ per gallon or less, or multiplied by 3.75¢ for Atlantic Gasoline and 4.25¢ for Atlantic Premium Gasoline when the above-noted difference is more than 4.00¢ per gallon. If dealer leases his service station from Atlantic, Dealer shall pay as rent a sum equal to 6% of the gross sales at the service station from all sources, excluding therefrom sales of gasoline, sales of tires, batteries and accessories at wholesale to service station resellers, Federal taxes on motor oils, tires and tubes and any taxes which are stated separately and are not included as part of the selling price of the goods sold; such rent for any month or portion thereof shall be paid not later than the 10th day of the month immediately following, provided, however, that upon termination of the lease of the service station from Atlantic to Dealer, any rent accrued hereunder shall become due and payable upon the date of such termination.

If in any calendar month of operation under this Agreement the total commission received by Dealer under the provisions of the immediately preceding paragraph is less than $400.00, Atlantic, by the 20th day of the following month, shall pay to Dealer the amount of such deficiency. Any rent due Atlantic from Dealer at the time such deficiency is due shall be deducted therefrom before payment thereof. If this Agreement is in effect for a portion of any calendar month, the amount of $400.00 shall be adjusted ratably for such month to reflect the number of days that this Agreement shall have been in effect during such month.

2. Title to gasoline delivered from time to time to Dealer to replenish or augment the original Consignment Inventory shall not pass to Dealer, but it shall be considered as though said gasoline had been part of the original Consignment Inventory.

3. Upon termination of this Agreement, Dealer shall account to Atlantic for the consigned gasoline as follows:

(a) Gasoline on hand shall be returned to Atlantic; or Dealer, at Dealer's option, shall purchase such gasoline at Atlantic's prevailing Dealer price applicable at that location on date of termination.

(b) The difference between Dealer's "Consignment Inventory" and the quantity of gasoline on hand on date of termination shall be settled for as provided in Paragraph 1 hereof.

4. Dealer shall continue to be fully responsible for the operation of the above service station, the purchase and sale of all other commodities, and the persons he employs.

5. Any provisions of the existing Bailment Agreement (Form B-3107-A) or Lease Agreement (Form B-3191) between Dealer and Atlantic, wherein Dealer appears as Buyer or Lessee, as the case may be, at variance with this Agreement are suspended during the term of this Agreement. The term of this Agreement shall be nine (9) months provided, however, that either party may cancel at the end of six (6) months upon giving at least (10) days' notice to the other party. Notice from one party to the other shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been given if sent by certified mail addressed to Atlantic at and to Dealer at his above-described location.

2174 6. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 5 hereof, this Agreement shall terminate concurrently with the termination of the Bailment Agreement (B-3107-A) or Lease Agreement (B-3191), as the case may be.

7. When two copies of this Agreement have been duly executed by the parties hereto, the Agreement shall become effective and shall automatically cancel any outstanding Commission Dealer Agreements or Contract Sales Agreements between Atlantic and Dealer.

Gentlemen:

Our Sales Department Management has requested of us a complete exploration of the tire manufacturers to determine at this time what interest you may have in the sale of your tires and tubes through Atlantic outlets. In our study to determine whether any change in present arrangements may be desirable, we wish to consider your propositions on first line, second line, and private brand, or as many of these lines as you merchandise.

To asist you in preparing your quotations, we give you on sheet #1 information we believe may be helpful. All of this data pertains to what we have to offer.

On sheet #2 attached we detail information we believe is needed to properly evaluate any deal you may propose. Some of our questions may be considered by you as confidential information. We assure you your answers will be held in strict confidence. You may wish to augment your story with further information as to why you believe your deal would best suit Atlantic's needs. The more complete your preparation of your proposition the better it will be considered.

Should our account be of interest to you, please forward in writing, in duplicate, your best proposition. Quotations should reach us at your earliest possible convenience. After we have an opportunity to digest your offering it is likely we shall wish to discuss details in a conference to be later arranged.

TBA Study

Sales Research Section

May 1949 The Atlantic Refining Company

2187 This study represents the opinions and attitudes of 1071 dealers in 47 cities from Massachusetts to Florida. These dealers were chosen on a random basis within the following limits:

1. A quota for each brand, based on that brand's acceptance in the city.
2. Satisfy the definition of a promotable dealer.

In general, the study shows:

—A preference among Atlantic's dealers for Lee tires and E ide batteries that is very satisfactory.

—A supplier-dealer relationship on these two items that could be improved.

—Due to the multiplicity of brand names involved, no reliable deductions of a comparable nature can be made for accessory preferences.

—A definitely unsatisfactory supplier-dealer relationship on accessories.

—A superior supplier-dealer relationship on the part of Esso.

In 1948, Atlantic's gross sales of the items involved were as follows:

Tires	$5,226,675
Batteries	$1,354,330
Accessories	$1,640,275

2189 Question 1:

Do you think you would prefer to buy all your major TBA items from one or several sources?

Answer:

Prefer one source for TBA:

Gulf	44%
Sun	43%
Esso	41%
Socony	34%
Atlantic	33%
Amoco	24%
Texas	19%

Answer:

Prefer several sources for TBA:

August 22, 1949

Memorandum for
Mr. T. E. Kelly

As you suggested, I am outlining the additional considerations brought out in the TBA program meeting of August 12 in your office.

My supposition is that Mr. D. T. Colley wants dealers to have TBA but not of necessity through Atlantic, questions the results from system changes unless shown, but withal wants action. A reported loss of $162,791 on TBA in the January, 1949, P & L cannot be ignored

Additional information, not available during the major survey, could focus attention at once not only on the soundness of the P & L as an influence in deciding what marketing method to follow but as well on estimating the effect of the major changes proposed in the TBA report and what could be expected if other marketing methods were adopted.

To obtain this information, I suggest these steps be given immediate consideration:

1. a) Examination of Company T.B.A. P & L expense accounts to find the extent of the elements entering into each account as to soundness of allocation, accuracy of time distribution, and essentiality of the activity costed. For example, just what does "District Office Accounting & Marketing" include and what are the possibilities of reductions in these activities and costs? (I understand, far as "time" is concerned, it is the consensus of the Sales Development Committee that the proportionate time spent on T.B.A. at an outlet should not be the basis for charging sales expense.)

b) Examination of the latest turnover ratios and inventory investment for possible hidden costs therein that could be corrected by better ordering.

2. Securing of industry expense ratios for comparative and corrective purposes. For example, if we are way out of line on some expense account, what can be done immediately, if anything, to bring it into line.

3. Securing of more knowledge than prospectuses offer on other marketing methods as the Goodyear Wholesale or Commission Plans, embracing the possibilities and pitfalls therein, for comparative purposes.

I believe this information would be of great value in arriving at any decision on just what line to pursue in the whole T.B.A. matter. At any rate it is my belief that the studies and proposals in the T.B.A. Report are essential no matter what final marketing method is accepted with the possible exception of a Commission Plan.

For your consideration, a primary analysis of the apparent marketing alternatives is appended.

K. M. Ford
Sales Industrial Engineers

KMF: gr
cc: Mr. J. M. McIlvain
Noble Hall

2286 Marketing Alternatives.

The marketing alternatives appear to be:

1. Dealers are supplied entirely by local jobbers.
2. A Wholsale Plan similar to Goodyear is adopted.
3. A Commission Plan similar to Goodyear is adopted.
4. The present Company method is retained.

Primary analysis of these alternatives promotes certain reflections:

Local Jobber

A question may well be—is uniformity of products handled, service given, reliability of product and like considerations of more purport than?

a. Faster deliveries to dealer of perhaps wider lines?
b. A desire of the Company to withdraw from the activity:

It would seem that at least for the Class 1 and 2 stations, representing the Company to the public, the answer would negate the use of local jobbers as main suppliers other than on incidentals.

Wholesale Plan (Goodyear)

1. It may well be that the gross profit allowed is not equal to what the Company should obtain—that Goodyear is taking out too much for its warehousing and delivery operations.

2. Removing the present Company physical distribution charges but retaining other expenses, as would seem necessary under the Wholesale Plan, would still leave a deficit. For example, on tires in the Company, January, 1949, P & L, Company operated Bulk Station expense was 3.2% of net sales; total expense was 28% of net sales. Taking 3.2% from 28% leaves 24.8% which is 8.7% above the proposed margin (16.13%) allowed by Goodyear on composite tire classes.

3. The proposed expense ratios developed by Goodyear are probably far too small.

4. If the Goodyear terms are not too attractive, does it point to a possibility Goodyear is emphasizing the Commission Plan and if so, why?

Commission Plan

1. The Company would still retain a significant sales expense, in all probability.

2. Would turning over Company outlets to Goodyear be detrimental to petroleum sales? There is not only the credit angle of possible tying up the dealers' ready money for Goodyear volume, if high pressured, but also possible emphasis of T.B.A. over petroleum by Goodyear for volume. There is also the counter possibility that Goodyear might not try to absorb all the volume the Company feels should pass through outlets.

2288 3. If Goodyear can allow a composite T.B.A. gross of 9.4% on net sales, is their expense allocation so much better than the Company's that their gross profit less 9.4% less their expenses still affords a net profit? It must be if, under their Wholesale Plan, they estimate Atlantic total expenses on tires and batteries should run 5.5% to net sales excluding physical distribution. If true, the position of the Company on expense is way out of line.

4. Once Goodyear is in the outlets what is the practicability of getting them out if the occasion warrants? The possibility of our return to operation depends upon their effort and maintenance of profit, not on ours.

5. Would not Lee struggle hard to keep its market (4 million or so volume) even to possible rough competition? As well, the recent Sales Research poll indicates a dealer satisfaction with Lee.

6. Will Goodyear give better delivery and general service than Atlantic?

7. Will dealers cooperate as well with Goodyear with the "obligation to petroleum supplier' 'status removed?

8. Just what expenses would the Company have to retain and what would be the final profit figure? Surely, much lower than 9.4%.

9. Will Goodyear satisfactorily maintain a productive volume to be allocated to Atlantic outlets?

10. Would Company outlets suffer severe competition from other Goodyear outlets?

11. The only secure chance of greater dealer volume is through our sales effort—not in relying on Goodyear sales effort.

Present Company Method

If this is retained, I believe it to be essential to carry through the recommendations of the T.B.A. report. One question to answer—is it to be just a dollars and cents proposition (that is, no loss or the greatest Company profit) or are there other factors to be considered?

One certainty is that sales must be increased and also the turnover rate without an accompanying increase in costs. Also, unessential activities and extreme expenses must be weeded out.

The aim of the T.B.A. report is to slash the inequities and cut the costs to the practical and workable.

Mr. D. T. Colley

Following the transmittal to you on June 29, 1949, of Mr. Ford's "Report on T.B.A. Operations", we have given additional thought to the manner in which this problem might best be approached. Discussion between Messrs. McIlvain, Hall, Ford and myself resulted in the preparation of the attached memorandum of August 22 from Mr. Ford. Most of these same views were expressed by Mr.

Ford during our discussion, and this preliminary approach now suggested was prompted by his review of figures only recently available on T.B.A. costs and profits and his discussion with you. What is now being proposed as a preliminary step would seem to be in keeping with your desire to do something quickly about the large indicated loss.

Until such time as it may be desirable to engage in the broader study as proposed in my letter of June 29, 1949, please feel free to call directly upon Messrs. Hall and Ford for any service you or Mr. Neall may desire.

2294 COMMISSION EXHIBIT 104A-C.

The Firestone
Tire & Rubber Company
Harvey Firestone
Founder

March 30, 1950

Mr. D. T. Colley
Vice-President and General Manager
The Atlantic Refining Company
260 South Broad Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Dear Mr. Colley:

In consideration of the assistance and cooperation to be given to The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company by your sales organization in promoting the sale of Firestone products to and by Atlantic Lessees, Dealers, Commission Distributors and Distributors handling Atlantic gasoline, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company will pay The Atlantic Refining Company a sales commission on all net sales of Firestone Tires, Tubes and Home and Auto Supplies, including Batteries, sold by Firestone to such accounts, who by mutual agreement are nominated by you and approved by us, according to the understanding and classifications set forth in this letter.

Firestone will report sales monthly on lists of such approved accounts furnished by Atlantic. Sales Commission rates currently in effect and which will continue until further notice are as follows:

Classification of Account	Rate of Commission
Lessees—"C"	10%
Dealers—"D"	10%

(1) Atlantic Lessees and Dealers

Sales Commission will be paid on all net sales to the above of products subject to sales commission except where sales commission rate will be as shown below in (3).

Lessees ("C") are dealers operating stations where entire property is owned or leased by Atlantic. Dealers ("D") represent Atlantic's other Contract Dealers handling Atlantic's gasoline.

Also included are Atlantic's Lessees ("CE") and such other Atlantic Dealers ("DE") served by Atlantic Distributors on petroleum products, where the Distributor is not qualified or active under the Sales Commission arrangement, where these accounts are approved.

Classifcation of Account.	Rate of Commission
Commission Distributors "B"	7½%
Distributors "E"	7½%

(2) Atlantic Commission Distributors and Distributors

Sales Commission paid on all net sales subject to sales commission to approved qualified Commission Distributors ("B") and Distributors ("E") operating bulk plants and distributing Atlantic's gasoline therefrom who wholesale such products to dealers, except where sales commission rate will be as shown below in (3).

These classifications also apply to any retail business engaged in by these accounts in retail locations, in addition to wholesale activity.

(3) Home and Auto Supplies

Where net sales of Home and Auto Supplies to any of the above accounts were $25,000 or more in the previous calendar year, or reach $25,000 in current calendar year, (beginning in month this volume reached), sales commission will be paid on these products at the rate of (for each such account):—5%.

Sales will be reported and commissions paid on net sales of:

(1) Tires, Tubes and Retreads (Firestone produced retreads—and on "retreaded" casings when furnished by Firestone.)

(2) Home and Auto Supplies including Batteries and Anti-freeze, and Repair Materials.

Sales Commissions are computed from net sales arrived at after deduction of quantity discounts, bonuses, price rebates, billing corrections, returned goods, adjustment credits, and wholesale commissions.

Net Sales for Sales Commissions do not include: used tires and tubes, camelback, adjustment sales, wheels, rims and weights, mechanical goods, Home and Auto Supplies not purchased from Firestone, equipment and supplies, advertising material and supplies, delivery commissions, Federal Excise Taxes, and State and City Sales Taxes.

Where sales are made by one oil company's qualified outlet to a qualified outlet of another oil company, such sales are only reported for latter oil company so that there will be no duplication of the sales commission payments.

2298 All accounts in the above classifications who are desirable for sale of Firestone products, may be nominated and qualified except: accounts who were Firestone Dealers before becoming Atlantic's Dealers or Distributors or who have been substantial Firestone Dealers for a period of years, Firestone Dealer Warehouses, Firestone Aircraft Distributors or Dealers, Commercial Accounts, taxicab and bus companies.

Store front locations operated by Lessees and Dealers ("C"—"D"—"CE" or "DE") accounts will be included only when they are directly a part of the service station location. Store front locations operated by Commission Distributors ("B") or Distributors ("E") may be included where approved by Firestone.

Records pertaining to our business with your outlets covered herein will be made available to you in our Districts for reasonable inspection during ordinary business hours.

This agreement will continue in effect until terminated by either party on one hundred and twenty (120) days written notice to the other.

Very truly yours,
The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company

January 12, 1954

Mr. D. T. Colley,
Vice President and General Manager
The Atlantic Refining Company,
260 Broad Street,
Philadelphia 1, Pennsylvania.

Dear Mr. Colley:

The Sales Commission Agreement between our respective companies, evidenced by letter agreements of March 30, 1950 and April 20, 1951, contains certain provisions as to products included for sales commission purposes and the establishment of sales commission rates.

Effective January 1, 1954 the above-referred to Sales

Commission Agreement is amended in the following particulars, all other provisions of our Agreement to remain in full force and effect.

1. Net sales of Home and Auto Supplies for sales commission will not include the sales of Home Supplies listed in our Wholesale Catalog in Department #5 (Major Appliances) and Department #13 (Television).

2. The present sales commission rate on Home and Auto Supplies, as set forth in clause 3 on page 2 of the March 30, 1950 letter agreement is cancelled and replaced by the following:

> "However, where net sales of Home and Auto Supplies to any of the above accounts were $25,000 or more in the previous calendar year, or reach $25,000 in the current calendar year, or where the account is extended the current #325 or #440 price list on Home and Auto Supplies (beginning in month of current calendar year when $25,000 volume is reached or above prices are extended), sales commission will be paid on these products for such account at the rate of 5%
> If in any subsequent calendar year thereafter, (A) net sales of Home and Auto Supplies to any such account who is not extended the current #325 and #440 price list is less than $25,000, or (B) if the current #325 or #440 price list is withdrawn from such account to whom net sales in such subsequent calendar year are less than $25,000, then the commission on sales to (A) shall be adjusted for such calendar year to provide for the 10% or 7½% rate, as the case may be, in lieu of the 5% rate, and in the case of (B), shall be increased on the first day of the calendar month immediately following the withdrawal. We will provide you prompt written notice of any change in status of such accounts."

2305 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 106A-B.

The Atlantic Refining Company
Petroleum Products
260 South Broad Street
Philadelphia 1, Pa.

April 20, 1951

Mr. H. D. Tompkins, Vice President
Firestone Tire and Rubber Company
Akron 17, Ohio

Dear Mr. Tompkins:

By letter agreement of March 30, 1950 between Firestone and Atlantic we agreed to assist and cooperate in promoting the sale of Firestone products to Atlantic dealers and distributors and embarked on a test of the Firestone T.B.A. program in two of our sales districts. We have decided, and you have agreed, to extend this arrangement to include our Eastern Pennsylvania, our Western Pennsylvania, and our Southern Sales Regions on the same basis as outlined in the letter of March 30, 1950.

It is understood that this expansion to the areas mentioned will be effective as of March 1, 1951, at which time Firestone will begin supplying the various products and services, outlined in the letter of March 30, 1950, to such of our resale outlets, either dealers or distributors, as desire to purchase them. At the same time, Atlantic will begin, through its field representatives, to assist Firestone in the additional territory mentioned, in the sale of the products and services outlined to Atlantic outlets, as has been done in the test districts.

This means that Atlantic salesmen will call upon retail dealer outlets and distributors, either alone or in company with your representatives, to promote the sale of such products and assist these resale outlets in reselling them. It is understood that all such Atlantic retail outlets or distributors are free to choose whether, and to what extent, they shall purchase Firestone products and services, and that Atlantic representatives cannot and will not use any methods other than salesmanship to encourage such dealer retail outlets or distributors to purchase Firestone products and services.

In determining to expand the Firestone sales commission plan to the larger areas mentioned, we have done so upon your assurance that you will provide tires, batteries, and accessories in quantities to take care of the reasonable needs of those Atlantic resale outlets who desire to purchase your products for resale. We realize that such an assurance from you is subject to conditions beyond your control, to the fair and equitable treatment of all customers, and any government restrictions on the manufacture or distribution of the products involved.

2307 If the above correctly sets forth your understanding of the arrangement between us, please so indicate by signing and returning for our files the enclosed copy of this letter.

Yours very truly,

D. T. Colley.

Philadelphia 1, Pa.

Gentlemen:

We now confirm our arrangement with you relative to services to be rendered by you in promoting the sale of certain Goodyear merchandise through such independent resale outlets as are otherwise engaged in or propose to engage in the sale of your products and as are agreed upon in writing with you from time to time on our form G-1209.

From the date hereof until cancelled by either party upon one hundred twenty (120) days' written notice to the other, these services shall continue with respect to Goodyear tires (casings and tubes, including Goodyear-produced recaps or retreads and repaired tires), batteries and certain car and home merchandise and related merchandise listed in Exhibit A attached to this letter and made a part hereof.

While this agreement remains in effect, it is understood that you will actively assist us in selling and promoting the sale of the above merchandise to your customers above referred to. You will see that your field offices work energetically with us with a view to assisting us to the fullest practicable extent in perfecting sales, credit, and merchandising arrangements with all such customers.

We understand that in counseling with these customers with respect to the general management of their businesses, including accounting and operating practices, your field representatives will give appropriate consideration to the maintenance of adequate stocks and to the distribution by such customers of merchandise purchased from us, and to the maintenance of proper identification and advertising with respect thereto.

You will instruct your field representatives that in their regular calls upon these accounts they shall encourage the accounts in undertaking and continuing vigorously their representation for us. To assist in the proper coordination of sales programs you will, from time to time 2385 at our mutual convenience, have your representatives call upon these customers in company with our salesmen. You will, throughout the term of our agreement, cooperate with and assist us in our efforts to promote and increase the sale of such merchandise by the customers to whom sales shall be made by us.

It is understood that you will maintain adequate dealer training programs in the sale of tires, batteries, and accessories, and qualified personnel to render the services called for hereunder regularly and efficiently. The right to accept or reject any order received from any customer shall at all times rest with us.

As soon as practicable after the end of each month, we will furnish you with a statement reflecting sales made by us through our retail stores, factory shipment, district warehouses or other owned outlets, and sales made by our dealer supply points and reported to us by our dealers, and in the case of car and home and related merchandise involving deliveries as shown on Exhibit A. While we cannot guarantee that all such sales by dealer supply points will be reported to us, or that in some instances cash or c.o.d. transactions may not be reported, we assure you that we will in good faith urge dealer supply points to keep us promptly advised of such sales and will endeavor to maintain a complete record of all such sales.

At the time each such statement is submitted, we will pay you a merchandise commission of ten per cent (10%) on all sales to your dealer outlets and seven and one-half per cent (7½%) on all sales to your franchise petroleum distributors as covered by such statement, computed on the net amount of invoices, excluding tax, after deducting all applicable discounts, allowances and bonuses, other than cash discount, whether shown on invoice or subsequently allowed, provided, however, that with respect to sales of Resolute batteries the commission shall be seven and one-half per cent (7½%) on all such sales whether to your dealer outlets or to your distributors.

We understand that you will retain for your own exclusive benefit all commission earnings received hereunder and that you will not directly or indirectly pay, credit, or in any other manner transfer any part of such commission to any customer of yours. Any violation of this understanding shall entitle us to terminate forthwith any further liability under this arrangement.

2387 Our records pertaining to business under this arrangement will be made available in our districts for reasonable inspection by you during ordinary business hours.

If we have outlined correctly your understanding of this matter will you please so indicate by signing and returning the enclosed copy of this letter.

Dear Mr Heideman:

Wish to acknowledge your favor of June 29th, together with outline of agreement, with changes suggested by Mr Stotz of Your Legal Department.

I am passing this on to Mr L W Baker of our Legal Department and will advise you further as promptly as possible.

Confirming my phone conversation of 27th (June) relative to your letter of June 22nd. It is our intent to pay commissions earned by you on various products listed under Exhibit "A" in accordance with the supply point designated on our Form G-1209, which form is jointly executed by both companies and the supply point is agreed upon and acceptable to the Atlantic Dealer.

The agreed supply point may be a Goodyear Dealer, a Goodyear Store, a Goodyear Field Warehouse, or a Goodyear District.

We will make changes in our agreement to conform with the above.

Kind regards.

Dear Sam:

I just had an opportunity to review with Mr. Stotz of our Legal Department the agreement which you submitted for the consideration of The Atlantic Refining Company.

In substance, this proposal describes our understanding of the responsibilities that we each have to discharge under the commission plan of operation. However, there are several places where a change or the elimination of a word would further clarify the subject matter.

I am returning herewith both the original and duplicate copy of the agreement and have indicated on the original the changes that we are recommending. Since these changes are very minor, I do not anticipate any objection to them on the part of your Legal Department, and hope that you will be able to send us a revised agreement, in duplicate, promptly.

Cordially yours,

April 3, 1951

Mr. Victor Holt, Jr., Vice President
Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company
Akron 16, Ohio

Dear Mr. Holt:

By letter agreement of June 1, 1950 between Goodyear and Atlantic we agreed to perform certain services to promote the sale of certain Goodyear merchandise.

At that time we began a test of the Goodyear TBA commission plan in one of our sales districts. We have decided and you have agreed to extend this plan to our Philadelphia and New Jersey, our New York, and our New England sales regions on the same basis as is outlined in the letter of June 1, 1950.

It is understood that this extension will be effective as of March 1, 1951, at which time Goodyear will begin supplying the various products and services outlined in the letter of June 1, 1950 to such of our retail outlets and distributors as desire to purchase them from Goodyear. At the same time Atlantic, through its field representatives, will begin assisting Goodyear in the extended territory in the sale of the products and services outlined in said letter with the understanding that, has has been the practice in the test area, our resale outlets shall be free to choose whether, and to what extent, they shall avail themselves of the opportunity to purchase Goodyear products and services and that any resale outlet which chooses to carry products other than Goodyear shall not be prejudiced in any manner. Of course, we both understand that our organization cannot and will not use any methods other than salesmanship to encourage our resale outlets to purchase your products and services.

In determining to extend the Goodyear commission plan to those sales regions we have done so upon your assurance that you will provide tires, batteries, and accessories in sufficient amounts to take care of the normal needs of those Atlantic resale outlets which desire to avail themselves of your products. We realize that such assurance from you is subject to conditions beyond your control, whether now or hereafter existing, including government restrictions on the manufacture or distribution of the products involved.

2401 We understand that whenever the product supply situation is such that you are unable to furnish all the needs of all your customers you will make available to Atlantic resale outlets as large a share of their needs as are available to your other like customers.

2405 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 127A-H.

May 31, 1950

Atlantic Refining Company—Sales Commission

Sales Commission Plan

The Atlantic Refining Co will be paid a sales commission on net sales by authorized supply points of certain Goodyear products to Atlantic Refining Co Independent Dealers, (hereinafter referred to as Atlantic Accounts) as recommended by Atlantic and approved by Goodyear District Manager.

All sales under this plan are sales by an authorized supply point to the Independent Atlantic Account. Billing issued to Atlantic Refining Co covering purchases for "Own Consumption" purposes are not subject to sales commission.

Payment of commission will be made to Atlantic by Akron and will be based on sales reported to Akron by Districts on monthly G-1204 reports.

Establishment of Authorized Supply Points

District Manager will determine supply point for each Atlantic account approved.

Goodyear Districts, Field and Factory Warehouses, Goodyear Service Stores and Goodyear Independent Dealers may serve as authorized supply points for thes accounts. See Page 1-A for products each class of supply point may deliver.

The supply point will make delivery of the merchandise, issue billing and carry the Accounts of the Atlantic Accounts they serve.

Master Record G-1209

Atlantic Refining Co will prepare G-1209 on each Atlantic account which is to participate under the plan.

All copies of the form should be approved and forwarded by Atlantic to the Goodyear District Manager for approval and completion.

The G-1209 must be filled in completely as provided on the form.

After G-1209 is completed and approved by both Atlantic and Goodyear District Manager Goodyear District Office will distribute copies as follows—

Original (white)—District Office File
Duplicate (canary)—Atlantic Refining Company District Office
Triplicate (pink)—Goodyear Field Representative
Quadruplicate (blue)—Supply Point where a Goodyear Store (other supply points handled by list—see below)

G-1209 provided to Stores which are not supply points for merchandise other than Car and Home Merchandise must be clearly marked "applies only to Car and Home Merchandise."

No more than one Store will act as a supply point, the additional Store (stores other than the regular supply point) should be notified of the approved Atlantic account by letter.

Independent dealer supply points should be furnished a list of the Atlantic accounts who will buy from them and on whom we ask them to report.

2407 Credit Policy

All Atlantic Accounts participating under this plan will establish credit with the Goodyear District, Store or Independent Dealer, which has been designated to serve them. Purchases may, of course be made on a cash or COD basis also. Districts must maintain separate B-80 on each COD or cash account.

Price Policy

Approved Atlantic Accounts under this plan will purchase their requirements on the same basis as any independent dealer at the prices and discounts for which they can qualify in accordance with our regular sales program for tires, tubes, batteries, C&H Mdse, etc.

Products Eligible Under Sales Commission Plan

Sales of the following listed products to approved Atlantic acounts are to be reported on the G-1204 reports when delivery is taken from authorized supply point as indicated below:

(A) When delivery is taken from and or billing issued by District

All Goodyear Tire and Tubes (Except Airplane) including seconds.
Goodyear Automotive and Farlight Batteries and Battery Cables.
Resolute Batteries.
Goodyear produced Recaps & Repairs.
All Dill and Schrader Valve Merchandise
Sea-Bee Outboard Motors.
Goodyear Repair Materials as follows—Small and Bicycle Tube Repair Kits. Quart size. Steptread Cement, Emergency Self-Sealing Patches. Small Containers Cold Patch Cement. Gasket Compound. Bicycle Rim Cement. Shaler M-50 Repair Kits and Motorists Vulc-Patch Kits.

(B) When delivery is taken from and billing issued by Goodyear Stores

All Goodyear Tires and Tubes (Except Airplane) including Seconds.
Goodyear Automotive and Farlight Batteries and Battery Cables.
Resolute Batteries.
Goodyear Produced Recaps & Repairs.
All Dill and Schrader Valve Merchandise.

Sea-Bee Outboard Motors.
Goodyear Car & Home Mdse stocked at Goodyear Field Warehouse.

(C) When delivery is taken from a Field or Factory Warehouse.

Goodyear Car & Home Merchandise.
Goodyear Brake Lining, Rivets and Wheel Weights.
Goodyear Repair Materials—The same and only those items listed above under (A).
Includes merchandise shipped direct to dealer by manufacturer.

(D) When delivery is taken from and billing issued by an Independent Dealer

All Goodyear Tire and Tubes (Except Airplane) including seconds.
Goodyear Automotive and Farmlight Batteries and Cables.
Resolute Batteries.
Sea-Bee Outboard Motors.
Goodyead Car & Home Mdse stocked at Goodyear Field Warehouse.

2409 Products Not Eligible Under Sales Commission Plan

Billing covering products listed hereunder, regardless of delivery point is not subject to commission and is not to be recorded by Stores nor included in G-1204 volume on which commission is to be paid.

Adjustment billing of any of the eligible products listed above.

All products not listed above as eligible products including but not limited to

General Electric and Hotpoint Major Appliances
General Electric Radios
Motorola Radios, Aerials and Accessories
Motorola Car Heaters

Anti Freeze
Tire Chains unless delivered by Field Warehouse
All types of Equipment—Battery Chargers, Display Service Station, etc.
Advertising and Sales Promotion items.

Sales Commission Plan

General

All Goodyear shipments will be to the supplying dealer—we will not drop ship to the Atlantic dealer for account of the supplying dealer.

Important—Careful attention under the Independent Dealer Supply Point handling is required to avoid payment to Atlantic of duplicated commissions under the following circumstances.

When an Atlantic account is authorized under this plan, commissions are to be paid only on this Atlantic account's purchases from his supply point. If this authorized account is the supply point for other Atlantic accounts, then sales to such other accounts are not eligible for commission as such would result in our paying commission to Atlantic on the original sale and then paying a second commission on the same merchandise when it was resold to the other Atlantic account.

The instructions outlined above under "Independent Dealer Supply Point", therefore, are applicable only if the dealer supply point is not an oil company approved commission account.

Goodyear Store Supply Points

District Manager will provide stores that are to function as supply point with G-1209 of specified Atlantic Accounts for whom the store is the designated supply point. As any changes occur in the G-1209, District Manager will notify store of change by copy of G-1209. Upon receipt, stores must immediately revise their records.

It is suggested that stores file the visible G-1209 form in their stock ledger binder for ready reference. Stores receiving lists of accounts from their District Manager should order supplies of blank G-1209 forms with which to establish their visible system.

Special Instructions Covering Store Car & Home Supply Points

Only those stores specifically approved by District Manager, (after approval by Akron) may operate as Car & Home Supply Points.

2411 When so approved, supply point stores may sell and bill to specified Atlantic accounts any Goodyear Car and Home merchandise stocked at our Field Warehouse and Sea-Bee outboard motors. Brake lining and related merchandise, General Electric and Hotpoint Major appliances, GE Radios and Motorola Radios and Heaters are not involved under this arrangement.

The Atlantic Accounts' buying prices should be either dealer or distributor price net except for cash discount. Quantity shipping allowance will not apply. Annual Bonus will be paid if earned.

Payment of Commission

Akron will pay all commission to Atlantic in connection with this plan. Rates of commission varies by types of Atlantic account, and type of product, therefore it is of the utmost importance that all Atlantic accounts be correctly classified on G-1209 records and also when reported on G-1204 so that the correct amount of commission will be computed by Akron.

Rates of Commission Follow—

(A) Approved Petroleum Jobber or Petroleum Distributor

All Merchandise 7½%

(B) Approved Oil Company Dealer (not Jobber or Distributor)

All Merchandise (except Resolute Battery Volume) 10%

Resolute Battery Volume 7½%

Identified on G-1204 and G-1209 as Oil Company Dealer

Car and Home Merchandise—If account is approved

Car & Home Merchandise Wholesaler 7½%

G-1204—Reports

Volume subject to sales commission must be segregated under the following classifications:

(A) All new tires and tubes including seconds, recaps and repairs, special priced stock, motorcycle, bicycle, truck farm, industrial and wheelbarrow tires and tubes but excluding airplane tires and tubes.

(B) Goodyear batteries including farmlight, battery cables.

(C) Resolute batteries.

(D) Car & Home and other products subject to commission not detailed above.

Commission is payable on the above merchandise only if delivery is made in accordance with schedule in Special Account instructions. Credit memos should be deducted from respective commission volume accumulations.

Recording of Volume for Accounts on District Ledgers

Tire and Tube Volume

Post bonusable items including credits for experimental Truck Bonus to the B-80D statistical sheet as usual.

Non Bonusable Tire and Tube items such as Motorcycle, Bicycle Tires and Tubes, etc., which are eligible under the sales commission plan are to be posted in miscellaneous column of the B-80D at the time postings are made to the B-80. Post at merchandise net invoice level.

2413 Goodyear Automotive Batteries Including Farmlight

Post Bonusable items to B-80D statistical section in usual manner. On guaranteed accounts postings should be made to the B-80D at the level prior to deduction of guaranteed annual bonus. Show annual bonus allowed as a separate item in a miscellaneous column at top of B-80D. Enter net battery volume on G1204 (Battery Bonus Volume less Annual Bonus).

Resolute Batteries

Resolute volume should be entered on B-80D in appropriate column. This volume must be kept entirely separate from Goodyear Battery volume accumulations.

Car & Home Merchandise & Miscellaneous

Post to B-80D such volume which is subject to sales commission. Enter on B-80D at net invoice price after deduction of all allowances. Include only items specifically designated as applicable for sales commission.

Recording of Volume for Accounts Sold by Stores and Supplying Dealers

Sales of merchandise subject to commission by dealer and store supply points to approved G-1209 accounts is to be entered to B-80D statistical ledger sheet as outlined in Wholesale Field Operating Manual page C-308.

2415 G-1204 Report of Sales—General Instructions

Districts will prepare G-1204 reports monthly covering sales to all accounts under the Oil Company Commission Plan for each Oil Company buying under this plan. Reports are to be mailed no later than 5th of month. Distribution of copies is outlined under Special Account Instructions Pertaining to each Oil Company.

All Oil Companies operating under the commission plan will prepare and submit to Districts G-1204 reports listing thereon accounts within the respective Goodyear District which have been approved to participate under the commission plan.

Where the Oil Company fails to list approved accounts on the G-1204, Districts should list such accounts thereon. Before transferring totals from B-80D to G-1204 verify account class indicated on G-1204 to classification shown on B-80D.

Once a sale has been made to any account include the accounts sales on each month's G-1204 (even though no sales are made in the current month—in this instance transfer to the G-1204 only year to date totals) until the close of the calendar year provided the account is not deleted by a G-1209 or a change in account classification in the meanwhile.

Delete from detailed G-1204's the account cancelled by

G-1209 removal notices in the month following the month in which cancellation occurs. (This means that the year to date total on the G-1204 for the month following date of deletion of any accounts will exclude all volume for such deleted accounts.)

When a change in account classification occurs indicate on the G-1204 the date of change immediately after the account class in the period the change takes place and show account on another line on G-1204 under new account classification with purchases on the new basis being reported on the new listing. On the following periods G-1204 delete from year to date totals volume reported under the former classification.

After posting B-80D totals to the G-1204, total the latter report according to classification of accounts and enter current and year to date on the respective lines at the bottom of each page of the G-1204.

After all G-1204's have been totaled make up a separate summary G-1204 for each Oil Company Division or District. Identify each as a summary report.

Prepare the summary reports by sorting G-1204's by Oil Company Division or District Office and run totals thereon of each total block (current and year to date) appearing at the bottom of the G-1204. Transfer respective totals to the body of the summary G-1204. Use separate line for each account classification and identify in account class column as "CHJ", "J" or "D". Show current month or year to date totals.

The summary G-1204 prepared at the end of each current period must include not only active account's volume but also the volume which has been dropped in the current year due to removal of accounts from participation in the Sales Commission Plan or due to change in account classification.

After determining and entering the current periods totals shown on the summary G-1204 a separate listing in the year to date column only the individual accounts 2417 removed that month. Enter removed accounts accumulated volume in the proper product column. Enter on separate lines volume by each account classification and identify in account class column as "CHJ", "J", or "D". On the following month's summary G-1204 shows as a separate listing by proper product and account classification the grand totals of removed accounts per previous month's summary G-1204 and then list thereunder by name and volume the individual accounts removed during the current month. Total summary sheets and carry totals to respective blocks at the bottom of the sheets.

The total of the current months year to date figures and the "Removed Accounts" figures should reflect a grand total of all volume reported year to date for payment of sales commission.

Check all G-1204 figures by adding the summary G-1204 current month's totals to the previous month's summary G-1204 year to date totals.

District Operating Managers will sign summary sheets only. Many instances occur where figures on copies are illegible due to poor figures, worn out carbon paper and off register of forms. The District Operating Manager's signature on summary sheets will be construed to mean that he has inspected each copy of all G-1204 forms for imperfections.

General

(1) Oil Companies finding it necessary to question the accuracy of G-1204 reports contact the District.

All complaints should be checked out at once and reported back to Oil Company.

If errors are revealed on our part, show the correction on the B-80D and include with volume on the next month's G-1204 in the current month's column even though the corrections may involve a period of several months. This treatment applies to any year to date adjustment regardless of the source of correction.

Complaints registered by the Oil Company where store is the supply point should be forwarded to the store for check of store reports. If check by store does not reveal any errors, District should advise Oil Company by store invoice number and amount the volume included on G-1204 and request that they advise the invoice numbers covering any volume not included. Upon receipt of this information from the Oil Company, request the store to verify the claim, advising the District whether or not the additional volume is to be included in the next G-1204 report. District should advise the Oil Company definitely regarding the disposition of all claims.

(2) Where commission accounts are approved for retroactive handling, a report of sales from the effective date forward should be secured from the approved supply point and all volume so reported is to be shown under current month on B-80D and G-1204.

(3) It is preferred that G-1204 be typed, however, this is not a hard and fast rule—in the event the report is handwritten be sure all copies of the report are legible and in neat readable handwriting or hand printing.

G-1209 General Instructions

G-1209 must be prepared on each independent Petroleum Reseller Account participating under an Oil Company Sales Commission Plan.

2419 Instructions peculiar to each Oil Company with respect to the G-1209 and its preparation, distribution and approvals required and other details will be found in Special Account Folder Instructions for the respective Oil Companies.

The G-1209 must be filled in completely as provided on the form. Under "Supply Points" list the supply point or points from which the account will secure its requirements. In spaces opposite caption "Type of Oil Company Account" check appropriate block. In space opposite caption "Is this Account an Approved Goodyear Car and Home Wholesaler", check "Yes" or "No" whichever is appropriate.

Effective Date for Additions of New Accounts

The Goodyear District Manager will be entirely responsible for the effective date of any new accounts which are to participate in the Commission Plan.

In certain cases retroactive effective dates of the G-1209 may be approved by The Goodyear District Manager. Retroactive approval will become effective the first day of the month designated in such approval.

The number of retroactive approvals should be very limited because there is no reason why a Petroleum Company Account who is eligible to participate in the Commission Plan cannot be signed up by the Petroleum Company Representative at the time and date the account is eligible for participation in the Commission Plan.

Cancellation of or Changes in Approved Accounts

When the change or cancellation is to be made in status of an established account G-1209 will be prepared either by Goodyear or the Oil Company in the same manner as for a new account. Proper spaces on the form should be checked and the effective date shown.

District Manager should approve and submit all copies to Oil Company Office, requesting Oil Company to retain their copy for file and returning remaining approved copies to the District. Where Oil Company institutes changes Oil Company will forward all copies to Goodyear District Manager for completion and approval. Goodyear will distribute in usual manner.

Changes or cancellations must show proper reasons in "Remarks" space.

2421 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 128A-B.

May 10, 1950
TBA SJH
T.B.A. Commission Plan

Mr. F. M. Neall,
Room 1706.

Dear Sir:

With further reference to my letters of April 12th and May 2nd, I have to report that the question of brand selection between Goodyear and U. S. has been discussed with both Mr. Estlow and Mr. Sanborn. Both of these gentlemen welcome the opportunity to test the commission plan in the Newark, New Jersey District, and they have expressed an overwhelming preference for the Goodyear brand. This preference is based on acceptance of Goodyear brand in the Newark District. They even prefer Goodyear over Firestone.

Last week I had an opportunity to discuss Goodyear and Firestone with George Switzer of Shell, and he expressed himself as being definitely in favor of relationship with Goodyear for best results over the long pull.

In considering the relative advantages of Goodyear versus U. S., it is recognized that U. S. has no company stores. However, this apparent advantage is more than offset by their extensive use of distributors inasmuch as their distributors have just as much latitude in the use of price in securing business as is enjoyed by company stores. U. S. favors nationally branded accessories and so does Goodyear. U. S. is following a policy of selective appointment of oil company representation. This is the type of policy that might be expected from those who do not have the business. Nevertheless, U. S. has aggressively solicited oil jobber business and with some reasonable degree of success.

Therefore, whether or not there is any immediate neighborhood competition with our stations in the selling of the same brand of T.B.A. depends on their past, present and future successes in establishing jobber distribution. U. S. is reputed to be the largest tire manufacturer in the world, but a considerable portion of their production is private brand. They are the largest manufacturer of private brand tires. While there is a definite advantage in size from the standpoint of flexibility there is also the 2423 disadvantage of the larger, and perhaps more important, obligations that this manufacturer will have with private brand contractors. In times of emergency, these may very likely take precedence over the requirements of smaller marketers. This did happen during the recent war and the post war period. U. S. does not have as extensive an accessory line as Goodyear or Firestone. This does not appear to have any important advantage as in reality only those of our dealers who are able, and these will be relatively few, will attempt to merchandise other than automotive items. U. S. is making a considerable effort to sell premium quality merchandise. Goodyear and Firestone have premium lines for sale also. In my opinion, the latter are being a little more realistic about service station merchandising possibilities. It takes the exceptional type of merchant to handle a volume of business on high priced merchandise, and in the service station business we are essentially limited to the everyday-garden-variety type of service station operator.

The information that I have listed in this letter, and also my letters of April 12th and May 2nd, prompts me to recommend that Newark be selected for the third test district of the commission plan and that the Goodyear program be used for this purpose.

Very truly yours,

h

T.B.A. Commission Plan

Mr. D. T. Colley
17 Floor

Mr. Heideman and I again sat down with the Goodyear and U. S. Tire people on the above subject.

After weighing and measuring the offers made by these people and discussing the matter with Messrs. Estlow and Sanborn, we have arrived at the conclusion that Newark would be an excellent place to try out the commission plan with a supplier other than Firestone, and because of the high acceptance of Goodyear in that area, they appear to give us more opportunity to get a better evaluation of the Commission Plan than U. S. All figures we have definitely give Goodyear the advantage over U. S. throughout our entire sales territory.

It is, therefore, our recommendation that we promptly make arrangements with Goodyear to take over the Newark area on a commission basis.

Accounting Procedure in Connection With Goodyear Plan for Sale of TBA Products in the Newark, N. J. District

With the adoption of the Goodyear Plan in Newark which has to do with the Company's receiving a commission for sales made by Goodyear to Atlantic Dealers and Distributors, following is the accounting procedure:

A list of all Dealer and Distributor accounts in the Newark territory, including the New York Harbor accounts, has been prepared and it is planned that each of these accounts will be solicited in an effort to have them participate in this plan. As the accounts' acceptance are obtained, the Sales Statistical Section in Philadelphia will be informed by the Newark Office. This information should be communicated by letter or memorandum, stating the following:

1. Name of Proprietor

2. Trade Name
3. Address
4. Type of account—by type of account, we mean either a regular Dealer who purchases for resale on a retail basis or a Distributor who purchases for resale on a wholesale and/or retail basis.
5. Effective Date—this should be the date that the account agrees to participate in the plan.

Goodyear Form G-1204, Report of Purchases from Goodyear by Oil Company Accounts

The Sales Statistical Section in Philadelphia will prepare the above report monthly. This report consists of a listing of the accounts who are to participate in the plan. This form acts as a claim against Goodyear for the purpose of payments of commissions to The Atlantic Refining Company on sales made to Atlantic Account. Detailed procedure covering the use of this form is attached.

Goodyear Form G-1209

After the initial drive has been made, there will be instances where additional Accounts are to be established, removed or changed. When these changes occur, Form G-1209 is to be issued by the Newark District Office. For details pertaining to the use of this form, see attached procedure.

Dear Sir:

It has been brought to our attention that there is some departure from policy taking place in the erection of signs in those stations being tested under the Firestone and Goodyear Plans. This policy as written to you on July 19, 1949, is as follows:

"No signs other than Atlantic signs, and this includes decalcomanias and small tack-up signs, may be placed on the buildings, poster boards, fences, supports, or poles, at our Company-owned and operated stations, with the exception of one Lee and one Exide decalcomania on the upper portion of our service station show windows, and one metal Lee sign outside.

With respect to leased stations, this same policy should be brought to the attention of the station manager and he should be shown that if this policy is adhered to, his station will not only be in line with other Atlantic stations, but, in addition, present a more acceptable appearance.

I think it might be well to explain to those who lease our stations that if representatives of any companies tell them that The Atlantic Refining Company has approved their placing their advertising signs at our service stations, it is a completely false statement, and if any changes in the sign policy are made by The Atlantic Refining Company our dealers will be so advised through our salesmen."

I am informed that the Service Station Committee have not recommended any changes to this policy. It seems, therefore, indicate that we should review the activities of Firestone and Goodyear in this connection to bring their signs in line with the above, substituting, of course, their names for the Lee and Exide names. Any desired change should be set forth in recommendation for exception to or alternation in existing policy.

We will be happy to work with you in any way possible in this matter,

Cordially yours,

md /s/ R. Borden

To all Sales Personnel
Philadelphia & New Jersey Region

There appears to be some misunderstanding in certain territories regarding the Company's policy on T.B.A. sales. Complications of dual marketing with the Firestone Commission Program apparently have brought about this condition.

That there may be no misunderstandings, let it be clearly stated that your Company's interest in T.B.A. was never higher. Atlantic intends to serve the best interest of the dealer to provide him with the best possible profit. To do this we must always be looking for better methods. The commission plan is an experiment to determine if it is of greater value to dealers than our present method.

It should be noted here that a third district is to be placed on the commission program—Newark, on June 12, with Goodyear as the supplier. This is not an expansion, but part of the original planning of the sales test. The delay in setting up this district was due to the necessary negotiations and preparations.

Our present suppliers are very much part of this sales test. They are fully informed on what we are doing and without exception they have indicated their willingness to increase their cooperation with our Company.

There should be no confusion—the T.B.A. program available in any territory is the one Atlantic recommends for dealer consideration. Future changes, if any, will be made only if they are proven to be to the dealer's advantage.

T.B.A. Conversion to Firestone & Goodyear Programs.

Mr. D. T. Colley,
Room 1700.

Dear Sir:

On February 14th, the decision was made to swing over to the Commission Plan of T.B.A. marketing effective March 1st. It was arranged for three regions (Philadelphia-New Jersey, New England and New York) to market the program of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and the other three (Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania and the South) were to market the program of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. The split was largely a matter of regional selection, decided upon by local advantages enjoyed by the respective rubber companies but influenced by Staff determination to have the two rubber companies competing in different localities for an equal share in the development of the Atlantic dealer's T.B.A. business. Although this move was sudden, events leading up to it were developed in an orderly fashion over a period of several years.

The original step consisted of a comparison of our

T.B.A. program with those of other oil marketers. This revealed that there were only two plans in extensive use. These were:

A. The so-called "private brand" method where the oil company markets tires, batteries and accessories under their own house brand or under a brand name that they own. Secony-Vacuum Oil Company, with their Mobil tire and Mobil battery, is a good example of this plan. Or,

B. The major rubber companies' complete T.B.A. programs available under the so-called "Commission Plan". An example of this operation is evident with the Texas Company and the Shell Oil Company.

The first plan, although employed by large and successful oil marketers, has its drawbacks. A company that doesn't have national distribution cannot economically and efficiently popularize its T.B.A. products. More important, however, is the increased burdens that must be as-2457 sumed in sales operations, the increased investment required for molds and for inventories, and the real hazard of commitments made in the fact of fluctuating markets. In addition, there is a heavy load on the dealer in creating public aceptance for a new line in a highly competitive field. There is the real threat of reduced sales and profits for the dealer at least during the early stages of such a program.

The second plan employing the major rubber company's brand name on a complete T.B.A. program appeared quite popular among the oil companies, and what is more important, especially popular with oil company dealers. We had access to confidential information from one large oil marketer (Shell) which indicated tremendous success with this type program over a period of several years.

Having established the fact that our T.B.A. program was somewhat unique among oil companies, we then employed an outside agency to sample opinions of both Atlantic dealers and competitive dealers in our area. The important finding from this survey was that our present program was far from flawless and that there was a great deal of dissatisfaction with it among our dealers. The dealers of other marketers appeared more content with the T.B.A. programs that were available to them.

Last Spring we decided upon a test, and for reasons now obvious, tried the Commission Plan. In arranging for this test, three districts were carefully selected so as to afford a good cross section of our marketing area. The districts selected were Newark, New Jersey; Wilmington, Delaware; and Erie, Pennsylvania. The first district was established on the Goodyear program and the other two on the Firestone program. These test districts were studied carefully from the inception of the new program. Dealers were contacted and asked about their preference and from the outset very favorable reports were received. A secret ballot was circularized by our Sales Research Section in all of the test districts, and again the replies showed a very strong preference for the new major rubber company program. Last, but very important, the sales figures in the test districts month after month showed gains over the previous year that outstripped the gains made in the remainder of the respective regions and also those made in the Marketing Department as a whole.

Last January, upon assurance from the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company that they could provide for our normal requirements, it was decided to broaden the test to at least one entire region in order to secure even more conclusive information. A volunteer was sought among the regions. Four regions indicated that they wanted the new program. Further negotiations were undertaken with both rubber companies so as to insure our supply position for the four regions as well as their complete and full support for the other two regions in the event that Lee decided that rather than continue to serve only two regions they would prefer to cancel their contract. On February 14th, Lee elected to cancel their contract effective March 1st.

2459 It will take several months to complete the conversion to the new program. Every effort will be made to sell the dealer on the advantages of the new program so that his ultimate decision will be in favor of it. During the conversion period we will have to dispose of approximately $425,000 of inventory. Inventory close-outs are always costly, but we feel because of the present market situation that the disposal program will yield us a return closely approximating our acquisition costs.

It will be interesting to review some of the advantages that we enjoy under the Commission Plan. We are relieved of the purchasing function except for our twelve Class I Stations and our own fleet requirements. We do not warehouse or deliver any merchandise; we are not involved in the handling of accounts, such as invoicing or credit and collection work; we do not issue catalogs or price books nor do we have to provide point-of-sale promotional helps. All of these responsibilities as well as sales training help are assumed by the rubber manufacturers. We assist in the selling job as well as in the dealer training and merchandising task, and for this effort receive a commission which varies according to class of account and type of merchandise, but which has been averaging well over 9%.

With Goodyear and Firestone we have the two best known manufacturers of tires; also, the two manufacturers having the greatest public acceptance not only in the United States but all over the world. They are leaders in research and development—in supplying original equipment and in the replacement market. Surveys reveal that between them they enjoy 50% of the renewal tire market. They both have extensive tire lines complete in every detail. They have recapping service which is an increasingly important service in tire retailing. Their battery lines are good and competitively priced, and their accessory and home supply lines are far more extensive than is necessary to meet the requirements of our average present-day dealer. These broad lines, however, provide a safeguard for our dealer should the supply situation become tighter, and they also provide a growth and development opportunity that is so vital to the improvement of our overall program. These T.B.A. programs are complete, they are exceedingly well merchandised and they are backed up with exceptional dealer training and unparalleled national advertising. We are indeed fortunate in having these two companies competing against one another for a more secure or favorable position with Atlantic. We stand to gain from this arrangement whether we are in a buyer's or seller's market.

We have tried to estimate how our 1950 actual experience on T. B. A. would have compared with the same volume of performance if it were accomplished under the Commission Plan. Our T. B. A. volume excluding the three test districts amounted to seven and a half million dollars. Our gross profit ranging from 20 to 30% on the different products amounted to approximately $1,664,000. Estimated expenses chargeable to this operation total $2,071,000. This would indicate a loss of about $407,000. 2461 Under the new program based on our experience in the test districts, we would have received a commission of approximately $675,000 to apply against sales expense.

In addition to this favorable comparison, we would have secured much needed warehouse space and delivery facilities that could be used to advantage for our petroleum products. Some of our personnel could have been eliminated but much of it could have been assigned to other jobs where help is urgently needed. Our operational people would have been free to effect greater improvements and efficiencies in the handling of petroleum where worthwhile savings can still be effected.

It is expected, however, that the ~~greater~~ benefits from the new T. B. A. program will come about through improved services and supply to our dealers, and as a result of their increased sales and profits we will enjoy direct benefits from increased commissions and indirect benefits in better dealer stability.

Very truly yours,

S. J. Heidenreich

Dear Sir:

General

Both the Firestone and Goodyear Station Identification Programs are under way. Goodyear Decals are being applied by an outside agency however their own trucks are erecting signs. Goodyear has begun Station Identification in the Philadelphia-New Jersey Region and plan to start Station Identification in the New York and New England Regions both beginning July 2nd.

Firestone sign trucks are applying decals and erecting the signs in Eastern and Western Pennsylvania. Firestone Identification at Atlantic Stations will not begin in the South until late summer.

Tires

We continue to look for increased supply of tires in the replacement market although to date we have not been given tire allocations for the month of July.

Nothing to report.

Dear Sir:

General

We have secured agreement from five of the marketing regions to discontinue, effective March 31st, the supporting arrangements that we have with both Goodyear and Firestone on the adjustments of Lee tires and Exide batteries. We had an obligation incurred as a result of product sales effected under the old T. B. A. program to support Atlantic dealers in their adjustments of Lee tires and Exide batteries. An arrangement was worked out with Goodyear and Firestone whereby we shared the cost of this adjustment responsibility. Our cost during the first 9 months of 1951 totalled $11,000. It is believed that as of March 1st we will have effectively discharged with few exceptions our obligation in this direction. It is intended that special cases, of course, will be given the consideration they deserve.

Dear Sir:

The time is fast approaching when tires will be in good supply and when we will want every possible effort and attention of the Atlantic dealer focused on the subject programs. I believe, therefore, some consideration should be given to limiting the use of B-139's to the subject's tires. Reasonable time has been allowed for Atlantic dealers to dispose of the stocks of Lee tires which were sold to them by Atlantic.

Credit Card Sales

Mr. William Stockton,
Room 1605.

Dear Sir:

Attached to Mr. Taitt's letter of February 11th were two copies of a list of T. B. A. products and services which we suggested be approved for credit card purchases. On that list, in addition to tires, batteries, anti-freeze, and services, was a lengthy list of items under the heading of "accessories".

In order to cover all of these accessory items without distributing a special list and to express them in terms that dealers and salesmen can readily identify, we feel that our purpose can best be served in the area served by Goodyear through use of the following descriptive terms:

Department 022, Auto Accessories
Department 71, Goodyear Fan Belts
Department 58, Goodyear Molded Hose Department 55, Goodyear Radiator Hose
Department 61, Car Mats Department 42, Repair Materials and in the area served by Firestone, with the following terms:

Department 3, Auto Supplies
Department 16, Seat Covers
Department 50, Spark Plugs & Batteries

While these groupings will include a few more products than appear on the present list, we think that in the interest of simplicity it will be just as economical as trying to exclude them.

May we please have your comments on this recommendation?

4. Credit Card Policy—1953

a. (1). Issue 1953 Credit Cards to all holders of 1952 cards who purchased in 1952 and have a good credit standing.

(2). Each region should set up a system so that this plan may be followed annually and where the time period may be shortened to six months if conditions warrant.

(3). Each region should inquire of government agencies who have not used their 1952 Credit Cards recently of their requirements for 1953 Credit Cards.

b. (1). Use "perforated" type credit card.

(3). Acetate container to be separately enclosed.

c. (1). All regions to assign permanent Credit Card numbers based on the alpha-numeric system.

(2). Addressograph Credit Card for annual reissuance and those issued currently during the year.

(3). Since c. (1) will change the sorting system, it is advisable that the use of 1953 cards be started early. 1953 Credit Cards should be mailed November 20, 1952.

(4). Regions should encourage customers and dealers to start using their 1953 Credit Cards when received. Salesmen should be informed of the effect of this change and asked to encourage dealers to follow the suggestions.

(5). 1953 Credit Cards should be issued to current applicants starting November 1, 1952.

(6). 1952 Credit Cards will cease to be valid after December 31, 1952.

d. (1). The regions are urged to build up their Credit Card business. The healthy growth in the number of good Credit Card customers is necessary for the development of our Class 2 program.

(2). Promotion of Credit Cards by use of "lists" has been found to be expensive and non-productive. This method is not to be used. However, where a former competitive dealer takes over an Atlantic Station, Credit Cards may be issued to his former customers subject to credit approval.

The next sentence reads, "Tires, tubes, recapping, batteries and automotive accessories recommended by Atlantic. (Mounting of tires and tubes and installation of batteries and mountable accessories required." Remove the words "Recommended by Atlantic."

No changes are recommended in the Credit Cards issued to government agencies.

T.B.A. Program

Dear Mr.

The attached letter is being mailed to every Atlantic dealer and distributor. The expressed policy must be clearly understood by everyone in the Sales Department and then practiced.

I am sure that the new T.B.A. program which we have carefully selected has so many advantages that it will not be difficult to convince Atlantic dealers and distributors of its superior merit. This job is to be done with the use of all the sales equipment and knowledge that we, or our suppliers, have at our respective commands. I expect the results of our salesmanship to be highly successful.

You can appreciate the fact that under no circumstances are our dealers to be made to feel that they must buy this new program just because they are Atlantic dealers. The sales you make must be made on the merits of the program and your ability to sell the dealer on its advantages to him. Any evidence that coercion or misrepresentation were used in securing acceptance would be most embarrassing to the Company. This program is a challenge to your sales ability. I am confident that you will do a fine selling job.

In conclusion, it is my personal belief that the new T.B.A. program, with all its breadth and strength, is the answer to a long felt need of the Sales Department. It is a program which I completely endorse and that everyone in the department can and should firmly support.

A Statement Of
Atlantic's T.B.A. Policy

Dear Sir:

The Atlantic Refining Company recognizes the trend of the motoring public to depend more and more upon the modern service station as a source of supply for tires, batteries, and accessories. Therefore, we are interested in making available that TBA line which will meet fully the needs of the public and our dealers, since we feel it will mean increased sales of our petroleum products.

The new TBA plan was adopted after a long and thorough study which had the sole purpose of finding out what sales program would mean the greatest sales and profits to the dealer. We found that the dealer could best serve the interests of the public when he was supplied through the extensive distribution system of a major tire company.

Our sales organization has been instructed to explain and demonstrate to you the many advantages of the new TBA plan. They will do so with enthusiasm and conviction because they are confident that it will be advantageous for you to accept it. However, your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice.

Atlantic's growth is dependent upon your opportunity and ambition to expand and succeed. We offer this new TBA plan to you because we sincerely believe it will make your sales and profits grow through better TBA service to your customers.

To Atlantic Dealers

To Atlantic Petroleum Distributors

Here is the most important T.B.A. news ever sent you by Atlantic. Very shortly the complete ..... line will be available through your Atlantic salesman. You will be notified as to the exact date the new program will become effective. In the meantime, we will continue to supply you to the best of our ability with our present T.B.A. line.

The decision to make this change in the T.B.A. program to that of ..... was made only after thorough testing to determine the advantages for Atlantic dealers. The results of these tests showed that the ..... program offered very real benefits.

The ..... plan includes new sales possibilities. A complete line of tires, batteries, and auto and home supplies are available as well as new services such as recapping. This change in policy opens a door to new profits. The reason for offering this new line of T.B.A. products is to present to dealers and distributors a program which, in our opinion, can provide the maximum in sales potential as well as better support for overall petroleum marketing.

With the announcement of the effective date of the new program, the merchandising and distributing of the present T.B.A. line will be continued only to the extent of remaining inventories.

2530 The plan represents an agreed upon attainable objective. Certain things, as set forth below, must be enthusiastically planned in detail and carefully coordinated between Regional and District Management.

I. Salesmen

A. Keep assignment free of complication. Spell out and mutually agree on his work plan and objectives. Work the plan.

B. Determine training he needs and work with the Regional and Headquarters' Departments to see that training needs are realized.

C. Semi-annual review of results between salesman and Manager followed by confirming letter copy to Regional Manager.

D. Issuance of current Commercial Sales Bulletins.

E. Sales Expansion in each territory is essential to our plan. Normal growth, no losses, is our 1951 aim.

II. Retail Instructors

A. Expand training beyond mechanics of Red, White & Blue course to include Product, Merchandising, Display.

B. Special Retail Instructor meetings as scheduled by Regional Office to discuss common problems.

C. Complete agreement on overall objective before assignment to location. Salesman to be with Instructor at least at start of assignment.

D. Use Four Step Method of Instruction.

E. Implement the DPA Case Plan.

III. Class 2 Dealers

A. Event openings to be a part of each new station going on stream, modelization, modernization and changeover as well as stimulation events to lift the level at "sick" stations.

B. Continue and accelerate Service Station Modelization until stations conform with "Standard of Operation" so far as physical conditions permit. Attached is current policy governing program.

C. Maintain Dealer Bank. Alert personnel for desirable dealers and dealer employees in every day pursuits. Conduct dealer selection and indoctrination as agreed upon.

2532 D. Continue to improve Dealer Annual Review. Search for better ways to improve our dealer relationship and increase receptivity to our ideas.

E. Provide and maintain training facilities for dealers and their employees.

F. Report dealer progress on quarterly report form provided.

G. Full participation in 1951 Shopping Program.

H. Carry out Approved Lubrication Program including every dealer employee.

I. Replace dealers keeping us from attainment of objectives.

J. Develop more intensive use of our merchandising aids.

IV. Class 3 Dealers

A. Continue agreed upon program for elimination of unprofitable and non-promotable dealers not a credit to Atlantic. Continue Manager supervision of prospect list and solicitation technique to acquire the kind of dealers fitting our program.

B. No change in present formula for acquiring dealers.

C. Promote use of term "Atlantic Dealer Franchise" and its value.

V. Commercial Accounts

A. Factual reports from field will be basis for our competitive sales policy.

VI. Farm Program

A. Activate 5 new routes to supplement present 16 established routes.

B. Minimum of 3 C.R.S. meetings in each district.

C. Annual C.R.S. review with letter of confirmation.

D. Expand training.

E. C.R.S. furnish semi-monthly explanatory report listing accounts gained and lost.

VII. Distributors

A. Continue present policy of interesting ourselves in any distributor with whom we can do business at a profit and of whom we need not be ashamed, providing no confliction with direct marketing exists or results.'

2534 B. Intensified field direction of wholesale salesmen, scheduled meetings for planning and activity review.

VIII. Heating Oils

A. Concentrate on direct marketing development with use of burner service exploration, Heat Insurance Plan, tank cleaning.

B. Define areas for wholesale dealer development in Metropolitan areas for Range Oil.

C. Promote and expand through C.R.S. with well defined training program.

D. Define potential and supervise solicitation of Bulk Consumer and Industrial business.

E. Obtain desirable distributors who will creditably promote our product.

IX. Technical Products

A. Solictation at present concentrated on truck and carload buyers for direct shipment.

B. Supervisor to work with and through managers to afford salesmen opportunity to develop selected territory accounts. Double-team with salesmen.

X. T. B. A. Program

A. Established goals are attainable, being based on actual experience with consideration for reasonable gain and proposed new construction.

B. Follow new accepted formula covering all classes of trade to determine that salesmen are developing this market in all departments.

C. Promote coordinator's plan for effective Field Assistance.

XI. Sales Meetings for 1951

A. Managers Meetings as necessary.

B. District Meetings monthly per agreed schedule—2nd full week of each month.

C. Regional plan for small group dealer meetings as programmed for specific problems and objectives.

2536 XII. Training

Training will have an important share of staff and District Management time.

XIII. Credit Policy

Our credit policy will aid not hinder in the acquisition of desirable business if necessary field cooperation is insisted upon.

Conclusion

Our goals are ambitious but realistic and attainable, and all of us have had a part in setting them.

Our results will reflect how well we follow the pattern of our own making.

Station Modelization Policy

It has become necessary to firm up our policy covering the Modelization Program so that all Districts will operate on a uniform basis. The following policy becomes effective immediately:

(1) The program must have the combined efforts of the Sales and Operations Groups, with the former determining, after the survey of the station is made, what is needed to modelize the station within the limits of its physical appointments.

Operations will supply the estimated cost and, if approved, make the necessary physical changes at the same time the station is being modelized. Modelization is to include a study of the dealer's lubrication equipment, restroom facilities, and both interior and exterior lighting.

No physical changes are to be made without the sanction of the Operations Department, and in any event, changes of a structural nature are to be avoided in unusual cases.

The Modelization Program must have the approval of all interested departments; therefore, salesmen should be cautioned to make no firm commitments until these approvals have been secured.

(2) Shelving—Dealers will purchase, and Atlantic will install any, of the currently recommended Murlin display shelving anywhere within the station.

(3) Lubrication Equipment—The dealer can buy under our current financing policy, any of the approved lubrication or Allied equipment through Atlantic, and we will install and maintain for the period of the manufacturer's guarantee. The Dealer may buy equipment from outside sources, but he will arrange for its installation and maintenance, only after the approval of our Operations Department.

(4) Washing Facilities—We will furnish and install the pipe for our currently recommended drop-hose installation, which is to be considered a part of the modelization package. The Dealer will pay for the hoses and nozzles and replace them as needed.

(5) Lighting—The Operations Department will inspect the lighting facilities, both inside and out, and make their recommendations in line with our present approved Lighting Installation Program, the cost both inside and out to be borne by Atlantic.

Goodyear Commission Plan 1951 Sales Plan

Mr. G. V. Ostrander, Syracuse, New York.

Dear Sir:

With the change in T. B. A. program in the New York Region to that of Goodyear, we would like to point out certain changes which appear necessary in your 1951 Sales Plan as far as T. B. A. is concerned:

On page 3, tire quotas have been established in units. Such information will not be available from Goodyear as your sales report will be in dollars.

On page 4, a unit objective has been established. Information on this line will also be in dollars and will not be provided in units.

Page 7—there are probably some changes which should be made in the points established under the T. B. A. Program.

In appendices 1a, 2a and 2c, district quotas would have to be changed in line with the above information. Appendix D, the report and review form, would also require some change in treatment.

These suggestions are offered for your information and with the thought that this change to the Goodyear program need not necessarily cause any interruption in your entire 1951 Sales Plan.

Very truly yours,

h

Proposed T. B. A. Program

Mr. S. J. Heideman
12th Floor

This is to confirm to you our desire to inaugurate the Goodyear program for T. B. A. in the Philadelphia-New Jersey Region, which we discussed following our meeting with Mr. Colley today.

The following points have been considered in arriving at our final position. We look favorably upon the Goodyear program for these reasons:

(1) Higher volume
(2) Better profit
(3) Lower operating cost (warehouse, delivery, etc.)
(4) Completed Key Dealer Study shows better financial return to A. R. Co. but, we assume, lower volume.

(5) Better dealer and consumer product acceptance. With this program we could retain key dealers—thus maintaining volume on T. B. A. and petroleum products.

(6) Successful record on Goodyear in the Newark District

(7) Relationship with Goodyear is good; fine support in field and full supervisory cooperation.

(8) More selling time for salesmen on petroleum products and merchandising

It is also our belief that sufficient expression of opinion has been reported to make any brand preference survey with the dealers unnecessary. We further, feel that with the Goodyear program in its embryonic state of development, we might be unwisely stirring up our dealer and sales organization were we to attempt a brand preference survey at this time.

Goodyear Program Service Station Identification

Mr. S. A. Gaylord, Manager,
Petroleum Company Sales,
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company,
Akron 16, Ohio.

Dear Mr. Gaylord:

You will be pleased to learn that the Service Station Committee has approved the use of the Goodyear transparancies that were presented by Mr. Fritsch, and also approved the use of the hanging sign at such locations where the installation would be practical. I am passing this information along to you promptly so that you can order the transparancies which will require some time to produce. For your guidance in ordering the transparancies, we list the following information:

Region	Active T.B.A. Dealers	Class 2* Dealers
New England	690	415
Philadelphia	1300	353

The horizontal wall sign has been approved as an alternate for the hanging sign when the preferred type of installation cannot be employed. Will you arrange to reserve sufficient quantities of both types of signs so that when the identification program finally gets under way it will not be delayed for lack of them.

It would also be appreciated if you will recommend and submit to us a format complete with detailed directions that Goodyear and Atlantic can mutually agree upon as the identification program.

Cordially yours,

S. J. Heideman

Goodyear Program

Atlantic Dealer Identification

Mr. W. J. Jackson,
Room 1218.

Dear sir:

I asked Mr. O'Neill of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company to supply me with a list of the Atlantic dealers in the Philadelphia Region who refused to be identified on the Goodyear program. Attached is a list of 46 dealers who, for reasons indicated, have refused this service.

You will probably wish to review the respective portions of this list with the District Managers concerned. Undoubtedly, facilities for identification are not the best at some of these locations, but with others it is apparent that the proprietors have not been sold on the Goodyear program. In such instances, I believe that additional sales effort is called for. In any event, will you be kind enough to advise me at your convenience what action you have taken with regard to this list.

Very truly yours,

h

Goodyear Identification—Dealer Locations.

Please refer to our letter of July 24th on the captioned subject.

Management is very definitely concerned about the refusal of dealers to permit Goodyear identification at their stations.

Kindly inform this office of the progress being made in correcting the situation—according to listing of locations forwarded to you with our letter of July 24th.

Goodyear Program
Atlantic Station Identification

Mr. S. A. Gaylord, Manager,
Petroleum Sales Department,
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.,
Akron 16, Ohio.

Dear Mr. Gaylord:

I wonder if you can furnish me promptly with a report on the progress of the subject program. I should like to have this information broken down by our regional territories. As I understand it, the signs are being erected by Goodyear crews, but the decals are being erected by outside agencies. Furthermore, at the present time when we locate an Atlantic dealer who is without any Goodyear identification or without one or the other signs or decals, we do not know whether an unsuccessful attempt has been made to complete the assignment or whether all or part of the job, whatever the case may be, is scheduled for attention.

We should like to interest ourselves in the cases where an unsuccessful attempt has been made to provide the Goodyear identification. Perhaps, this information could be made available to us in simplest form by stating the Atlantic District areas that have been covered by either sign crews or agencies that are applying the decals, and by supplying us a list of the dealers where attempts to erect decals or signs were unsuccessful.

I have already received a list of this type for the Philadelphia and South Jersey areas, and this has been referred to our District Managers for further attention. However, I do not know if this is a partial or complete list of the dealers in that territory who could not be identified with Goodyear signs.

Your cooperation in this respect will be greatly appreciated.

Cordially yours,

S. J. Heideman

Identification

Dear Syd:

Your recent request for information on stations that our Identification Crews are unable to identify has been passed along to Joe O'Neill.

This information is obtainable from our District Offices because the Identification Crews work from a formal request made up for each station to be identified. In turn they report back advising our District Managers whether the work has been done or not.

We believe that Mr O'Neill can set up a program with our Districts through Petroleum Representatives to obtain this information for you on a specific time basis.

We are asking Mr O'Neill to report to you on this as soon as possible.

Dear Syd:

Per your request, I am attaching a list showing the Atlantic locations in the New England Region wherein the DeWolf Valance Company were unable to install Goodyear window valances.

In the event that you are successful in obtaining permission to install valances in these locations please inform the writer so that I can have DeWolf take care of the installations.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed you will find two lists showing those locations wherein we were unable to install Goodyear window valances.

I am inclined to think that those locations marked "windows too small" etc., can not be installed. However, something might be done about the other list.

Atlantic Station Identification

Mr. L. K. Maisel
Syracuse, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

We are listing below Atlantic accounts in Goodyear's Albany district who refused to permit their sign crew to identify the stations with Goodyear signs and decals, for your appropriate action:

	Comments by Identification Field Representative
William Wilde Fort Johnson, N. Y.	Does not want Goodyear identification—dud.
Burks Garage Albany, N. Y.	Going Esso
Stalders Service Station Scotia, N. Y.	Dud
E. R. Dickinson Hudson Falls, N. Y.	After identifying several, of Mr. Dickinson's stations, I find that he is not sure he is going Goodyear. He is trying to play both ends against the middle between Lee and Goodyear.

Very truly yours,
W. C. Hoffman

Dear Sir:

Attached is a report from Goodyear of Atlantic stations in the Philadelphia, South Jersey and Newark Districts to which they were unable to erect Goodyear signs either because dealers refused identification, or the stations could not be identified due to structural reasons.

We are passing this information along for your appropriate action.

Very truly yours,

Fair Trade Agreements. The Wall Street Journal for May 22 contained the following article.

"The Supreme Court ruled yesterday in a 6 to 3 decision, that retailers who do not sign 'Fair Trade' agreements may ignore manufacturers' suggested retail prices. The decision jeopardized enforcement of 'fair trade' laws in 45 states because it invalidates the non-signer clause which provides that the signature of one retailer to a minimum price agreement makes all other retailers in the state subject to the agreement. Fair Trade laws written without a non-signer clause have proved ineffective.

Yesterday's decision was concerned with a New Orleans supermarket which refused to follow minimum prices set by two national distillers. The distillers based their action on the Miller-Tydings Act, which exempts businesses from anti-trust prosecutions in states permitting resale price maintenance, and which they said was intended to permit the use of non-signer clauses.

The Supreme Court ruled that since the Miller-Tydings Act does not mention the non-signer clause, it could not assume such a provision was meant to be allowed. The Court said, 'Certainly the words used connote a voluntary scheme. Contracts or agreements convey the idea of a cooperative arrangement, not a program whereby recalcitrants are dragged in by the heels and compelled to submit to price fixing'. The majority opinion went on to say that the Miller-Tydings Act specifically continues prohibition of the Sherman Act against 'horizontal' price fixing agreements between retailers or between wholesalers or among other competitors at the same level. 'Therefore', said the Court, 'when a state compels retailers to follow a parallel price policy, it demands private conduct which the Sherman Act forbids'.

Fair Trade laws are of particular importance to the liquor and drug industries, but also cover a wide range of products from soap and shortening to consumer durable goods such as vacuum cleaners and electric clocks. The Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission have always considered Fair Trade laws as running counter to anti-trust and anti-inflation programs."

Fair traded products in the Goodyear line are identified by an asterisk (*) on the Catalog Page.

Goodyear Program

Bulletins. We are attaching an extra copy of this T.B.A. Bulletin, which we suggest be referred to the Goodyear Petroleum Representative in your Region, by your T.B.A. Coordinator.

We also suggest that information be deleted which would be of no interest to him.

Car & Home 1951 Spring and Summer Supplement No. 1 —5/25/51. Copies of Dealer and Distributor 1951 Spring and Summer Supplement No. 1 was mailed to all names on the Car & Home catalog mailing list.

Car & Home Merchandise Price Book Holders should make the necessary changes in the 1951 Spring and Summer Catalog and the Dealer and Distributors Price Lists.

Progress Report. We attach Progress Reports received from Goodyear which represent the results of activities through May 21, 1951 and through May 28, 1951, by Goodyear District.

Will you please arrange to forward to this office the net number of Atlantic Dealers, by Goodyear District, that have been nominated in your Region on the Goodyear G-1209 Form to date. Also, please notify us weekly of any changes that may be made thereafter, so that this report may be kept current.

Sales Promotion. The subscriptions to the Goodyear Small Display Package Service which was sold to dealers at $1.50, far outdistanced Goodyear's most optimistic expectations. Therefore, the # 1 Package will not be sent to Atlantic Dealers and the prorated cost for the two remaining kits in the small Display Package Service will be only $1.00.

If additional copies of the # 1 Package were run they would not be available much before the # 2 Package. However, Goodyear will mail miscellaneous point-of-sale promotional material to their Goodyear districts, which can be picked up by Atlantic Salesmen for distribution to their dealers, at no charge, and which can be used until the # 2 Package is available.

Station Equipment. Will you please supply this office, as promptly as possible, a list of service station locations in your Region that you expect to open in the following 90-day period, and also a list of equipment which can be ordered from Goodyear, that will be needed at each location.

Thereafter, it will be necessary to give us this information monthly, since it takes 60 to 90 days to obtain certain equipment from Goodyear for use in new stations that may be opened in your Region.

Tires & Tubes

June Tire Allocation. We have just received notice from Goodyear of the quantities of tires to be assigned to the Goodyear supply points for their distribution to Atlantic-Goodyear outlets during the month of June 1951. The quantity assigned for your Region is ..... Passenger Car Tires and ..... Truck Tires.

2656 Accessories

AC Oil Filters—5/21/51. A release was made to Price Book Holders in the Goodyear Boston, Hartford, Albany and Syracuse Districts only, except Oil Companies. This release was mailed direct to your T.B.A. Coordinator, by Akron.

The release listed a representative line of AC Oil Filters which has been placed in the Boston Car & Home Warehouse, primarily for Atlantic Refining Company outlets, and also for other Car & Home accounts.

The AC basic requirements for eligibility as an AC Oil Filter Jobber are the same as those required for AC Spark Plug Jobber eligibility.

In the near future, a representative of the AC Spark Plug Company will call at each Goodyear District Office, for the purpose of investigating prospective AC Oil Filter Jobbers, and to make application for jobber compensation where eligibility is established.

Car & Home Merchandise Bulletin # 16—5/23/51. A copy of the Car & Home Merchandise Bulletin # 16 has been mailed to your T.B.A. Coordinator. We wish to call their attention to two items which will be of interest to your dealers.

Seat Cover Swatch Books. A shipment of the Goodyear 1951 Seat Cover Swatch Book 022-6995 has been sent to each Goodyear district office. These swatch books should be picked up by Atlantic Salesmen and passed out to their most likely seat cover account prospects, at no charge.

Johnson Heavy Duty Cleaner. The S. C. Johnson Company has just announced the immediate availability of their new product, Johnson Heavy Duty Cleaner—pints. This product will be nationally advertised and will be recommended for use preparatory to the application of Car Plate. We suggest that caution be used in promoting the sale of this product, since it is only necessary to use a Heavy Duty Cleaner on the older model cars.

Miscellaneous

Steam Bags—5/22/51. The addition of three Sectional Steam Bags for use in repairing large off-the-road truck tires was mailed to Price Book Subscribers and Recappers. This should be given only passing interest, and may be discarded by Atlantic Salesmen.

Toys and Sporting Goods—4/25/51. We attach a copy of Goodyear's 1951 Holiday toys, bicycles, juvenile wheel goods and sporting goods wholesale catalog which was mailed to all Price Book Holders except oil companies. This is for your T.B.A. Coordinator's information.

A letter is also attached outlining the program and including the terms.

We suggest that distribution of this information be limited and given only to those of your accounts that may be interested in these lines, and that can handle such a program.

Dear Sir:

As requested by your letter of July 17, we are advising you of the number of Atlantic Accounts turned over to Goodyear at the inception of the program.

These figures include distributors as well as dealers as we assume you are interested in all resellers rather than dealers alone.

We are listing the accounts by Goodyear and Atlantic Districts.

Station Openings. We ask that you instruct your Districts to establish, as a regular practice, automatic and advance notice to the Goodyear District Office, of the openings of any new stations, or of change in proprietorship at any dealer location. Such notice will be mutually beneficial to both Goodyear and ourselves. It will enable Goodyear to complete any unfinished business with the outgoing dealer and, further, will enable them to anticipate and to move promptly in handling the new dealer's requirements.

This subject was initially mentioned in T.B.A. Bulletin #4 of February 1. The repetition merely adds "new stations", and will clarify the action desired.

Dear Syd:

Van Akin, our Boston District Manager, recommends subject Atlantic account be approved as a C & H M Wholesaler. The account is set up with a wholesale route truck, travels a full time wholesale salesman, contacting a minimum of 60 service station accounts, which qualifies the account for the arrangement if it is willing to place an initial order in accordance with our policy.

A-C, Purolator and Westinghouse have already approved on that basis.

Before taking action, which seems for the best interest of all concerned, I am clearing with you before advising Mr. Harper, as if the account is an Atlantic Dealer it will reduce the rate of commission earned on C & H M.

Will you please advise as promptly as possible.

Dear Mr. Gaylord:

The New England Region Office does not wish to set the subject Atlantic account up as a C & H M Wholesaler. They would like to set this account up as an Oil Company Supplying Dealer.

We suggest that if there are any further questions concerning this, that Mr. Van Akin should contact Mr. T. L. Walsh.

Minutes Goodyear T.B.A. Coordinators' Meeting

October 12, 1951

Syracuse, N. Y.

The following were in attendance:

Messrs. S. J. Heideman, Chairman, T.B.A. Sales
L. K. Maisel, T.B.A. Coordinator, New York Region
T. L. Walsh, T.B.A. Coordinator, New England Region
W. C. Hoffman, Acting Secretary, T.B.A. Section

Mr. W. J. Jackson was absent due to illiness but was polled on several of the questions prior to the meeting.

Guests: Mr. G. V. Ostrander, Regional Manager, New York Region
Mr. W. S. Shockley, Manager, Sales Group, New York Region

The meeting convened at 9:15 A M

I. Next Meeting Date

December 14, 1951, Room 1210, Atlantic Building, Phila., Pa.

II. Report on September Sales

The chairman reported that two regions showed a decrease in tire sales, three regions showed a decrease in battery sales and two regions showed a decrease in accessories sales for September, 1951 from sales in September, 1950. Members commented as follows:

A. Tires—Mr. W. J. Jackson (Phila.-N.J.) reported that sales were off, due primarily, to reduction in purchasing capacity of associate dealers due to gas price war and lack of consumer demand.

Mr. Maisel (N.Y.) reported the following:

1. Lack of consumer demand.
2. Lee Competition.
3. Goodyear has not followed through on seeing that dealers are properly stocked.
4. Not as much effort put in, selling Goodyear, as under the old program.
5. Dealer credit difficulties.
6. Some sizes of tires still hard to get.

Mr. Walsh (New England) reported

1. Decline in consumer demand.
2. Sale of recaps has affected the new tire market.
3. Dealers bought ahead on certain sizes during the recent tire shortage.
4. Dealers are not "selling" tires.
5. Dealer credit difficulties.

Both New England and New York agreed that (a) Atlantic salesmen are putting in more time as a rule on the Goodyear T.B.A. Program than they did before; 2671 (b) some salesmen are getting a free ride where there is an aggressive Goodyear supplying dealer or store; (c) some areas are getting good support from ~~year~~; (d) personnel are still enthusiastic.

Action:

a. Mr. Maisel is to advise T.B.A. Section of specific cases of shortages in tire sizes.
b. The Regions are to advise the T.B.A. Section of specific dealer credit difficulties which will be referred to Goodyear, Akron, for their handling.

New England reported that approximately 98% of their accounts have been signed on a Goodyear Program and that they are getting about 75% of the tire business they previously enjoyed from these accounts. New York reported that they had about 96% of their accounts signed on a Goodyear Program and that they were getting about 65% of their former tire business. Both Regions agreed that there were two main difficulties in selling Goodyear tires:

1. The lack of road hazard guarantee is a stumbling block for the small dealer.
2. Lee prices and discounts appeal to the larger Atlantic accounts.

The Chairman then asked the Committee members what they felt was needed to get the program operating properly. The New York Region felt that they had reached the turning point and that they were now looking for improvement. Both Regions agreed that a Goodyear tire story similar to the story of Goodyear battery advantage being prepared by Sales Promotion would be helpful.

There was some discussion as to whether Goodyear had an adjustment policy on bruise breaks on tires with less than 25% wear.

Action:

a. T.B.A. Section to investigate Goodyear's bruise break policy and then to develop with Goodyear a program for training dealers in handling tire adjustments.

b. T.B.A. Section will develop with Goodyear a method for proving that dealers can sell many more Goodyear tires than they can Lee's in order to offset extra discount offerings.

c. T.B.A. Section to request Sales Promotion Section up a tire selling program similar to the battery story now being prepared by Sales Promotion.

B. Batteries—New England and New York Regions agreed that the following factors had affected battery sales:

1. Dealers were overstocked.
2. Battery life is being extended.
3. Competition's sales were also off.
4. Replacement shipments were off.

2673 The Chairman announced that the Sales Promotion Section is preparing a battery story which will point out the advantages of Goodyear batteries. This information will be given to salesmen and dealers in order to improve battery sales.

C. Accessories—Mr. Walsh reported that the situation is improving but that there are still problems to be corrected. The supply problem, insofar as warehouse and stores are concerned, is generally satisfactory, although the Boston warehouse at the present time has no stock of DuPont Sealer. Goodyear supplying dealers are still a problem in some areas. For example, in New England one Goodyear supplying dealer refuses to deliver accessories and the Atlantic salesman solicits dealer orders and delivers them in his own car. Mr. Walsh recommended that Goodyear, Akron, set up their supplying dealers so that they can offer distributor prices to associate dealers. Mr. Maisel reported that New York still had a problem in setting up satisfactory supplying dealer service and that the poor service from the Massillon, Ohio warehouse had not yet been corrected.

Action:

a. The three Regions are to give the T. B. A. Section a detailed report of problems on accessories in their Regions.

b. T. B. A. Section to recommend to Goodyear the need for encouraging Oil Company supplying dealers to offer distributor prices to associate dealers.

c. T. B. A. Section will again follow up (third time) with Akron concerning service from Massillon, Ohio warehouse.

D. General—New York Region is using a form which lists the type of each account and also the purchase levels for all products. This information is supplied by Goodyear. A check on the progress of each account is made by comparing the activity reported on the G1204 form. If an account is not buying commensurate with the purchase level to which he is listed, this is quickly revealed in this comparison.

Action: The T. B. A. Section will request Goodyear's cooperation in furnishing this information for the other two Regions.

III. Fall Promotion—T. B. A. Flyers.

A report had previously been made to the Coordinators on the number of deals sold in their regions of the "bucket" promotion. Both New England and New York felt that the order blanks were late when received by salesmen, and apparently salesmen had not received sufficient information concerning the promotion. Both Regions received order blanks with Richfield Oil Company on them. New York Region suggested that a cover letter be mailed with future releases. New England reported that poor timing and bad mechanics were responsible for their poor showing.

Action: Goodyear is to be informed by T. B. A. Section about suggestions and complaints.

IV. Report on Warehouse Inventories:

The Chairman reported the company cost value of warehouse inventories on hand as of September 30, 1951.

2675 1. Tires—New York Region has most of the tire inventory which is made up of Lee tubes. Special price been given to sell out this inventory.

2. Batteries—The Chairman pointed out that it was imperative to dispose of our remaining battery inventory at once.

3. Battery Equipment—EX201 Chargers represents the major portion of this dollar inventory. Special prices on other battery equipment items appear to be satisfactory for quick movement at the present time.

4. Accessories—The major portion of this dollar inventory consists of tire chains. The New York Region was given special prices on certain accessory items.

Action:

a. Mr. Maisel is to advise the T. B. A. Section the tire inventory that he is unable to sell and also furnish T. B. A. Section with the special prices that were quoted on certain accessory items.

b. All three Regions are to advise the T. B. A. Section promptly what additional help, if any, is needed in selling the battery stocks.

V. Claimed Advantages for Goodyear Tires.

The Chairman exhibited a folder "Why Should I Buy Goodyear Tires" which was received in answer to our request for information as to the claimed advantages which are superior to other make tires. It was felt that more technical reasons should be obtained that these should be used in the tire selling story referred to earlier in the meeting.

Action: The T. B. A. Section is to request these technical reasons and advantages from Goodyear.

VI. Batteries—Competitive Information.

The Chairman reported to the Committee members the information received from Goodyear in response to our request for information on combatting competition from Lee batteries. Some of this information will be incorporated in the sales story being prepared by the Sales Promotion Section referred to earlier in the meeting.

VII. Lee Tires and Batteries—Company Equipment.

A further discussion was held on this subject and it was agreed that since this factor is not a problem in the New York Region and since New England is making limited purchases of Goodyear tires for company equipment, no further action was needed at this time.

VIII. Lee and Exide Adjustments—Cutoff Date.

After considerable discussion it was recommended that March 31, 1952 be established as the cutoff date on Lee and Exide adjustments.

2677 Action: If no objections are apparent to this course of action after development with other regions and management, it will be adopted as policy.

IX. Tires—Special Promotion or Deal.

The T. B. A. Section had requested from Goodyear information as to whether a promotion or deal could be arranged. Goodyear referred to the tire selling theme in the October Merchandiser which could be used. This information will be incorporated in the tire sales story referred to earlier in the meeting. It was recognized in the discussion that there were certain difficulties in staging "tire events" under the tire company program.

Action: The T. B. A. Section will investigate the possibilities of "tire events".

X. Training Program.

The Chairman asked the Committee members when their training programs would be completed and what provisions, if any, were being made to pass this information on to dealers and also to keep salesmen informed.

1. New England reported that their training program would be completed in November and they plan to have the Goodyear petroleum representative double-team with each Atlantic salesman one-half day every two months.
2. New York Region has completed their training program and have held small dealer meetings and plan to continue these dealer meetings.
3. Phila.-N. J. Region reported that their training program would be completed in November.

It was agreed that a coordinated program should be inaugurated which would require participation by both Atlantic and Goodyear personnel.

Action:

a. Mr. Walsh will check with New England management on feasibility of holding dealer meetings.
b. Mr. Maisel will work out with New York Management the feasibility of the Goodyear petroleum representative double-teaming with Atlantic salesmen.
c. The T. B. A. Section will recommend to the Phila.-N. J. Region that the plans being used by New England and New York be used in continuing the training program.

XI. Budget Plan at Service Stations.

New England has nominated a station but it is not yet in operation. New York has a station now operating on the budget plan in Buffalo, N. Y. Phila.-N. J. Region has not as yet set up a model station.

2679 Action: T.B.A. Coordinators will maintain a check of progress advising the T. B. A. Section of the success of these model stations by means of a questionnaire to be provided by the T. B. A. Section.

XII. Truck Tire Sales at Service Stations.

New England has picked two candidates to operate as a model truck tire station. The New York Region has one model truck tire station in operation. Phila.-N. J. has not as yet set up a model station.

Action: T. B. A. Coordinators will advise T. B. A. Section on the progress of these stations by means of a questionnaire to be provided by the T. B. A. Section.

XIII. Used and Recapped Tire Sales at Service Stations.

The three Regions have not set up model stations for used and recapped tire sales. The Chairman pointed out the advantages of having a good used and recapped tire business. Sale of used and recapped tires represents additional income and if these sales are ignored, it is the same as "throwing" money away. If used and recapped tires are not properly cleaned and displayed, they give an unsightly appearance to the station. The Chairman stressed the importance of getting at least one station established in order to convince other dealers to follow the same program.

Action: Coordinators are to set up the model stations as soon as possible and keep the T. B. A. Section posted on their progress by means of a questionnaire to be provided by the T. B. A. Section.

XIV. Budget Sales by Goodyear—Dealer Commissions.

Goodyear has a plan whereby they pay commissions to gasoline dealers of 10% or $10.00, whichever is less, on budget or deferred payment business sold to accounts sent into Goodyear stores by these dealers. The commissions apply only on original sales to new accounts. After considerable discussion it was agreed that this plan should not be publicized since only the dealer and not Atlantic would receive the benefit of this commission. Also there is always the possibility of the dealer losing the future business of this customer whenever he is referred to another source of supply.

XV. New York Region Manager's Comments on Goodyear Program Operations.

The Chairman invited Mr. Ostrander to give the Committee the benefit of his opinions for the improvement of the commission plan operation. Mr. Ostrander expressed dissatisfaction with the progress made in his region and suggested that if Goodyear had sent additional personnel to assist in the initial phases of the changeover, many of the problems could have been resolved and better performance would be evident. He also suggested that

1. Even now additional Goodyear personnel could be sent into the territory to spread the Goodyear story and secure a better understanding of the advantages by dealers and by salesmen in a manner similar to that which was employed by the New York Region last year when all of the personnel in the region assisted the Buffalo district with the work of opening eight new stations at one time.

2681 2. Mr. Ostrander stated that since T. B. A. sales were off, rentals were also off because the anticipated volume had not been enjoyed.

3. Mr. Ostrander recommended that the same $500.00 credit limit established on the service station commission operation be made available for dealers on Class 2 station operation.

4. Mr. Ostrander also recommended that the statement "only Goodyear tires will be honored" should not be included on the B139 credit card until such time as we were more firmly established on the Goodyear program. In the discussion that followed it was brought out that since the commission plan was being investigated by the Federal Trade Commission, this was another reason why we should delay recommending that only Goodyear tires be listed on the B139.

XVI. Anti-Freeze.

The Chairman gave the following report on the anti-freeze supply situation. U. S. I. can accept no additional orders for Super Pyro this season due to a government order which requires large quantities of Methanol which is the base of this material for jet fuel and other military needs. DuPont and Commercial Solvents have also been affected by this order. U. S. I. reported, however, that unfilled orders on hand will be shipped in three to four weeks.

National Carbon has stated that Trek is still available and orders will be shipped in three to four weeks. National Carbon has not guaranteed price protection this season. However, we have recommended to management that we continue our present protection policy since it would be rather difficult to administer two policies. Management agreed to this recommendation. The Chairman recommended that if Trek anti-freeze was needed to fulfill additional requirements this season, it should be ordered immediately.

Thermo is available at a new higher price. We now have the option of buying our present inventory at the old price. This will be decided at a later meeting with Publicker officials. The Chairman also mentioned the fact that we may have to depend on Thermo entirely if Methanol is not available next season. There is a possibility that this may be the situation.

XVII. Petroleum Representative.

The recommendations made in the August 17th meeting concerning the duties and functions of the Goodyear petroleum representative were presented to Goodyear for their study. Goodyear has advised that they can see no reason why our suggestions cannot be incorporated in the program. The Coordinators reported that they were proceeding with these recommendations and that they were being carried out satisfactorily.

XVIII. Radiator Hose—Redi-Curv.

The Chairman reported that although there has been some instances of Redi-Curv hose failure, they have been so small considered in the light of the total number of pieces sold, that these failures would not represent a serious problem. Since all Regions were in agreement with this reasoning, T. B. A. Section recommended to Goodyear that a similar type hose be added to the Goodyear line.

2683 Goodyear has reported that their Development Department has had Thermoid Redi-Curv under study and in several tests it has proven unsatisfactory. However, they recognized the market for this Redi-Curv hose and are presently experimenting on some ideas of their own.

Action: T.B.A. Section will follow up Goodyear on the progress made in adding this item to their line mentioning the fact that both Gulf and Snn can afford to feature this type hose which wouldn't be the case if the product wasn't satisfactory.

XIX. Defective Home Merchandis Policy.

Goodyear's policy on defective Small Home Appliances states that it is the dealer's problem and that he is to take the matter up directly with the manufacturer. Since there was an instance reported of a defective radio and the fact that it was inconvenient and expensive for our dealer to handle, this matter was referred to Goodyear.

Goodyear reported that their various suppliers had authoried repair stations listed in the Car Home Catalogue. These repair stations are conveniently set up in the principal cities and render efficient service. The Committee members felt that this program was not satisfactory on a new purchase because operation or test is not performed before delivery. This is similar to the outdated principle "let the buyer beware". However, there was some question as to whether the unit was tested or operated before it was delivered.

Action: T.B.A. Section will review the situations encountered to date, and if justified will reopen the matter with Goodyear for further consideration.

XX. Selling Petroleum Products to Goodyear Stores.

Mr. W. S. Shockley, New York Region Sales Group Manager, recommended that a standard program should be set up to be followed in obtaining petroleum business from Goodyear. The recommendations were that this should be handled by the T. B. A. Coordinators and that the District Managers should make careful selections of locations that were to be approached, considering the nature of the store's facilities, possible volume and obtain information on the length of existing lease. After the locations have been carefully selected this information should be channelled through the T. B. A. Coordinator who would then request the T. B. A. Section to find out from Goodyear the necessary steps to obtain this type business.

Action: T.B.A. Section will recommend this program to other regions for soliciting this type of business.

XXI. Securing Associate Battery Dealer Business.

The Chairman stressed the importance of securing the associate dealers' battery business which can best be accomplished by the supplying dealer making regular calls keeping him well stocked and avoid the need for "fire engine" service.

2685 XXII. Comparable Products in the Goodyear Line.

The Chairman distributed a list of multiple products in the Goodyear line and asked that the Coordinators indicate the items they wished to concentrate on in order that an exerted effort might be applied for promotional purposes.

Action: T.B.A. Coordinators are to forward completed lists to T. B. A. Section.

XXIII. Analyze Accounts Active on the Goodyear Program.

The Chairman recommended that the accounts that are active on the Goodyear program should be analyzed and compared with those that were active on the former program. Those accounts that had $500.00 or more volume last year and have not been signed to date should be pinpointed and special effort should be exerted in order to bring about their conversion to the new program.

XXIV. Analyze Job to be Done on a Special Product.

The Chairman recommended that specific products should be analyzed by comparing areas where results are good with areas were results are poor and determine whether it is supplying dealer or just what does account for the difference.

XXV. Support of Policies at all Selling Levels.

The Chairman suggested that some of the problems that confront us require local selling at salesman and dealer levels. It is necessary that they understand policies and prices and that poor sales results should not be due to the lack of knowledge of these prices and policies.

The meeting adjourned at 4:50 P.M.

Petroleum Representative—(Review and Recommendation.) The Chairman reviewed the duties and functions of a Goodyear Petroleum Representative as outlined by Goodyear and asked the members for their comments concerning their activities and how they could best be utilized to the mutual advantage of both Atlantic and Goodyear. After much discussion it was decided that the following recommendations be made to Goodyear Management:

1. It was the consensus of opinion that better coordination between Atlantic and Goodyear could be brought about if the following steps were taken:

a. The Atlantic T. B. A. Coordinator would channel any problems in the field through the Goodyear District Managers concerned since it would ultimately be the Goodyear's District Managers problem to correct, and by this action avoid the use of Petroleum Representatives as an "errand boy".

b. Coordinator would contact the Goodyear District Manager, if necessary, to have any Goodyear supply point carry additional stocks.

c. It was established that regular contacts with associated dealers at least once a week were being made by Goodyear salesmen or supply points in some areas while in other areas contacts were as infrequent as a whole month. The practice of at least weekly contact should be expanded to include all areas.

2. It was felt that the Petroleum Representative could work best to the interests of both Atlantic and Goodyear by the following:

a. The Petroleum Representative should be impressed with the importance of follow through on any particular assignment.

b. Petroleum Representatives should train Goodyear territory men in their battery and accessory product lines so that they will be more familiar with these products and also with the different price schedules.

c. Petroleum Representatives should be acquainted with Goodyear's selling equipment such as price schedules, product data, advertising helps of all kinds that are available to the dealers, both on charge and no-charge basis, and see that the Districts maintain and distribute adequate stocks of this material for our dealers.

d. Petroleum Representative should be available for field work on a co-ordinated basis with Atlantic Coordinator, and preferably by the Atlantic T. B. A. Coordinator's direction.

Action: The T.B.A. Section is to make these recommendations known to Goodyear Management for their approval.

Dear Sir:

Many of our dealers are objecting to the switch from Fram to Purolator because they feel that the re-education of their help on the Purolator numbers is too big a job.

We suggested to the Petroleum Representative of Purolator that they supply us with stickers showing simply the Purolator number which could be placed on the outside of the Fram pieces and that this would help us in effecting a change-over. The Purolator Representative didn't seem too optimistic about being able to accomplish this through his Company and, therefore, we think it ought to be pushed from your office.

We could really do a job on eliminating Fram if we could identify their merchandise with Purolator numbers.

Internal Correspondence

To: Mr. S. J. Heideman—Rm 1210
Subject: Goodyear Tire Display
From: W. J. Butler
Date: May 1, 1952

We have discussed the matter of fitting the Goodyear Tire Marketier into our service station display set-up with our people.

They felt that the Marketier could not readily be accommodated in an AR 50 design station without eliminating part of the present shelving. As you know, this is now being furnished by Operations Department automatically in Class 2 service stations. It was pointed out that the present shelving provides more space for tire stocks than the Marketier. The Marketier could be used if the station were not equipped with standard shelving and in a Class 3 station this would be up to the dealer. The Marketier could also be used in any Class 2 special design station which might have three or more service bays.

If it is your feeling that the sacrifice of existing accessory shelf space in the display room for the sales chart frames with no other advantage gained in tire storage space has merit, a case might be worked up to present to the Sales Development Committee for consideration since this is a course that would be necessary to revise the present Operations Department program. Please advise if you want us to try this.

WJB:avg

(Written in margin) I think selling space is more important than storage space. The sales room doesn't provide adequate treatment for product having 50-70% of TBA volume.

A Re-Statement of Atlantic's TBA Policy

Dear Sir:

The Federal Government is investigating all TBA relationships between certain tire companies, oil companies and their dealers.

Do you have a good TBA deal with The Atlantic Refining Company? Or are you forced against your will to carry a particular line of TBA? This seems to be the question involved.

In the Spring of 1951, The Atlantic Refining Company presented to you for your free acceptance or rejection a TBA sales program which long and intensive research had indicated would yield the greatest profit to you and would best serve the interest of the motoring public.

For the sales assistance which it renders, The Atlantic Refining Company receives in return a commission ranging from 5% to 10% from the tire company. Up to now, this barely covers the expenses involved.

We consider this arrangement with you businesslike and entirely proper and it is to our mutual interest that we so inform the public.

I consider it our duty to recommend to you, those services and products which experience and honest research have proven best for you and your customers.

However, when we originally adopted this program, I wrote to you and to our sales force stating that this was an elective program. I now reiterate—that this is Your program, instituted for Your benefit—Yours to accept or reject.

Yours very truly,

D. T. Colley.

To All Atlantic Dealers

No Forcing

The Roosevelt Small Business Committee recently completed its nationwide investgation of Supplier-Dealer relations.

As we understand it, two main points concern the Committee, namely (1) Short-Term Dealer Leases; and (2) considerable doubt that Suppliers' home office policy of not forcing Dealers to buy certain items was actually being followed by the Suppliers' field organizations.

Over two years ago—voluntarily, without pressure of any kind, and months before any other Supplier in the Industry—your Company adopted a Long-Term Dealer Lease Policy. Substantial expenditures of money, time and effort have been made to assure that the policy was fully understood. The same course of action has been followed with respect to our long-standing policy of not forcing Dealers to buy certain items.

If any of our people at any time insist on your buying any certain products or merchandise against what you feel

Attention: Mr Leon Serven
Assistant Comptroller

Gentlemen:

A brief explanation is deemed necessary in connection with the attached G-1204.

Because the sales program did not get fully under way until the middle of June, and the necessary details in setting-up supply points, establishing credit limits, etc, plus the fact that our District books close on the 20th, sales credited for the month of June represent only a small fraction of the total actually made to Atlantic accounts.

These sales will, however, be picked up in due and reported, and we are confident that a satisfactory volume of business will be shown.

Very truly yours,

GOODYEAR

Gives you real facts on the Profits Available

HERE'S A WORTH WHILE OPPORTUNITY

Are you selling your share?

A recent study of the motoring public proves that you should be selling a good percentage of your regular customers their entire needs for TBA merchandise.

This program will show you your potential sales — let you know if you're getting your share. This means profits which you can figure very closely.

TBA IS VITAL TO YOUR GASOLINE BUSINESS.

Most important to you — you must offer TBA merchandise to your customers, if you hope to retain and increase your gasoline business.

T B A IS A NATURAL FOR SERVICE STATIONS

Service stations are important factors in the distribution of tires, batteries and accessories. It's a natural — every time a tankful of gasoline is consumed by the customer, his car is using up its tires, battery and accessories . . . the need for T B A is created in direct proportion to gasoline consumed. Your regular customers visit you frequently while using up these products; you are first to know about the need for replacements . . . and you have the first chance to make the sale.

Merchandisers who are slow to recognize this trend — already accepted by leading dealers — will find it difficult to keep their regular gasoline customers. Motorists will buy where they can get complete service: petroleum products, plus tires, batteries and accessories. The business is yours for the asking!

BUT, SERVICE STATION OPERATORS ARE FED UP WITH FLASHY STATISTICS

"Super" inventory controls . . . Potentials . . . so called "Simple" merchandising schemes with over-optimistic graphs and figures that would take a platoon of accountants to interpret . . . sales projections from some "Mahogany Desk" are seldom welcome news to the service station operator. SO, LET'S THROW-OUT THE COMPLICATED STATISTICS AND GET DOWN TO EARTH WITH A CLEAN PLAN THAT ANSWERS ALL THE QUESTIONS.

GOODYEAR HAS A PLAN BASED ON ACTUAL SALES EXPERIENCE OF THOUSANDS OF SERVICE STATION OPERATORS

A profitable business in tires, batteries and accessories is built on giving the customer what he wants when he wants it. Goodyear has evolved a merchandising policy which offers to Service Station Dealers a line of the fastest moving tires, batteries and accessories providing plus profits . . . with PROMPT REPLENISHMENT of out-of-stock merchandise.

THE PLAN IS SHORT, SIMPLE, AND EASY TO FOLLOW. According to sales records available to us, the needs for service stations can be fitted into three common gallonage brackets. For each bracket, a group of popular tires, batteries and accessories has been determined to best suit their needs. Thus, the service station carries a streamlined stock . . . prompt replenishment is made. Warehousing is simplified for both the supplier and the service station. The need for replacements is automatically forecasted . . . the danger of uncertain turnover is eliminated.

MERCHANDISE CARRIED IN STOCK IS BASED ON GALLONAGE

This step by step plan will answer all the questions!
What is the market for Tires, Batteries and Accessories?
What does the consumer want?
Where does he buy?
What opportunities does this offer the service station dealer?
How much investment is needed?
How much profit?
How much inventory?

PLANNING

in Tires, Batteries and Accessories

HERE IS WHAT ALL MOTORISTS WILL BUY THIS YEAR

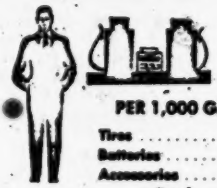
TIRES
$860,200,000

BATTERIES
$329,875,000

ACCESSORIES
$680,041,000

What will be your share of this market?

Take a look at what each motorist will probably buy this year



PER 1,000 GALLONS GASOLINE

Tires	$37.08
Batteries	14.22
Accessories	29.25
Total	$80.55

The average motorist will drive his car 9600 miles and will buy 640 gallons of gasoline. The sale of gasoline automatically creates a demand for T B A merchandise. That business is yours if you go after it.

PER CAR PER YEAR

Tires	$23.73
Batteries	9.10
Accessories	18.82
Total	$51.65

The potential for each motorist stresses the importance of regular customers. Your total annual potential is easy to figure . . . just multiply your total customers by the per car average given above.

What are the opportunities for the Service Station Dealer this year?

Studies of actual performance show that service station TBA sales break down as follows:

TIRES - TUBES	46.0%
BATTERIES	14.4%
ACCESSORIES	39.6%

Accessories break down as follows:

Seat Covers	28.5%	Battery Cables	3.3%
Mufflers	12.2%	Wiper Arms	2.5%
Spark Plugs	11.8%	Wiper Blades	4.0%
Lamp Bulbs	4.2%	Mirrors	1.7%
Oil Filters	5.8%	Fan Belts	2.5%
Polishes—Waxes	3.4%	Radiator Hose	4.2%
Radiator Chem.	3.4%	Miscellaneous	6.3%

Past experience with thousands of service stations shows that they are actually buying from us and selling for every 1,000 gallons of gasoline pumped an average of . . .

TIRES AND TUBES	$23.65
BATTERIES	7.25
ACCESSORIES	10.40
TOTAL	$41.30

Exceptionally sales-minded stations, with the same gallonage, are exceeding these figures month after month.

Here are the facts taken from most recent sales records of thousands of service stations selling TBA merchandise

AVERAGE ANNUAL SALES PER STATION SELLING 10,000 GALLONS OF GASOLINE PER MONTH

TIRES	$2838.00
BATTERIES	870.00
ACCESSORIES	1248.00
TOTAL	$4956.00

Service stations selling T B A products, with an average of about 10,000 gallons per month, have been selling in accordance with the above figures. It is conservative to estimate on the above basis because many dealers can, and do, exceed these figures. High pressure sales efforts are not essential. To do the job requires only friendly suggestive selling and an inventory that satisfies the motorists needs promptly.

WHAT IS THE PROFIT?

LET'S FIGURE YOUR PROFIT IF YOU DO ONLY AN AVERAGE JOB

1. Determine the annual gallonage of your station — let's say it is 120,000 gallons.
2. Your average sales based upon actual past performance should be —

TIRES	$2,838.00
BATTERIES	870.00
ACCESSORIES	1,248.00
	$4,956.00

3. Average margin 28% Est. (Based on proper merchandising of used tires, accessories and batteries)
4. 28% X $4,956.00 = $1,387.68 profit
5. Consider — the average service station is doing this today. You can easily surpass it by proper stocking and sales effort.

HOW MUCH INVESTMENT NEEDED?

To do an average job you must carry an adequate well balanced stock

See Page 5 for three different Dealer Suggested Stocks and inventory check lists. The selection of items and quantities is based upon actual experience on the movement of this merchandise through service stations.

They are selected to give you the maximum return on the lowest possible investment. The recommended stock has been held down to a very conservative level. Experience proves that many inventories much higher have proven profitable.

Select the assortment corresponding to your gallonage and most suitable to your facilities. Keep the inventory in balance and you are well on your way to this additional profit. Of course, you can always improve upon the average by adding the many optional plus profit items which are shown in the Goodyear Car & Home Catalog.

These selections eliminate the guess in what you should carry in stock. The quantities indicated are in direct proportion to actual sales performance. Supplement your present inventory with the items needed to balance your stock.

IT'S EASY TO SELECT A BALANCED STOCK

1 Assortment is for the average service station pumping less than 10,000 gallons of gasoline per month. Every service station should have these automotive necessities.

2 Assortment is for the larger gallonage service station pumping from 10,000 to 15,000 gallons of gasoline per month.

3 Assortment is for the larger gallonage service station pumping over 15,000 gallons of gasoline per month.

Your costs on these inventories are surprisingly low. Observe the following close estimate:

Tires and Tubes	$435.00	Tires and Tubes	$803.00	Tires and Tubes	$1,450.00
Batteries	131.00	Batteries	205.00	Batteries	375.00
Accessories	250.00	Accessories	525.00	Accessories	850.00
Total	$816.00	Total	$1,533.00	Total	$2,675.00

DO YOU OPERATE A SERVICE STATION OR JUST A "GAS" STATION?

The difference is the profit you make!

Goodyear's T B A Plan has made Service Stations out of thousands of "Gas" Stations from coast to coast. Here's why...

GOODYEAR has:

1 An organized T B A Plan

2 The world's most acceptable T B A Products

3 The widest distribution of T B A Merchandise

4 The most experience with oil company marketing

3291 /1

THE GOODYEAR TBA PLAN

1 Is tailored to fit YOUR individual requirements.

No need to guess at what items to order. Only the best selling items are on your shelves. There's no guesswork involved.

2 Simplifies your inventory problems— provides the "right" items at the "right" time.

You do only the selling. Goodyear provides you with a STOCK GUIDE that enables you to keep salable merchandise, in the right quantities, in stock at all times.

3 Can increase your profits 30 to 50%

4 It is short, simple and easy to follow

IN A NUTSHELL . . .

Goodyear offers Service Station Operators the world's first-choice line of tires and tubes. These are the tires that are preferred most and bought by more people than any other kind. Goodyear Batteries, both wet and dry charge, give the dependable service that makes and keeps your customers yours. Goodyear Car and Home Merchandise is the best and most acceptable of all national brands available.

With all the advantages of proven, customer accepted T B A products, Goodyear provides merchandising assistance based on many years of sound experience . . . plus prompt replenishment of out-of-stock merchandise.

BA offers you a great opportunity

Today, more tires, batteries, and accessories are sold by Service Stations than any other type of retailers. You can get your share, and more sales and more profits, if you—

1 OBSERVE your customers' needs and ASK for their business.

2 STOCK enough and stock the RIGHT kind of merchandise.

3 Keep your merchandise well DISPLAYED and COMPETITIVELY priced.

4 SERVICE the products you sell, properly.

THE Market FOR TBA THIS YEAR

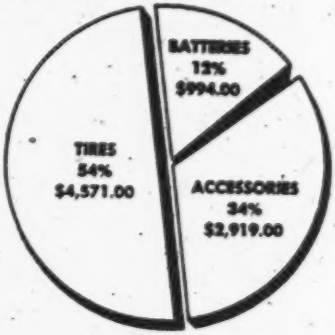
Based on U.S. Government census of the Service Station Business, this is what should be sold by Oil Company Outlets handling TBA.

The national average of T B A retail sales per station handling T B A merchandise will be—

$8,484.00 PER STATION

The average of $8,484.00 total T B A retail sales per station is divided among T B A products like this—



AVERAGE SERVICE STATION
(10,000 to 20,000 gallons per month)
TBA SALES PER 1000 GALLONS

Tires and Tubes	$32.44
Batteries	7.05
Accessories	20.72

How much investment needed?

Conveniently located Goodyear warehouse and Supplying Dealer stocks minimize the need for large inventories in your station.

Here is an accurate formula of dollar investment required, determined by YOUR gasoline sales.

One of these two classifications will eliminate guessing how much you should invest and what quantities of T B A you should stock.

For the AVERAGE Service Station

The investment for stations selling under 20,000 gallons of gas per month should be based on these AVERAGE station cost figures.

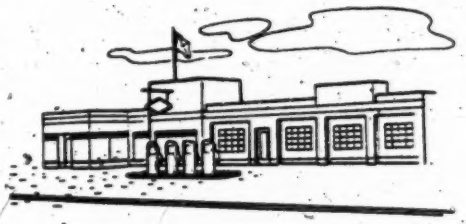
Per 1000 gallons of gas YOU sell	Cost
Tires and Tubes	$24.01
Batteries	4.93
Accessories	13.47
Investment per 1000 gallons	$42.41

EXAMPLE: Station pumping 11,700 gallons per month.

Tires and Tubes	— 11,700 gals. x $24.01 =	$280.92
Batteries	— 11,700 gals. x $ 4.93 =	57.68
Accessories	— 11,700 gals. x $13.47 =	157.60
Total Monthly Investment		$496.20

For the HIGH GALLONAGE Station

High gallonage stations (20,000 gallons or more per month) can follow the same formula with these average cost figures.



Per 1000 gallons gasoline	Cost
Tires and Tubes	$19.52
Batteries	3.57
Accessories	10.18
Total investment per 1000 gals.	$33.27

EXAMPLE: Station pumping 31,000 gallons per month.

Tires and Tubes	— 31,000 gals. x $19.52 =	$605.12
Batteries	— 31,000 gals. x $ 3.57 =	110.67
Accessories	— 31,000 gals. x $10.18 =	315.58
Total Monthly Investment		$1,031.37

Experience, based on industry turnover, shows that the opening inventories for new stations starting a T B A program should be approximately twice the monthly averages shown.

profit ?

The amount of profit you make is entirely up to YOU.

The answer is to SELL and SERVICE.

T B A profit
"per 1000 gallons of gasoline" sold, by the AVERAGE station,

	COST	RETAIL
Tires and Tubes	$24.01	$32.44
Batteries	4.93	7.05
Accessories	13.47	20.72
	$42.41	$60.21

$60.21 — $42.41 = $17.80 Profit per 1000 gals.

12,000 gallons per month — $213.60 PROFIT
144,000 gallons per year — $2,563.00 PROFIT

The profit for HIGH GALLONAGE stations

	COST	RETAIL
Tires and Tubes	$19.52	$27.88
Batteries	3.57	5.33
Accessories	10.18	15.66
	$33.27	$48.87

$48.87 — $33.27 = $15.60 Profit per 1000 gals.

31,000 gallons per month — $483.60 PROFIT
372,000 gallons per year — $5,803.20 PROFIT

This profit is purely from merchandise sales.

In addition, extra profit is earned from the servicing of these products — such as tire and tube repair, tire switching, battery charging and rentals, seat cover installation, wheel balancing, etc.

modern merchandising modern equipment
Plus good service

CREATE SALES.

Make the most of your available display space with these sales-building, space-saving T B A fixtures.

They are compact . . . they are versatile . . . they display your merchandise front and center . . . they increase sales.

Tires are set at eye-level . . . all the other merchandise is in easy reach . . . the fixture puts the products in sight and in your customers' minds.

These fixtures can be used free-standing or attached to the wall. They are modern and attractive; of rugged steel construction; shelves and tire cradle are adjustable; they are flexible for almost any group of merchandise; the baked-on, enamel finish is easy to clean and wears through long, rugged service.

These display units are available in Eight-foot and Twelve-foot sizes. These are display and selling units expertly planned and created by Goodyear technicians to do a specific job of selling T B A products better. You can order these units through your regular Goodyear source.

New Tire

MERCHANDISI

New Tire sales represent more than half of your total T B A dollar volume.

Since your tire sale prospects are the people who drive up to your gas islands, your apron and court displays and promotions of new tires are your strongest and most direct appeal.

Mass product display is time proven . . . the best examples are the uses of mass product displays in super markets and chain stores. Mass display demands attention . . . it stimulates buying impulses by creating the impression of an active operation . . . a good place to deal.

USED TIRE MERCHANDISING

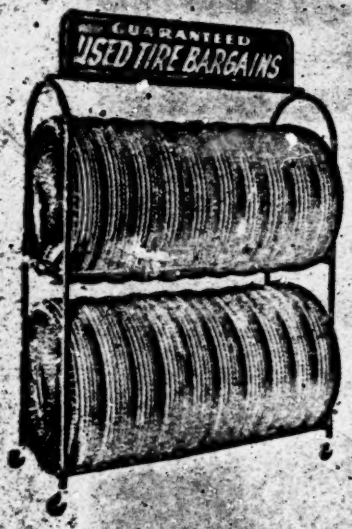
Almost every new tire sale involves the trade-in of a used tire. A good part of your profit is tied up in the used tire until you sell it. The used tire can be sold, in many cases at a price greater than the trade-in allowance . . . if you merchandise it right.

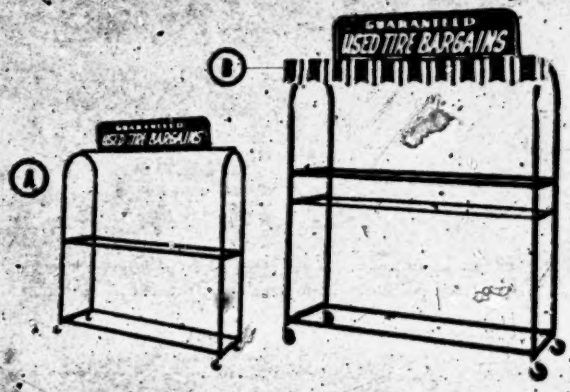
DRESS UP USED TIRES

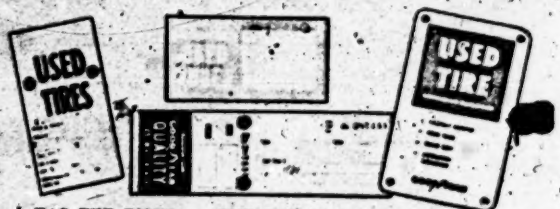
For profitable used tire turnover, follow this tested program:

1. Buy trade-in tires at the right price.
2. Re-condition all used tires that are still serviceable. Clean and dress them. Re-groove or recap those with sound bodies that are smooth. Scrap all others.
3. Set a price on used tires that matches or beats your competition.
4. Guarantee your used tires to give satisfactory service . . . and back it up!
5. Display clean, dressed used tires on your service court. Tag each tire with the price, size, and brand clearly shown. Group tires by sizes and price for easy comparison.
6. SELL . . . sell aggressively. Identify your used tires with a large sign or banner reading "GUARANTEED USED TIRES $1.00 and up". Spot the display prominently. Use the classified ads in your local newspaper . . . ASK FOR THE BUSINESS.

DRESS UP USED TIRE DISPLAYS THEY WILL SELL BETTER







A Only 22" wide, 37" long and 69" high with a large 12" by 48", double-faced metal sign . . . mounted on easy rolling casters . . . holds twenty tires . . . equipped with lock chains.

B Holds 24 tires and 14 tube boxes . . . stands 75" high, 22" wide, and 56" long . . . 12" by 48" double-faced metal sign . . . mounted on easy rolling casters . . . colorful awning . . . lock chain.

These Used Tire Display Merchandisers are available from Goodyear or your Goodyear supply point.

TAG THE TIRES . . . PUT THE FACTS ON THE TIRES — Goodyear offers you these tags to help you do a full selling job. Order them from Goodyear or your Goodyear supply point.

SERVICE IS A MAJOR REQUISITE OF MUCH TBA SELLING

Tires and tubes must be mounted . . . batteries installed or charged . . . spark plugs, oil filters, fan belts, wiper blades, auto lamps, fuses, and a long list of other accessories must be serviced.

Modern, labor-saving, time-saving equipment allows you to do these services quickly and efficiently.

With the right equipment you can—Reduce actual labor
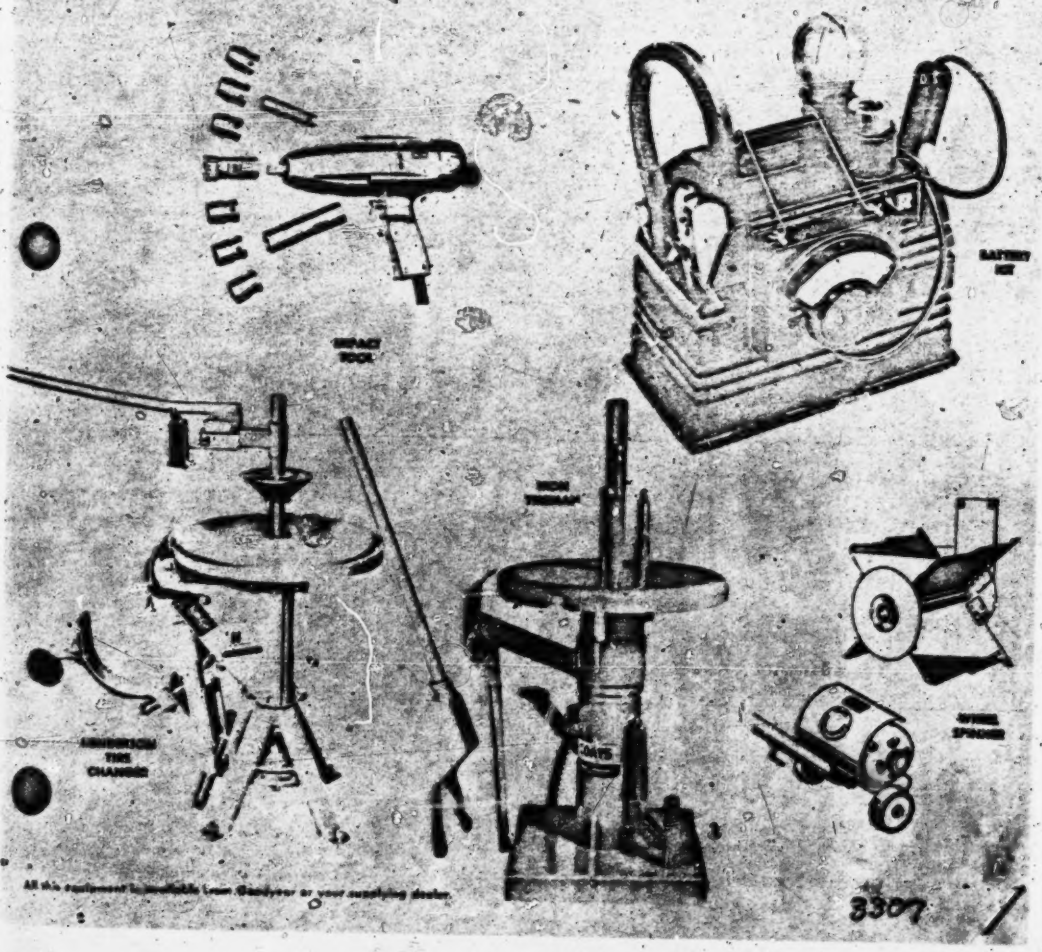
Do a neater job
Protect the customers' property
Impress the customer favorably with fast, efficient service
Saves time . . . lets you do more jobs . . . make more profit



All this equipment is available from Gardner or your supplying dealer.

To help you SELL

NATIONAL ADVERTISING . . . Goodyear's national advertising program is by far the largest in the industry. Every one of your customers is barraged and pre-sold by thousands of Goodyear sales messages every day, every week, every month through magazines, newspapers, radio, and television. These are the messages that help you sell more Goodyear products.

PROFIT TIPS . . . 5 times a year these publications are issued. Profit Tips provide you with a recommended sales and merchandising program for each peak sales period. It previews new selling aids, merchandising ideas and best-selling items to be featured during these peak seasons. Profit Tips are supplied at no charge.

T B A MANUAL and GOODYEAR CAR & HOME MERCHANDISING CATALOG . . . The T B A Manual is issued once a year. It provides complete, accurate specifications and code numbers of all major T B A lines. It is a quick cross-reference between other manufacturers' part numbers and the Goodyear code number for each part. The Goodyear Catalog covers a wide selection of auto accessories and Car and Home merchandise and is available in time for it every year.

FREE TRAINING MATERIAL . . . Product folders, brochures, product data sheets describe the selling features of the Goodyear tire line. You can increase TBA sales by using these use-proven selling and service methods both in training employees and selling the customer.

In addition, Goodyear has a library of sales training films and meeting guides available upon request.

TIRE BUYER'S GUIDE . . . This is your counter sales manual that is jam-packed with important, dramatic sales clinchers on Goodyear's complete line of Tires, Tubes, and Batteries. Every employee can use it effectively to guide a sales presentation to your customers. It makes sure the right sales points are said every time. Cost — $1.40 complete — including the handsome, loose-leaf binder.

SMALL PACKAGE DISPLAY SERVICE . . . Your point-of-purchase "sell" — a continuous service that keeps your displays current and tied-in with Goodyear Major-Nation-Wide tire sale events. It is mailed to you 4 times a year . . . May, July 4th, Labor Day, and October. The complete service for the full year at less than a dollar each, delivered.

Mr. G. B. Gason-Niebling
Carlisle St. & Hunting Park Ave.
Phila. Pa.

Dear Mr. Gason-Niebling:

In accordance with the terms of your lease with The Atlantic Refining Company dated June 30, 1954, this is to inform you of the faults in compliance with the obligations imposed by that lease.

1. The standard of housekeeping maintained by you is deficient.

2. You do not maintain records adequate enough to reflect financial status and return from various phases of your business.

3. Your hours of operation are not consistent and are not in line with your neighborhood competition.

You are further reminded that, in accordance with the terms of your lease, you have 15 days from the day you receive this notice to remedy these faults; otherwise your lease will have been breached.

Cordially yours,

A. R. Sanporn

Dear Mr. Hoffman:

In accordance with the terms of your lease with The Atlantic Refining Company, dated April 1, 1954, this is to inform you of defaults in compliance with Clause 3 (Purpose and Use Clause) of that lease.

1. The standard of housekeeping established by Atlantic has not been maintained satisfactorily by you.
2. From our observations, we note irregular hours of operation of your station to the point that we believe your market area is not being properly served.
3. You are conducting a repair garage rather than a service station.
4. As a result of this repair work, there are numerous wrecks parked on the property.
5. You are using the premises for the sale of used cars.

You are further reminded that in accordance with the terms of your lease, you have fifteen (15) days from the day you receive this notice to remedy these defaults, otherwise your lease will have been breached.

Yours truly,

The Atlantic Refining Company

Attn: Mr. Leslie Geer

Dear Sir:

Your letter of September 20th, 1954 addressed to Mr. Albert J. Hoffman of North Bergen has been referred to me. After an investigation and inspection of the premises, we have come to the conclusion that there is no reasonable basis for your allegations of defaults under Mr. Hoffman's lease.

The standard of housekeeping appears to be good, and I understand that you have made no effort to take care of any maintenance work or painting of the premises, in spite of requests by the lessee to that effect. The allegation that he is conducting a repair garage is frivolous, as is the assertion that the premises are being used for the sale of used cars. The only used cars on the premises are those belonging to the lessee, and licensed in his name, and being used by him in connection with his business. It is possibly true that a customer's car may be parked here from time to time awaiting service, but I would hardly construe that as a breach.

I would suggest that a little cooperation from your field representative would do a great deal to improve your company's relationships with this dealer. That angle might bear some looking into.

Very truly yours,

/s/ Stanley W. Bradley

Dear Mr. Iacona:

In accordance with the terms of your lease with The Atlantic Refining Company, dated September 28, 1953, this is to inform you of defaults in compliance with the obligations imposed by that lease.

1. The standard of housekeeping maintained by you is deficient.
2. The efficiency of services performed at your station is not on a par with competition.
3. You have not met the minimum requirements for display.
4. Personnel are poorly trained.
5. You do not have a regular program for expanding sales, involving direct mail campaigns, personal solicitation, etc.
6. You do not maintain records adequate to reflect financial status and return from various phases of your business.

You are further reminded that, in accordance with the terms of your lease, you have fifteen (15) days from the day you receive this notice, to remedy these defaults; otherwise, your lease will have been breached.

Attention: A. R. Sanborn

Dear Sir:

Please be advised that I represent Mr. Aniello L. Iacona who operates the station at Providence Road and South Avenue, Secane, Pennsylvania.

Your tenant has handed me your letter of November 12, 1953 outlining six alleged deficiencies under his lease dated September 28, 1953.

I have investigated the facts set forth in your letter, and I have determined that the charges contained therein are without foundation. In fact, it appears that the real reason for the charges in your letter are based on my client's refusal to purchase T. B. A. supplies from Mr. Parris who appears to have a local monopoly on T. B. A. supplies and equipment.

If you persist in the conditions set forth in your letter of November 12, 1953, I shall be obliged to contact the federal authorities dealing with this type of monopolistic practices.

If you have anything further in reference to this case, will you kindly contact me and have your salesman refrain from annoying my client at his place of business.

Francis J. Catania, Esquire
106 East Fifth Street

Dear Sir:

The accusation that Atlantic is threatening lease cancellation to coerce your client into purchasing TBA from a designated source is rejected because

1. It has no basis in suit.
2. Atlantic has not, cannot, and will not coerce Dealers to do, or not to do, anything, at any time.

Perhaps the clearest proof that your client has mislead you lies in the fact that if he remedies, within the period of time designated in the lease, the specified deficiencies in his business performance existing at the time our September 28, 1953 warning letter was issued, the lease will not be cancelled. In fact, I am certain that if he even evidenced an honest intention to improve his business performance, Atlantic would gladly give him both opportunity and assistance.

Atlantic's position is simply this: Atlantic Dealers will lawfully and diligently carry on a first-class competitive service station operation or they will not be Atlantic Dealers. We are confident that our policy and practice are one and the same—and entirely legal. It follows that our concern about informers, as well as threats from potential informers, is nil, as evidenced by the copies of this letter and your correspondence which have been sent directly to the Federal Trade Commission.

Dear Mr. Policastro:

In accordance with the terms of your lease with The Atlantic Refining Company, dated April 1, 1956, this is to inform you of defaults in compliance with Clause 3 (Purpose and Use Clause) of that lease.

1. The standard of housekeeping established by Atlantic has not been maintained satisfactorily by you.

2. From our observations, we note irregular hours of operation of your station to the point that we believe your market area is not being properly served.
3. You are conducting a repair garage rather than a service station.
4. As a result of this repair work, there are numerous discarded parts scattered over the station premises.
5. You have multilated Company property. Specifically, you cut two holes through the overhead door in the wash bay side of the station where we are informed you ran exhaust tubes from cars you were running inside the station.

You are further reminded that in accordance with the terms of your lease, you have fifteen (15) days from the day you receive this notice to remedy these defaults, otherwise your lease will have been breached.

Mr. S. J. Heideman
Manager, T. B. A. Sales
The Atlantic Refining Company
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Dear Mr. Heideman:

It was my understanding when you inaugurated the test on tires and other T. B. A. Products that it was to be conducted on an equitable basis. In the beginning of the test, we had a little difficulty in determining the buying price of some of your dealers and on a few, I will admit, we extended longer discounts than they should have received. However, this has been corrected.

I find now that Firestone in Erie has reclassified some of the dealers there into a larger volume bracket than originally was set up by you. We have been maintaining your program and now find ourselves in a position where our prices are not in line with those being offered by Firestone.

I was of the impression, also, where dealers wanted to continue to handle Lee Tires through us it would be allright for them to do so and we could still have our identification on those locations, however, I find that even though the dealers continue to handle our tires their stations are identified with competitive signs. For instance, in the Newark District our identification is being taken down and Goodyear will be erected even though the dealer still wants to handle Lee Tires.

I personally do not think these are instructions put out by you or your General Office and am of the opinion there may be a misunderstanding as far as your District Offices are concerned.

I am calling this to your attention only with the thought in mind that you have mentioned to me on several occasions that this test would be conducted on an equitable basis.

Very truly yours,

Memorandum For

The Atlantic Refining Company, for a number of years, has operated a Tire, Battery and Accessory Sales Department which has marketed Lee Tires, Exide Batteries and other accessories to Atlantic dealers and jobbers.

Under this arrangement Lee Branches and Sales Organization refrained from selling any Atlantic dealers or jobbers and also refrained from oliciting other oil outlets in the Atlantic area, which covered somewhat spottedly the entire Eastern Seaboard from Maine to Florida.

Atlantic has their marketing area divided into six regions. They have been experimenting in one district each in three regions on a program of eliminating their own T.B.A. Sales Department and made arrangements with two major tire companies to directly solicit by the tire company salesmen and sell, ship and bill the Atlantic Company stations, dealers and distributors. The two major tire companies carried the accounts with the dealers and distributors, serviced the accounts out of their branches or warehouses and paid a commission to Atlantic for the business done. This is a program that two or three of the major rubber companies have had in force for several years with certain oil companies.

In a meeting with the Atlantic management this week they advised us that some of their regional managers preferred this commission or override deal to direct marketing and some preferred the direct marketing method. Atlantic management advised us of this and asked whether we would be willing to modify our contract so that the regions which preferred the commission or override deal could put it in force and the regions that preferred the direct marketing method on Lee could continue the same as heretofore.

Careful study of this proposal was considered by me and in view of our friendly relations with Atlantic and the current tire situation prevailing it was mutually agreed to terminate our contract arrangements now, which frees our branches and sales organization to solicit direct not only Atlantic dealers and jobbers, but also other oil chains, dealers and jobbers in the above mentioned area.

February 20, 1951

To All Atlantic Dealers:

The Atlantic Refining Company has discontinued the direct sales of tires, batteries and accessories from their home office and divisions, to Atlantic dealers. This means that we can now fill your requirements for Lee Tires, Tubes and other products, such as Lee Batteries, directly from our Factory Branches located in your area.

This move will be of great help to you and to your customers. It will mean prompt service and deliveries, and real assistance from our men who are trained in tire sales and in helping dealers sell tires to their customers.

We know that you have been satisfied Lee Tire customers in the past and we know that your customers have also been satisfied—not only because of the superiority of our products, but also by virtue of the Lee Tire Road Hazard Guaranty, which enables you to make any necessary adjustments on the spot.

Our company wants to serve you in every way possible and we believe that under this new set-up both you and your customers will be more pleased with Lee Products and Service.

We would also like to remind you that you are free to handle any products of your choosing. If anyone insists that you discontinue Lee products in preference to some other make, we suggest you contact us.

It will be appreciated if you will fill out the attached post card and send it to us today so that we can have one of our representatives call on you without delay.

Very truly yours,

3378 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 283B-C.

Lee Tire & Rubber Company of New York, Inc.
Conshohocken, Pa.

February 21, 1951

To All Branch Managers:

Effective March 1, 1951 our tire marketing agreement with the Atlantic Refining Company has been cancelled by mutual consent.

Over the past several years Atlantic has been reducing their TBA sales expense and concentrating virtually all of their sales efforts on the various petroleum products which they manufacture. Last April they tested the Goodyear and Firestone Petroleum Sales Program with their dealers and distributors in three Districts. Under this program the Atlantic Refining Co. received a commission on sales to dealers and distributors in these Districts, and all of the sales effort, billing, deliveries, etc. of TBA merchandise was handled by the tire company servicing the particular district.

In the past few days they decided to extend this program to other districts and our Company felt that in view of the lack of aggressive sales effort behind their tire and tube program, we did not care to modify their contract beyond the three preliminary test districts, and accordingly it was mutually agreed that the contract would be cancelled.

This action means that it will be necessary for us to sell, through our branch and distributor sales organization, the tires which, over the past seventeen years, have been sold both by our organization and the Atlantic Refining Co. This is a real opportunity and a challenge, and we have complete confidence that our sales organization is able to take full advantage of the opportunity offered, and to meet the challenge directly.

The Regional Sales Managers have already made arrangements for meetings with their branch organizations, but there are some points which we feel must be emphasized to our Managers and Salesmen. The additional tires which will be made available to our branches must go to new business, and most, if not all, of this new business, will be accounts formerly serviced by the Atlantic Refining Co.

We must take over our share of these accounts if we are going to hold our position in the branch and distributing marketing area. We know that you can take all the tires we can ship you and give them to accounts which you are already selling, but if this is done we will lose the expansion of our branch sales which must take place.

Accordingly, we must insist that each one of our branches in the former Atlantic-Lee dual marketing area, take on enough former Atlantic service accounts to offset the loss of direct Atlantic business.

For your information, the deal Atlantic has made with Goodyear and Firestone will be broken down as follows:

Goodyear	Atlantic Phil. & Suburban Region
	Atlantic New York Region
	Atlantic New England Region
Firestone	Atlantic Eastern Pennsylvania Region
	Atlantic Western Pennsylvania Region
	Atlantic Southern Region

Under this deal Atlantic will receive from Goodyear and Firestone a commission of 7½% on sales to Atlantic jobbers and distributors and 10% on sales to Atlantic 3380 dealers. You and your salesmen must understand this arrangement, since it unquestionably will be discussed with the Atlantic accounts that you are contacting. We think that these accounts will be interested to know that Atlantic receives this substantial commission for what, on the surface, appears to be no effort on their part.

It is quite obvious that Atlantic is expected to put pressure on their dealer and distributor organization, to handle either Goodyear or Firestone Tires in return for this commission. It must be made clear to Atlantic dealers and distributors that they cannot be forced to handle any merchandise, aside from Atlantic petroleum products, which they do not care to handle. There are numerous Court decisions on this subject, and while we fully appreciate the fact that there will be pressure brought to bear on them by Atlantic, the dealer can and should resist this pressure where he wants to handle Lee Tires, Tubes, Batteries, etc.

While the cancellation of the Atlantic agreement was made effective March 1, we will start to solicit Atlantic dealers and distributors immediately upon receipt of this letter. You probably already know the more important Atlantic accounts in your territory and, of course, these should be contacted first. Any information which you may require from time to time can be obtained from your Regional Sales Manager or from the factory Sales Department, and any information which you feel we should have should be forwarded without delay. Speed is of the essence, and you must get your entire sales organization hitting the ball without any delay whatsoever.

Until further notice we want a close record kept of all shipments to Atlantic accounts. This means a record of unit tire and tube shipments and the dollar volume, exclusive of Federal Excise Tax. Identify Atlantic dealers on the monthly purchase reports by the symbol "AR".

We have a partial list of Atlantic accounts which has been made up from the names sent to us on drop shipment orders, and these are being prepared for each branch, and will be forwarded just as quickly as possible. However, you don't have to wait for the list, to start your efforts. We are mailing a letter to this list today, copy of which is attached. Check the classified section of your local telephone directory for the names of additional Atlantic accounts.

Mr. Anthony is working on allocations for this business, and this information will be given to you as soon as available.

We suggest that any orders you accept from Atlantic accounts be for delivery after March 1.

Mr. F. C. Iringer, New York

1. By now you all have the Atlantic Program.
2. We feel that it is best to judge what an Atlantic Account has been getting to dove-tail it into ours.
3. For example their—

1 to 84 tire units would be our Pick-up Dealer at Franchise.

85 to 149 tire units would be our #1 Franchise less 5%.
150 to 399 tire units would be our #2 Franchise less 5-2½%.
400 to 749 tire units would be our #3 Franchise less 10%.
750 or more tire units would be our #4 Franchise less 10-2½%.

They have, as you have seen in their program, a 5% for direct factory shipment on orders for 10 or more tires (or 200 lbs. min.). Purchases limited to two orders a month. It should be noted that where it is practical, this 5% could be eliminated, if it could be done cheaper from a Branch, and with the scarcity of tires, long delays might become necessary as partial shipments might be necessary from a Branch, rather than from the factory.

Please Note: They use the words "Confidential Dealer Cost". This actually is our Franchise—printed on white paper with black ink.

On their program 1% to 5% on "Wholesale", we must check this carefully, for it could have been abused in the past.

Actually what we want to do is to get on the Lee Program and dove-tail their dealers into it. For example, a large account, say $10 to $15 thousand could qualify for our #3 deal of . . .

2½—10% from Franchise on Passenger Tires
5 —10%, and Special 5% on Truck Tires

We want to eliminate all of the direct factory shipments possible, as the factory shortage will cause delays, and will also confuse the special allotment for Atlantic Dealers.

Smaller accounts qualifying for less than our #3 deal should fall into the proper place.

They have had an extra 7½% to some Truck Tire Dealers, as against our Special 5% Truck Tire discount. I feel that 5%, with the market as it is, is sufficient.

Messrs. Garthwaite and Hinderscheid feel that a real test of loyalty of an Atlantic Dealer who is going along with us is that he put up at least one Decal and one Lee Sign, and by all means take on our Battery, and give you an order for a supply of Batteries.

3384 Allocations for Atlantic business, I assume are on the way, and we have a job to do—and do well—by keeping all records accurately that have been requested by the factory. This is serious business, boys, and I am depending on you to do a job.

We will, as I told you, open branches as soon as possible in Syracuse, Hartford and Providence, and they will be opened in this order. In the meantime, your sales force, regardless of their regular duties, must get on this Atlantic solicitation aggressively. When cards are sent to you (showing interest on the part of Atlantic Dealers) get on the job quickly.

I will be "all over the lot" for a while, but don't fail to contact me on anything that you are not clear on.

In analysing salesmen's reports on their calls on Atlantic accounts and with other information that we have, we are doubtful that any of the #2 type stations will stay on Lee tires. Because these stations are leased from Atlantic, some on a month-to-month basis, others on 90 days or longer basis, they are not in a position to take an independent stand and as a result will probably find it expedient to handle Firestone tires.

In the meantime, they will probably not be able to get Firestone tires and get set up with the stock for several weeks. They will be inclined to kid you along in order to get tires from us. It looks to me as though there are going to be plenty of Atlantic distributors and independent dealers who are in a position to go along with us and we cannot afford to take chances with any doubtful #2 stations.

I would caution your salesmen to be very careful before giving tires to those types of stations. We already insist that any Atlantic station continuing with our line must put up and leave up, our identification signs.

This, however, is not the answer to the problem. Many of these stations are already identified by Lee signs and it will probably be several weeks before an effort is made to replace them with Firestone signs so the assurance that our signs will be left up should not be accepted as a criterion but the salesman should carefully analyse the account and make up his own mind as to its possibilities of becoming a permanent Lee account.

Some of these dealers have drop shipment orders in with us now and of course, are anxious to get these tires. Where there is any doubt as to their permanency, have the salesman notify us as we will cancel the drop shipment and cancel the order on hand.

Sincerely,

E. W. McCreary

Regional Sales Managers
& Branch Managers

We attach hereto copy of Atlantic Refining Company's letter of March 1, 1951, which is, in effect, a statement of Atlantic's TBA policy. We particularly call your attention to the last sentence of paragraph 3, which states, "However, your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice."

This should make it clear that Atlantic will permit those dealers and distributors who wish to do so, to continue to handle Lee Tires and other accessories independent of the Firestone or Goodyear program.

In this connection we should point out that this attitude on the part of Atlantic reflects recent Court decisions on the subject of oil company domination of their dealers and distributors, including leased outlets. However, we should also point out that there may be some effort on the part of Atlantic's individual salesmen and District Managers to apply pressure on their organization to follow Atlantic's sponsored program. The dealer or distributor who states that he wishes to continue to handle our products certainly is allowed to do so under this letter, and should be willing to resist any local pressure to do otherwise.

We want to again remind you of the necessity for carefully screening former Atlantic accounts before diverting tires to them during this period of shortages. We believe that there may be considerable delay in getting Atlantic's new TBA program going, and that in the interim period Atlantic accounts will be desperate in their efforts to secure our tires, or for that matter, anybody elses tires. This screening must be done at the local branch level, and will require extreme discretion on the part of you and your salesmen. We think that one of the best yardsticks to determine an Atlantic account's sincerity in his expressed desire to handle Lee Tires and Tubes, is his willingness to be identified as a Lee Tire outlet. Naturally there can be no iron-bound set of rules established to gauge a dealer's sincerity, but we think this is one which merits very careful consideration.

A Statement Of
Atlantic's T.B.A. Policy

Dear Sir:

The Atlantic Refining Company recognizes the trend of the motoring public to depend more and more upon the modern service station as a source of supply for tires, batteries, and accessories. Therefore, we are interested in making available that TBA line which will meet fully the needs of the public and our dealers, since we feel it will mean increased sales of our petroleum products.

The new TBA plan was adopted after a long and thorough study which had the sole purpose of finding out what sales program would mean the greatest sales and profits to the dealer. We found that the dealer could best serve the interests of the public when he was supplied through the extensive distribution system of a major tire company.

Our sales organization has been instructed to explain and demonstrate to you the many advantages of the new TBA plan. They will do so with enthusiasm and conviction because they are confident that it will be advantageous for you to accept it. However, your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice.

Atlantic's growth is dependent upon your opportunity and ambition to expand and succeed. We offer this new TBA plan to you because we sincerely believe it will make your sales and profits grow through better. TBA service to your customers.

Cordially,

As a general thing, we are receiving very few Dealer Contracts on either tires or batteries. It makes me wonder whether we are bothering to sign up a contract with the dealers or not.

In those territories where Atlantic operated, we should be signing a lot of new contracts as we decide to do business with these Atlantic dealers and distributors.

I wrote you previously that we must, in all cases, have a contract, especially on these Atlantic accounts, as well as other new accounts so that the dealer feels that he has a contract or obligation that may prevent him, morally, from signing a contract later with Firestone or some other competitor.

A contract also provides for identification which we also insist upon, especially with Atlantic dealers. Why is it that we do not get more Dealer Contracts if we are making progress in developing new accounts for the future on both batteries and tires.

Wish each of you would drop me a line and let me know just what you are doing about it.

Regional Managers
And Branch Managers

I am attaching hereto copy of letter I wrote to Mr. D. T. Colley, Vice-President in Charge of Sales of The Atlantic Refining Company and also his reply. I want you to keep these letters for your personal guidance. I do not want copies made of them for circulation.

The most important part of the letter received from Mr. Colley is that portion in the third paragraph which reads "it is, of course, proper for those dealers that choose to handle Lee to identify this with signs appropriately placed at the point of display" and also that part in the last paragraph which reads "bring these dealers' names directly to the Regional Manager in whose territory the situation develops, he will see that one of our sales representatives calls on the dealer with one of your representatives and explains our position thoroughly".

Our course of action should be as follows: wherever you anxious to do business with us but is having trouble in find a good dealer handling Atlantic products that is keeping his location identified with Lee decals or Lee signs, you should then refer such name of dealer with address to your Regional Manager. He in turn will take the matter up with the Regional Manager of The Atlantic Refining Co. who will appoint a representative to visit such dealer with you. That is, we do not want to leave this up to our salesmen. We want the Branch Manager to personally visit the dealer with the Atlantic representative. We want to keep this on a Regional Manager level up to the point where a representative of Atlantic is appointed to visit the dealer with our Branch Manager.

In identifying dealers handling Atlantic products, we should place our signs or decals in similar position to where such stations are identified with either Goodyear or Firestone signs.

We have received some complaints from our Branch Managers where Atlantic dealers were identified with Lee identification and this identification was removed by either Goodyear, Firestone or Atlantic representatives. This was the reason we took the matter up directly with the Vice-President in Charge of Sales of The Atlantic Refining Company and the result is the answer attached hereto.

Therefore, it is entirely up to our Branch Managers to see to it that any dealers handling Atlantic products who are anxious to continue handling Lee products are properly identified and where there is trouble in getting the identification up due to our competitors or representatives of The Atlantic Refining Company, these stations should be called to the attention by writing to your Regional Manager.

3396 It is absolutely necessary that these particular leases are screened and we are sure that the dealer wants to handle our products and wants his place of business to be properly identified with Lee identification. I am sure if the dealer handling Atlantic products tells his story to our Branch Manager and the Atlantic representative that the entire matter can be handled very satisfactorily.

If there is anything in this letter that is not absolutely clear to you, get in touch with your Regional Manager immediately.

For the information of the Branches and Regional Managers, I am giving you below the names of the Regional Managers of The Atlantic Refining Company and their addresses:

Mr. Dwight Colley
Vice President In Charge of Sales
The Atlantic Refining Company
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Dear Mr. Colley:

I regret it is necessary to write to you in order to bring to your attention the pressure being exerted on some dealers handling Atlantic Gasoline to discontinue the sale of Lee Tires and Tubes.

This is brought out very vividly by the tactics used by some people in your sales organization. We have received numerous complaints from dealers that have been handling Lee products along with Atlantic Gasoline and Motor Oil for quite a number of years. They have built up a very sizeable volume of business on Lee tires and tubes; they have many satisfied customers whom they have been serving for quite a number of years and from information I personally get from some of them, they have made a very nice profit on the sale of Lee Tires and Tubes.

Although we have had a large number of complaints about the practices used by your sales organization and also some of our competitors, which we are told have been brought about by the sanction of some of your District Managers, we did not feel inclined to say anything to you about it because it was more or less general. However, I have some specific instances here which I think you should definitely know about as I am sure from what you, Mr. Neall and Mr. Heideman told Mr. Garthwaite and I last February, it was not the intention of the Management of The Atlantic Refining Company to force dealers handling Atlantic products to use a particular brand of tire to which the dealer objected.

I am attaching a copy of a memorandum I received from one of the Executives in our sales organization which definitely mentions several locations and which I am sure you will be pleased to know about.

After you have had an opportunity of checking into the above, I would appreciate hearing from you as to whether or not you have issued definite instructions to your sales organization or to some of our competitors to remove Lee identification from dealer locations.

Very truly yours,

W. F. Hinderscheid

Mr. W. F. Hinderscheid
Vice-President in Charge of Sales
Lee Tire & Rubber Company
Conshohocken, Penna.

Dear Mr. Hinderscheid:

Thank you for your letter of July 31. I am certainly glad you wrote to me so frankly.

I am sure that our organization understands fully just what our position is on TBA. We want the dealers to choose the TBA that they want to sell, but we are using all proper sales steps to put before our dealers the advantages of handling either the Goodyear or Firestone line.

You have worked with The Atlantic Refining Company long enough to know our rules regarding the display of unauthorized signs at our service stations. We only permit certain signs displayed in approved manner on the service stations which we own. It is, of course, proper for those dealers that choose to handle Lee to identify this with signs appropriately placed at the point of display.

I know of no way to settle this problem to your satisfaction except that as you find dealers who make the statement that we will not permit them to handle Lee tires if you will bring these dealers' names directly to the Regional Manager in whose territory the situation develops, he will see that one of our sales representatives calls on the dealer with one of your representatives and explains our position thoroughly.

Very truly yours,

/s/ D. T. Colley

Regional Managers
& Branch Managers

Since writing the attached letter on Friday, I found that Atlantic dealers operating stations controlled by Atlantic can be identified only by one brand of tire and one brand of battery.

In other words, an Atlantic leased station can either be identified by Goodyear or Firestone or Lee or some other brand, but not more than one.

The same applies to batteries. If the stations are identified with Exide batteries, they cannot be identified with Goodyear or Firestone batteries.

I found, also, that their leased stations are not identified by Firestone unless there is an identification order signed by the dealer. In the case of Goodyear, when they sign up for a Goodyear Franchise, Goodyear is automatically permitted to identify that location.

It is very important to keep this in mind as we certainly do not want to make accusations in regard to identification unless they can be definitely backed up.

Attached is information relative to sales made to AR and DAR accounts for the months of March, April, May and June by branches in your Region, showing the number of accounts, volume of business we received, percentage of dollar business each branch did compared with the total dollar volume for the entire branch and the number of tires allocated to the AR and DAR accounts out of the total individual branch allocation.

You can readily see what progress has been made, the number of accounts sold by months and also where the spots are weak and where aggressive work should be done.

I think this is an opportune time to again advise your Branch Managers that they and their Salesmen should again make a complete solicitation of dealers handling Atlantic products. These dealers have now had sufficient time to determine the advantages or disadvantages of handling either Goodyear or Firestone tires. They have had sufficient time to make a comparison of the treatment and service they have received from these companies. By this I mean attention for new sales channels, adjustments, acceptance, etc.

I am sure that some of these accounts that went along with Goodyear or Firestone did so upon the advice from Atlantic and also upon information they received from meetings held by Atlantic, Firestone or Goodyear and it is our opinion that the majority of these accounts that did give Firestone and Goodyear a trial have found they were considerably better off when they were handling Lee products.

With the market beginning to loosen up and more tires being available, we should again put on an extensive drive to sign up dealers handling Atlantic products. I think, also, that the Branch Manager should get out with his salesmen more and call on Atlantic accounts, especially the good ones, as I am sure that in our haste to solicit these accounts last February and March we were skeptical about some and over-looked others. I know a few accounts in particular we had an opportunity to take on but did not because our salesmen felt the Atlantic account would interfere with an account we had already set up. We were also skeptical as to whether or not some of these Atlantic dealers would continue to do business with us when the tire shortage is over. I feel that by a complete solicitation at this time, any account we would sign up now would be serious about handling Lee tires and tubes and will go along with us in the future.

Re: AR and DAR Accounts.

Attached you will find the AR and DAR report for the month of August. A fairly steady pattern is beginning to reveal itself in these reports. Apparently, about 550 AR accounts are being sold on a regular basis. Correspondingly in the DAR classification between 300 and 325 accounts are included. Although there are variations each month in the individual regions, they appear to balance out over a period of months. Total sales are also leveling out to $225,000 per month. This may be worthy of attention since it is only approximately 50% of the dollar volume which had been secured from the Atlantic Refining Company.

Re: AR and D.R Accounts.

Attached you will find the A.R and D.R report for the month of September.

While there are a few less accounts sold as previous months, the sales pattern remains fairly steady.

It begins to be apparent that approximately 25% of the Atlantic Refining business on a dollar basis will be salvaged this year. With the addition of the A&R Accounts approximately 40% should be realized. This would appear to be a good performance since it is known that Electric Storage Battery originally set their goal to hold 25% of Atlantic's business which it now appears we will secure for this year.

Price Information

5. Reason for choosing line of TBA carried: For every $100 month of shelving rent increased $1 per month. Spend 4-5 building up Fram and then Atlantic changes sponsorship and expects its dealers to follow suit.

Has a few Lee tires & catches it for handling them and is asked to get them out of the way.

Had meeting last summer in which dealers were told what to say if the dealers were investigated—at 69th & Marshall morning and afternoon sessions. Place called Kastiks.

When Atlantic switched to GYT it just didn't go over, and meetings were held to sell program. Dealers told to tell investigators that Atlantic was only asking them to buy. That they were not forced into it. Told in so many words that he had to go along with TBA program or else.

If switched over to Goodrich is certain that lease would be cancelled. Not even diplomatic.

I certify that the information recorded above and which I have read was given by me in response to the questions of the Attorney Examiner, Federal Trade Commission whose name appears below, and said information is to the best of my knowledge factual and correct.

Dear Mr. Connell:

The third district has been chosen for our experiment on the commission resale program. This is not an expansion of this plan as, if you will recall, our original discussion indicated there would be three districts on the program. It will be of interest to you to know that the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company has been selected for this experiment in our Newark, New Jersey District. As Atlantic will no longer offer your products in this area, we are attaching a map indicating the boundaries of the Newark territory.

The following is a result of a survey of ten Atlantic stations which I have covered recently:

Lenahan & McKaig
12th & Grove Streets
Jersey City, N. J.

I called on this account December 6 with Mr. Van Tuno to secure their battery business. I was advised that they stock no batteries at this station.

Lenahan & McKaig
14th & Erie Sts.
Jersey City, N. J.

This station carried a stock of 5 batteries, 4 of which were Goodyear and 1 Exide. They advised that they do very little battery business but we endeavored to impress upon them the desire for stocking Exides. This account will be served by Electric Battery Co.

DeFerrari Bros.
Washington Terr. & Grandview Blvd.
Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

This account had 9 batteries in stock of the following types: 3 Edison, 3 Ajax, 2 Delco, 1 Presto-o-Lite, 1 Exide. They advised that the Edison and Presto-Lite are bought locally from Miller Auto Gear and Parts in Rutherford, N. J. I will have reliable Magneto call on this account.

Randolph Jensen
Jackson & Gordon Sts.
South River, N. J.

This account carried no batteries in stock but picks up the Exides they use from Hardy Tire Supply.

Joseph Wash
254 South Street
Newark 5, N. J.

This account carried 6 Goodyear batteries purchased from R. A. McDonough. 1 Willard and 2 Scranton batteries. When I called December 6 with Mr. Van Tuno, the proprietor advised us that he has to stock Goodyears since this is a leased station.

Rudzik Bros.
Canal Road
South Bound Brook, N. J.

This account had 5 Rebat, 1 Delco, 1 Goodyear, and 1 Lee Battery in stock. They advised that they are primarily interested in only cheaper grades of batteries but I requested Bound Brook Auto Supply to call on this account and endeavor to sell them on Exides.

3457 Brook Chevrolet Co.
Main St.
Bound Brook, N. J.

I called on this account on Nov. 30. They are no longer affiliated with Atl. Refining and buy Delco batteries through United Motor Service.

Mr. Joseph Kilsby
c/o Bakelite Corp.
River Road
Bound Brook, N. J.

This account buys batteries on a quotation basis as needed.

Joseph Marino
35th & Market St.
Paterson 3, N. J.

I called on this account December 13 and found that they had 5 Goodyears and 1 Exide battery which was purchased from Clement DePope. They advised that the majority of the batteries they sell are still Exides but do not stock any number because of constant pressure being exerted by the salesman for the Atlantic Refining Co.

Clement P. DePope
E. 33rd Street & McLean Blvd.
Paterson 4, N. J.

This is an Exide W account, through Reliable Magneto. They had the following batteries in stock: 20 Exides, 13 Goodyears (purchased from Farley Glass Co., Paterson) 3 Lee, 1 Willard. This account supplies majority of the Atlantic stations in the Paterson vicinity with Exide batteries.

Charles C. Smith
155 Front St. & E. Clinton Ave.
Tenafly, N. J.

I called on this account on December 13 with Mr. Orville Melchior and found that they had 14 Auto Lite and 1 Goodrich battery in stock. The 14 Auto Lite are purchased on a preferred distributor basis from Fleet Tire Co. We do not believe that this station's volume is sufficient to meet this price.

Gentlemen:

We are most anxious to know if you have at present a direct dealer selling organization, or contemplating in the near future the inclusion of such a group in your marketing plans. In short, have you given any consideration to a battery program for direct dealer merchandising by you similar to the commission plan offered to national oil accounts by certain tire manufacturers?

If at all possible we would appreciate a reply by Wednesday, December 20.

Dear Mr. Parks:

Currently all Exide automotive replacement battery sales to dealers are made through our Wholesale Distributors, thus affording prompt delivery through many warehouses.

Your letter of December 15 inquires as to our plans for a commission arrangement to be offered national oil accounts on direct sales to dealers. We believe our experience with this type of operation in past years should be of great value to you. Therefore, I suggest that immediately after the first of January you arrange for a meeting with interested members of your organization for a complete discussion of the many phases of this subject.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes for the holidays, I am

Sincerely yours,

Arrangements have been completed to meet with Messrs. Heideman and Bergh of the Atlantic Refining Company at 10:00 a.m. Monday, January 15, in Mr. Heideman's office.

As per my conversation with you, the meeting is for the purpose of discussing the possibility and advisability of our making some arrangements for the Atlantic Refining Company covering the sale of Exide batteries direct to Atlantic dealers and providing a commission arrangement to the Atlantic Refining Company. Your past experience with a somewhat similar arrangement with the Texaco Company I am sure will prove very valuable at the meeting.

Dear Mr. Connell:

I am confirming our phone conversation of February 2nd to the effect that in the month of February the Firestone Commission Plan of marketing T.B.A. is thereafter to be employed by Atlantic in the State of Ohio and in the Panhandle section of the State of West Virginia.

Although in effect, this action is an extension of the Commission Plan, it is being undertaken as a practical solution to several aggravating problems and not as a direct result of the tests currently being conducted by us.

Cordially yours,

S. J. Heideman

Mr. R. Whitehurst

Mr. S. J. Heideman, T.B.A. manager of the Atlantic Refining Company called today to give me advance confidential information regarding a decision made this morning by top management of the Atlantic Refining Company regarding future handling of T.B.A. sales to Atlantic dealers.

Effective as quickly as the changeover can be made, all T.B.A. sales to Atlantic dealers will be handled on a commission arrangement. It is planned that four of the six regions will operate under the Firestone arrangement and the remaining two under the Goodyear commission plan. Under both plans, the Atlantic Refining Company will be paid approximately 10% commission on all sales to Atlantic dealers and 8% on all sales to Atlantic distributors on the items handled by Firestone and Goodyear; tires, batteries, accessories, refrigerators, electrical appliances, toys, garden supplies, sporting goods, etc. Orders will be written either by Firestone or Goodyear who will handle the entire transaction, including delivery, credit, billing, etc., leaving the Atlantic Refining Company with only the problem of promoting sales.

The Atlantic Refining Company first sold Exide batteries under a Wholesale Distributor contract in 1937 and then only in their Philadelphia Division. Their T.B.A. program was greatly enlarged both as to the items sold and territory covered until in 1950 the total T.B.A. sales amounted to between nine and ten million dollars.

The accounting procedure set up by the Atlantic Refining Company was such that expenses charged against T.B.A. sales appeared to make this operation unprofitable. As a result of this and because the top management of the Atlantic Refining Company believed that their own men should participate only in the sales of petroleum products, it was decided early in 1950 to try out the Firestone and Goodyear commission plan in three Atlantic Refining Company districts. Firestone in the Erie, Pennsylvania and Wilmington, Delaware districts and Goodyear in the Newark, New Jersey district. We were advised of this move and accordingly made plans to retain the Exide business in these districts. We actually materially increased our business in the Erie district during 1950 and were reasonably successful in the Wilmington and Newark districts. Atlantic Refining Company's own records for the year show a greater increase in the sale of batteries in the district continuing to sell Exides than in the district changed over to Firestone and Goodyear. I have been told that a complete report was submitted to management indicating that the plan was not successful; however, since management desires to get out of active participation in T.B.A. sales, the recommendation was made that the commission 3472 plan be tried in one of their six regions.

Tires being the largest dollar item of T.B.A. sales, the plan was discussed yesterday afternoon with Lee Tire and Rubber Company, whose product they have handled in all territories except the three districts on the commission plan. Lee apparently made it clear that if Atlantic were planning further expansion of the commission plan, they had no further interest in the Atlantic Refining Company's business. Both Firestone and Goodyear had previously been approached regarding a plan whereby they would sell tires only to the Atlantic Refining Company accounts on a commission arrangement and had flatly refused such a plan insisting that either the complete program or none be sold by them. Naturally the immediate need for a tire program as a result of Lee's decision precipitated Atlantic Refining Company's move. As a result, they have decided, as outlined above, to go 100% on the commission plan.

Mr. Heidman has informed me that we will receive Atlantic Refining Company's formal notification of the change in their program.

Mr. R. Whitehurst

My letter of February 14 advised you of the Atlantic Refining Company's change in policy for the handling of TBA sales to their dealers. Additional information has been received from the Atlantic Refining Company and steps have been taken with our branches to insure our retaining the maximum possible share of this business.

All Field branches concerned—Atlanta Boston, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Washington—were notified of the change and instructed to immediately adjust their sales schedules so that their number one job would be complete coverage of the Atlantic Refining Company dealers and distributors. All Atlantic Refining distributors of TBA products are to be personally contacted by our men in an effort to sign them up either direct as wholesale distributors or as wholesalers, depending upon their operation and the volume of business involved. Letters will go out from all branches to wholesale distributor management and salesmen advising of this change and recommending that they immediately contact all Atlantic dealers in their territory and aggressively solicit their Exide battery business. The branches will make up a list of Atlantic Refining Company dealers through the Advertising Department and have them placed on our prospect dealer list to be included in the eight mailings already planned.

Mr. D. T. Colley, Vice-President and General Manager of the Atlantic Refining Company, has already requested their Purchasing Department to formally notify us of the cancellation of our Warehouse Distributor contract with them. All other TBA suppliers will be similarly notified. There has been a change in the original plan to have Firestone handle the commission arrangement in four districts and Goodyear in two. The current plans call for three regions each—Firestone in Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania and the Southern Regions and Goodyear in Philadelphia and New Jersey, New York and New England Regions.

Mr. Heideman is now preparing two letters to go out over Mr. Colley's signature, one to all of their dealers and the second to their salesmen, district managers, and regional managers, with which will be enclosed a copy of the dealer letter. I am told that the dealer letter will introduce the Firestone or Goodyear program and explain the Atlantic Refining Company's confidence in the wisdom of their decision. It will, however, state that there is no obligation on the part of the dealer to go along with the program. The final decision as to which TBA items he sells rests with him. The letter to the salesmen and managers will stress the need for good salesmanship and complete confi-3476 dence in the Firestone or Goodyear program but, at the same time, prohibit the use of pressure in influencing the dealer's decision at the risk of the Atlantic Refining Company salesman's losing his position. Atlantic Refining has not agreed to give me copies of these letters, but every effort will be made to pick up copies for our information.

Mr. Colley has clearly indicated to Mr. Heideman that the one TBA item he would prefer to retain is Exide batteries. He likes our company, he likes our way of doing business, and believes our product is one of the best.

Attention: Mr. C. Connell, Manager Automotive Replacement Sales Division.

Gentlemen:

After very careful study, over an extended period, the management of our Domestic Sales Department has decided to accept Firestone and Goodyear marketing deals to supply our dealers with tires, batteries and accessories. To the extent possible we plan to make his new operation effective March 1, 1951.

Our Exide Battery Warehouse Distributor Contract with you dated November 1, 1949, covering Exide Automotive Replacement Batteries, Parts, and Battery Service Equipment, extends to either party the option of cancelling the contract upon 90 days' written notice.

In accordance with the terms of our agreement, we hereby notify you of our desire to cancel same. Because the change, as it affects other products, is being made immediately, we should like you to consider waiving the 90 day period of notice and agree to cancellation as of February 28, 1951.

Our regional sales offices have been instructed to forward to you request for cancellation of all their unshipped orders.

At this time we should like to express our appreciation for the finest kind of cooperation received from your organization over these many years.

To complete the record, may we have your acknowledgment of this letter.

Very truly yours,

J. S. Parks,
Purchasing Agent,.

Attention: Mr. C. F. Bergh

Gentlemen:

We regret to learn that your Domestic Sales Department has decided to use Firestone and Goodyear to supply your dealers with tires, batteries, and accessories. However, as requested in your letter of February 23, 1951, we agree to accept cancellation of your Exide Warehouse Distributor contract as of February 28, 1951 and waive the 90 day cancellation clause.

Our business association since 1937 has been both pleasant and profitable and we hope the many inter-company friendships formed during this period will continue.

Your past performance in the sale of Exide batteries speaks for itself. In the event, at some future date, you contemplate a change from the current arrangements for the sale of batteries, we will welcome the opportunity to discuss a program with you.

Very truly yours,

Our Warehouse Distributor contract with the Atlantic Refining Company, effective November 1, 1949, has been cancelled in its entirety effective February 28, 1951.

All complete or balance orders still unshipped should be cancelled. We should no longer accept batteries for inspection under the 90 day warranty provision of our SGA Policy.

To clear our records, we will require Cancellation-Replacement Sales Agreement, Forms 4072, for every Atlantic Company listing shown on Form 3265, List of Distributors by States and Cities, effective November 1, 1950. Therefore, each individual branch should forward to us cancellation notices for Atlantic Refining Company listings in their territories by return mail. All addressograph plates in branch offices should be immediately destroyed.

A complete list of Atlantic Refining Company accounts will be forwarded to each branch as soon as it is possible to process the list. The complete list of Atlantic accounts will be put on our prospect list and will receive our eight prospect mailings. Therefore, it will not be necessary for you to include the names of Atlantic accounts in the list of dealer prospects you are mailing to the Advertising Division.

Whereas your reports on the retention of the Atlantic Refining Co. accounts show that we are continuing to make numerical progress in signing them up, I cannot get any indication as to the sales strength of the accounts that we are closing. In other words, are we signing the "seventy percenters" who do 30% of the business or are we signing the "thirty percenters" who do 70% of the business? Is there not some way that we can appraise the work we are doing in changing over Atlantic accounts so that we have a definite measure of what success we are obtaining in getting business of Atlantic outlets.

Take one small example: I called on Glenn in Mt. Airy two or three weeks ago and found that he had gone 100% down the line with Atlantic on Goodyear. He naturally would be listed as one Atlantic account but from the volume standpoint he has always been far above average; therefore, we have undoubtedly failed in this single instance to retain a good battery outlet. If your figures could be revamped in some way so that we could know what the battery potentials are of these accounts that we are changing, it would certainly give us some important and factual information.

cc. R. Whitehurst

With further reference to our reports of progress to you of June 18 and 29 and August 7 on our retention of the Atlantic Refining Company accounts, we now submit to you the following definite report of the number of accounts retained by classification as of October 1, 1951:

Branch	No. of Accounts Referred to Branches Original AR List	No. of Accts. Signed—WD	No. of Accts. Signed—W	No. of Accts. Signed—AD	Composite Total
Atlanta	548	—	3	32	35
Boston	526	—	18	292	310
Cleveland	266	3	3	68	74
New York	1094	2	22	418	442
Philadelphia	2696	4	9	567	580
Pittsburgh	1141	—	5	170	175
Washington	525	—	6	57	63
Total	6796	9	66	1604	1679

Comparing this with our previous report, you will note an increase of three additional Wholesalers and 97 Authorized Dealers, making a total gain of 100 acounts, thus we have retained all or part of the business of 24.7% of this customer's accounts.

To evaluate the type of Atlantic account we have been able to retain and in reply to your letter of August 16, 1951, we have had a check made of the key Atlantic accounts, i. e., those who were of sufficient size to receive direct shipment of Lee tires from the Lee factory. This survey indicates that we have retained all or part of the business of 238 of the 1,060 accounts that were considered to be the best Atlantic outlets. This means we have retained 22.5% of the better accounts.

It is evident from the above, therefore, that we have retained approximately the same percentage of the accounts of Atlantic across-the-board as we have their key accounts.

4312 Florida Avenue
Newtown Square, Penna.

December 14, 1955

Mr. Dwight T. Colley
Vice President of Marketing
260 South Broad Street
Phila., Penna.

Dear Sir:

I have received your letter on "Lets talk about gas prices," and I am taking this opportunity to let you know that we have followed your letter to a "T" for the past two years.

The only time that we cheapened our product was back in 1953 when a Company supervisor and salesman told us to drop our price to meet Sunoco's drop. We made a mistake by doing so at that time, but to this day with three other Atlantic stations along with other competitors, we have kept our price where it belonged—at the top. They are all, at this time, selling below our price.

I have lived in this township for almost forty years, and all of my family was raised here. I am a service man, and I am asking no quarter. I have served in both the Army and Navy and in two wars. My sons and I took over the station from its very beginning in 1953 and have worked hard to build up a good community business, first with a product that we are proud of and a service that would be hard to beat.

On November 28, I was notified that my lease with the Atlantic would not be renewed as of December 31, 1955. When a fellow like myself is condemned and told I am on the way out without a letter of explanation of what was wrong, it just doesn't seem fair. I wonder why a large Company is run by such "little" men, who call themselves salesmen and supervisors.

For the past eight months we have had to pump our gas with just one pump, because of a road construction which caused one of our pumps to be removed, and because of this construction we had only one entrance. When the going was tough with the one pump and with the road under construction we worked all the harder to keep our gas and oil sales up around 50,000 gallons a month, which you can see by the company records.

If I have slipped on certain small things as the supervisors told me was the reason for not getting my lease renewed, it was not done to hurt the Company policy or the service that goes with it.

Mr. Colley, selling today is a lot different than back a few years ago. The service man or salesman that 3528 knows where he is going and has good common sense, with his feet on the ground is important, for we to this day have not found a substitute that can replace him.

On my station, we have done more than just sell gas and oil and automobile service, we also have sold the Company that produced our product and this you can verify by a few of our business men and women whose names I am sending you.

I have a list of approximately 470 customers which I am personally sending each a letter stating the facts as I found them in dealing with company supervisors and salesmen.

The following is a list of doctors, brokers, and a lot of other prominent people in our community who are our customers that you can call on to verify the statements in this letter.

Along with my attorney we are asking for a hearing before the NCPR through William D. Snow, General Counselor at Washington, D. C.

3565 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 329.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF MARYLAND.

Kriete Osborn, Sykesville, Maryland,
Plaintiff
vs.
Sinclair Refining Company, 600 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York, 10 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland c/o Corporation Trust Company, Resident Agent, 10 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland, Defendant.
No. 9769.

To the Honorable, the Judges of Said Court:

The Plaintiff, Kriete Osborn, by his Attorneys, Cable and McDaniel, for his complaint against the Defendant, Sinclair Refining Company, alleges as follows:

Description of Plaintiff.

1. That at all times hereinafter mentioned the Plaintiff, Kriete Osborn, was and still is an individual residing at Route 3, Sykesville, Maryland.

Description of Defendant.

2. That at all times hereinafter mentioned the Defendant, Sinclair Refining Company, was and still is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Maine and that it maintains its principal office for the conduct of its business in the City of New York, State of New York, and a division office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 2, Maryland.

Nature of the Business Involved.

3. That at all times hereinafter mentioned the Defendant, Sinclair Refining Company, was a refiner and distributor of petroleum products engaged in inter-state commerce.

3566 4. That from 1936 until May 31, 1956 the Plaintiff operated a drive-in filling and service station at Reisterstown, Maryland, and sold petroleum products of the Defendant in accordance with the contracts to be hereinafter specified.

Article Under Which Action Brought.

5. This action is brought under Sections 4 and 14 of the Act of Congress of October 15, 1914, entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies and for other purposes," as amended and supplemented (15, U. S. C. A. 14, 15) commonly known as the Clayton Act and Section 1 of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890 entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies" (15, U. S. C. A. 1), said Act being commonly known as the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Agreements With Defendant.

6. That on or about the 5th day of May, 1948, the Plaintiff and the Defendant entered into a Lease, whereby the Plaintiff leased a service station located at Reisterstown, Maryland, from the Defendant, and into a Dealer's Sales Agreement providing for the sale of petroleum products with Sherwood Bros., Inc., a Maryland corporation. That on or about the 30th day of December, 1955, the Defendant and Sherwood Bros., Inc. merged, and the Defendant assumed all the rights and obligations of Sherwood Bros., Inc. in the aforesaid Lease and Agreement. The aforesaid service station Lease is attached hereto and made a part hereof marked Plaintiff's Exhibit I; the Agreement is attached hereto and made a part hereof and marked Plaintiff's Exhibit II.

Specific Acts Alleged.

7. That the Plaintiff, in addition to selling gasoline and other petroleum products at said drive-in filling and service station, also sold thereat tires, batteries and other 3567 automobile accessories and parts. Such tires, batteries and other automobile accessories and parts are manufactured by many different manufacturers and are regularly sold and shipped in interstate commerce by such manufacturers to wholesalers and distributors who in turn resell such products to service stations and other retail outlets.

8. That on or prior to 1956, the Defendant entered into agreements with manufacturers of tires, batteries and other automobile parts and accessories pursuant to which such manufacturers purported to sell to the Defendant tires, batteries and other automobile parts and accessories destined for ultimate sale at retail through service stations selling gasoline manufactured by the Defendant. Such agreements were part of an overall plan by the Defendant to compel service station dealers who were selling petroleum products manufactured by it, and particularly those service station dealers who, like the Plaintiff, leased service stations from the Defendant, to sell tires, batteries and other automobile parts and accessories manufactured by such manufacturers with whom the Defendant had so entered into agreements and to restrain such dealers from dealing in competing products manufactured by other manufacturers. The Defendant intended to effect such compulsion by refusing to lease service stations or to sell petroleum products to persons who would not buy such products so manufactured by manufacturers with whom the Defendant had such agreements. Such agreements, together with other agreements accessory thereto, provided that the manufacturers of such products would purportedly sell the same to the Defendant and the Defendant would purportedly resell the same to distributors and wholesalers who would in turn resell such products to the service station dealers, but that in fact manufacturers would ship such products directly to such distributors and wholesalers.

9. That in pursuant of such plan of the Defendant, representatives of the Defendant regularly called 3568 upon the Plaintiff and urged and requested him to purchase tires, batteries and other automobile parts and accessories which had been manufactured by manufacturers with whom the Defendant had such agreements, and particularly those manufactured or sold by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, 114 East Market Street, Akron 16, Ohio, and Purolator Products, Inc., Rahway, New Jersey, and to refrain from purchasing competing products manufactured by other manufacturers. The Plaintiff was unwilling to accede fully to these requests and so informed the representatives of the Defendant; however, the Plaintiff did stock tires of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company in addition to those tires which he normally stocked and also stocked only Goodyear batteries. Thereafter the Defendant cancelled said Lease and Dealer's Sales Agreement effective as of May 31, 1956. The notice of cancellation is attached hereto and made a part hereof and marked Plaintiff's Exhibit III.

10 That such cancellation of said Agreements was in furtherance of the Defendant's aforesaid plan to compel service station dealers who were selling petroleum products manufactured by it to sell tires, batteries and other automobile parts and accessories manufactured by manufacturers who had entered into the above mentioned agreements with the Defendant and to restrain such dealers from dealing in competing products.

11. That at no time did any representative of the Defendant make any complaint to the Plaintiff concerning the operation of the aforesaid service station; the volume of gallonage of petroleum products being sold by the Plaintiff having been consistently increasing at the time of cancellation.

12. That as a result of the aforesaid cancellation, the business of the Plaintiff was destroyed; and said cancellation resulted in restraint of interstate commerce, a substantial lessening of competition and a tendency to create a monopoly.

13. That as a result of the above described wrongful acts and conduct of Defendant, Plaintiff has suffered loss and damages in the amount of $50,000.00.

14. That the Plaintiff has been damaged in his business and property by reason of the unlawful conduct and acts of the Defendant, and that, under the provisions of an Act of Congress of the United States, approved October 15, 1914, 38 Statute 731 (U. S. C. A. Title 15, Section 15) he is entitled to recovery from the Defendant 3-fold damage by him sustained and the costs of this suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

Prayer

Wherefore, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendant in the sum of $150,000.00 together with costs and disbursements of this action and a reasonable attorney's fee.

3570 Exhibit "I"

Service Station Lease

This Indenture of Lease, Made and entered into in duplicate this 4th day of May, A. D. 1948, by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, authorized to transact business in the State of Maryland, having its principal office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland, party of the first part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessor"), and S. K. Osborne SS #40 of Reisterstown, Maryland, party of the second part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessee," whether one or more, and when referred to by pronoun the masculine gender will be used);

Witnesseth:

1. Whereas, Lessee desires to lease from Lessor the filling and service station, including other structures and facilities, if any, for the servicing of motor vehicles, hereinafter referred to as "station", and the premises upon which the same is located, as hereinafter described, for the purpose of marketing through said station petroleum products and other merchandise; and,

2. Whereas, Lessor is willing to lease said station on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth;

3. Now, Therefore, in consideration of the premises, the rents herein reserved, and the covenants, conditions, and agreements herein set forth, on the part of the Lessee to be paid, maintained, kept, and performed, Lessor does hereby demise and lease unto Lessee that part and only that part of the following described premises used for and constituting an oil and gasoline service station, and excluding all other parts or portions of said premises, located at Hanover & Westminster Roads and situate in the City of Reisterstown, County of Baltimore, and State of Maryland, to wit:

> North Corner Westminster Road and Hanover Road, Reisterstown, Md. as described in lease dated April 24, 1937 to Lessor.

together with the buildings, structures, improvements, pumps, tanks, appliances, furniture, tools, and other personal property located thereon, as set forth in an inventory taken and signed by the parties hereto, marked "Exhibit A." and attached to and made a part of this lease to the same effect as though written out in full herein, including any additions thereto or substitutions thereof which may be made by Lessor from time to time; receipt of any substituted or added equipment shall be evidenced by Lessor's Receipt Form SB-46 "Equipment and Materials Receipt," and said receipt when signed by Lessee shall become a part of this lease with the same force and effect as though embodied herein; provided, however, that any equipment heretofore or hereafter delivered by Lessor to Lessee, whether or not evidenced by said receipt, shall be subject to the terms and conditions of this lease. It is understood and agreed that Lessee's act of accepting such equipment and signing said receipt shall be construed to be an acknowledgment by Lessee that the equipment described in said receipt was in good and serviceable condition at the time of its delivery to Lessee.

4. To Have And To Hold the above demised and leased premises, and all rights, privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, unto Lessee for and during a term beginning on the 1st day of June, 1948, and ending on the 31st day of May, 1949, and thereafter for successive terms of one year each, provided, however, that either party may terminate this lease at the end of the original term or any successive yearly term, on Thirty (30) Days' written notice given prior to the end of any such term. If the above premises are held by Lessor under lease, this lease shall in no event continue in effect for any longer period than the balance of the term specified in any such underlying lease, regardless of the term herein provided. No previous notice or refund of rentals shall be required in the event of termination or cancellation of this lease for breach or default as hereinafter provided.

"Amount equal to 1½ cents per gallon for each gallon of gasoline and motor fuels delivered to said premises for resale during the term; provided, that the minimum monthly rental for each month shall be $400.00 Dollars. All rental shall be payable on demand of the Lessor."

All rentals shall be payable in lawful money of the United States at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland, or at such other place as Lessor may from time to time designate.

6. Lessee covenants and agrees that he will use and occupy said premises and station in a careful, safe and proper manner; that he will not permit or suffer any waste thereon or thereof, or any nuisance thereon or thereabout; that he will keep the sidewalks adjacent to said premises free from snow and ice; and that he will maintain said premises in a clean, neat, orderly and sightly condition. Lessee further covenants and agrees that he will, at his own cost, maintain in good condition and repair any and all buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, and other personal property hereby leased to Lessee; and that he will not encumber or remove the same, or do or suffer to be done anything whereby the same or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the right of Lessor therein or the title thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; it being expressly agreed that Lessee acquires hereunder no interest in any buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, or other property now on said premises or which may hereafter be placed thereon by Lessor, except the right to use the same as in this lease provided.

7. Lessee shall be liable for and agrees to pay when due all license, permit, and inspection fees, occupation and license taxes, all compensation fees, rents, and charges, assessed and imposed by municipalities for the installation, use or maintenance of approaches or driveways serving said premises; also all water, gas, telephone, and electric light and power charges assessed or charged on or against said premises and station or Lessee's use or occupancy thereof, including all taxes levied and assessed on Lessee's property located thereon during the term hereof.

8. Lessee shall comply with and obey all laws, ordinances, rules, regulations and requirements of the State, City, Village, or other governmental subdivision in which said premises are located, so far as same affect Lessee's use and occupancy of said premises and the operation of said station.

9. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes, discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons) and to persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee, or employees of either of the parties hereto), caused by, growing out of, or happening in connection with, Lessee's use and occupancy of said premises or any buildings, structures, equipment or appliances located or to be located thereon, or by reason of any other casualty, whether due to negligence of Lessor or otherwise.

10. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons), and to persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee or employees of either of the parties hereto), by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any such equipment or any part thereof, or of any gasoline, oils, or other petroleum products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defects in the construction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use or operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling, or dislocation of such equipment or any part thereof, or by reason of any casualty, whether due to the negligence of Lessor or otherwise.

11. Lessee agrees to display continuously on said premises a sign to be furnished by Lessor showing that Lessee is occupying said premises under a lease.

12. If Lessee shall default in the performance of any covenant contained in this lease, or if Lessee shall violate any agreements, covenants, conditions and obligations of this lease upon him imposed, or if Lessee shall become bankrupt or become insolvent in the opinion of Lessor, or shall make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, Lessor in any such event shall have the right to declare this lease terminated, and shall have the further right, without notice and without recourse to any legal proceeding, to enter upon the premises and repossess the same, including all property embraced within this lease, and Lessor shall have a first lien upon all merchandise and other property of Lessee located upon the leased premises to secure the payment of rent and all charges hereunder and the full performance by Lessee of all obligations to Lessor; and Lessor shall further have all the rights and remedies provided by law for the recovery of rent and possession. It is understood that the acceptance of rent by Lessor after default or the happening of any above contingency shall not be construed as a waiver of the rights of Lessor herein specified. If Lessee is an individual and if he shall die during the term of this lease or any extension thereof, this lease shall automatically terminate.

3572 13. Upon the termination of this lease by lapse of time or otherwise, Lessee agrees to return to Lessor the said premises and station, together with all other property embraced within this lease, and any other property of Lessor located on said premises, in their condition when received by Lessee, reasonable wear and tear incident to proper use thereof excepted. In the event Lessee shall for any reason be unable to return any of said property, he agrees to replace the same with similar property of like value, or to pay Lessor the market price therefor.

14. If there is a safe or chest included in the equipment leased hereunder, Lessee agrees to maintain said safe or chest in good and usable condition throughout the term hereof, and to bear the expense of any repairs thereon or replacement thereof; it being understood and agreed that Lessee shall assume any losses from robbery, burglary or larceny of the contents thereof, and of any property embraced within the lease.

15. Lessor reserves the right of entry of its representatives, agents, and employees for the purpose of examination and inspection of said premises and any property of Lessor located thereon.

16. Lessee shall make no alterations or changes in or additions to any buildings, structures, or improvements on said premises without first procuring the written consent of Lessor so to do. Any work so authorized by Lessor shall be at the sole cost and expense of Lessee, and any such alterations, changes or additions so made by Lessee shall forthwith become the property of Lessor, and Lessee shall have no claim of any kind or character therefor.

17. This lease is personal to Lessee and shall not be assigned in whole or in part, and said premises or any part thereof shall not be sublet, nor shall any rights or privileges herein granted Lessee be sold, transferred or assigned without the written consent of Lessor first obtained.

18. If during the terms of this lease proceedings are instituted for the condemnation of said premises or any part thereof, or if Lessor shall dispose of said premises or any part thereof or its interest therein, either voluntarily or involuntarily, in order that the premises may be devoted wholly or partially to any public use, this lease shall, at the option of Lessor and upon written notice to Lessee, forthwith finally cease and terminate, and Lessee shall not be entitled to any damage award or purchase price, or any part of either, which may be paid on account of such condemnation or sale.

19. Any prior agreement under which the Lessor leased the above described premises and equipment to the Lessee is hereby terminated on and as of the day preceding the commencement of the term hereof, except as to any liability which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said agreement prior to such effective cancellation date.

vided, this lease, at the same time, shall expire and terminate without previous notice to Lessee, and Lessor shall not be liable to Lessee in damages or otherwise on account of such prior termination. This lease shall be subject to all conditions and restrictions affecting the premises, including those which may be of record or in the underlying lease, if any, and also including building, building line, and zoning restrictions. If Lessee shall abandon, desert or vacate the premises during the term of this lease, or during any extension or renewal period, for a period of more than two (2) calendar days, Lessor may terminate this lease and repossess the premises. If the operation of a service station on said premises shall be prohibited or restricted during the term hereof by statute, ordinance, order of court or other governmental authority, and not because of any fault or neglect of Lessee, this lease shall be subject to termination at the option of either party.

21. All notices given under this instrument shall be in writing, and may be given either in the statutory method, if any, in the State where the premises are located or by depositing the notice in the United States registered mail, postage prepaid, enclosed in an envelope addressed to the party to be notified at such party's address as shown in this instrument or at any other known address of Lessee, and the date upon which such notice is so mailed shall be treated as the date of service. If there be more than one Lessee, notice to one shall constitute notice to all. In addition, any notice given by Lessor to Lessee shall be valid if served upon Lessee in person or delivered to or left upon the premises.

22. This lease shall not be binding upon Lessor until signed on its behalf by its President or Vice-President, notwithstanding the delivery of possession to or the acceptance of any rent from Lessee. All proposals, negotiations, representations and agreements with reference to matters covered by this lease are merged herein, and no amendment or modification hereof shall be binding upon Lessor unless the same shall be in writing and signed by its President or Vice-President.

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Dealer Sales Agreement

This Agreement, made and entered into this 4th day of May, 1948, by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, having its principal office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland, as Seller, and S. K. Osborne of Hanover & Westminster Rds.—Reisterstown, Maryland, as Dealer.

Witnesseth, That for the considerations herein contained, Seller hereby agrees to and hereby does, sell to Dealer, and Dealer hereby agrees to, and hereby does, buy from Seller, during the period this agreement is in effect. Dealer's requirements for resale of the following petroleum products:

Betholine
Sinclair H-C Gasoline
Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil
Opaline Motor Oil
Emerald Motor Oil
Laclede Motor Oil
Sinclair Lubricants and Greases
Richsol Cleaning Fluid
Sinclair Superflame Kerosene
Sinclair Specialties

And such other products marketed by Seller as the parties hereto may agree upon from time to time.

Prices: For each delivery of any of the above products Dealer shall pay Seller's official established price per gallon (or other applicable unit) for the quantity delivered to Dealer prevailing at the time and for the place of each such delivery (without any discount or deduction therefrom) as posted at Seller's bulk plant from which delivery is made. Dealer agrees that Seller shall have the right to change said price from time to time without notice to Dealer except as posted at Seller's bulk plant or as shown on Seller's invoices.

If at any time Seller may establish different prices applicable to different classes of dealers, Dealer agrees that Seller shall have the right to determine the classification (or classifications as to different products) in which Dealer belongs and the prices hereunder applicable to Dealer, and Seller's determination in that respect shall be conclusive as to Dealer.

Place of Delivery: Products purchased hereunder shall be delivered in quantities and at times established by Seller's delivery schedules to Dealer's place of business above listed and to any other points agreed upon between the parties.

Duration of Agreement: This agreement shall continue in effect for one year (beginning the 1st day of June, 1948. Unless terminated, as hereinafter provided, before or at the expiration of such original period, this agreement shall continue in full force and effect as to all its terms, provisions and conditions from year to year, subject to cancellation by either party as herein specified.

Terms: Net cash on delivery. If Seller shall extend credit to Dealer, the right to withdraw credit at any time is reserved by the Seller. Payments shall be made by Dealer in lawful money of the United States, or its equivalent, and shall be made to Seller's agent through whom delivery is made or to Seller's principal office. Checks, if accepted, shall be subject to final collection.

Additional Provisions: The additional provisions printed on the reverse side hereof constitute a part of this agreement.

In Witness Whereof, Seller and Dealer have executed this agreement.

3575 Additional Provisions

1. In addition to the prices herein provided, Dealer shall pay Seller amounts equivalent to any and all taxes, duties, charges and inspection fees, and any and all increases therein, which are now or may hereafter be imposed, directly or indirectly, by any domestic or foreign governmental authority or agency on, against, in respect of or measured by the products covered by this agreement, or any material contained in such products, or the importation, exportation, production, manufacture, sale, transportation, delivery or other handling of such products or material or any feature thereof or of this agreement. The amounts of any such taxes, duties, charges or inspection fees shall be added to the prices herein provided when Seller either pays or becomes liable for the payment of any such taxes, duties, charges or inspection fees.

2. In the event that Seller should at any time during the life of this agreement discontinue the marketing of any product covered hereunder in dealer's territory and market some other similar product as a replacement thereof Seller shall have the right and privilege to deliver such other product instead of the product discontinued.

3. This Agreement may be cancelled and terminated by either party at the expiration of the original period herein specified, or at the end of any yearly period thereafter, upon thirty (30) days' previous written notice to the other parties. Dealer agrees that Seller shall also have the right to terminate and cancel this agreement at any time upon thirty (30) days' previous written notice by Seller to Dealer.

4. Dealer shall not change or alter by any means whatsoever the nature, quality, or appearance of any of the products purchased and sold hereunder. Any violation of this provision by Dealer shall give Seller the right to suspend immediately further deliveries hereunder of such products or to terminate this agreement. Seller shall have the right from time to time during the like of this agreement to change, alter or amend any of the trade names or brands under which products covered by this agreement are now or may hereafter be marketed. Seller agrees that the commodity sold hereunder shall be uniform in quality and at all times up to its standards.

5. It is mutually agreed that Seller shall not be obliged to furnish any products hereunder nor be liable for loss or damage for failure so to do or for failure or delay in making deliveries of such products when such failure or delay arises from (a) any cause beyond Seller's control; or (b) by reason of reduction in or failure of Seller's supply of each products or containers therefor at any point from which Seller customarily makes or would make deliveries to Dealer or shipment to Dealer's destinations, or of Seller's supply at the point of manufacture, of raw or other materials from which such products are manufactured or which constitute components thereof; or (c) from discontinuance or interruption of any means or method of transportation customarily used by Seller in making deliveries to Dealer's destinations or to the vicinity thereof; or (d) from or through acts of God, strikes, lockouts, differences among or with its workmen, fires, explosions, sabotage, accidents, riots, civil commotion, acts of war, results of warfare, or war conditions in this or any foreign country; or (e) mechanical breakdowns in its manufactories, or breaks in or total or partial destruction of its supplying pipe lines; or (f) the restriction or prohibition or prevention of the importation of necessary finished or raw materials; or (g) acts of foreign or domestic Governmental authority, or requests, orders or requisitions of constituted authorities, civil or military, or the exercise of eminent domain, or any seizure or appropriation of any of Seller's property or of the management or operation thereof, whether regarded as lawful or unlawful; or (h) any increase in Seller's cost of materials or of manufacture or of delivery, or any decrease in Seller's prices for such products, imposed by Governmental actions or orders; or (i) any other cause beyond Seller's control, not enumerated herein, whether or not such cause shall be similar to any of the specifications of excuse hereinbefore stated. Seller shall not be liable for loss or damage to the premises where deliveries are made or to Dealer's property unless such loss or damage is caused solely by Seller's negligence. Seller reserves the right to limit quantities delivered hereunder when in Seller's opinion the current or prospective supply of such product or products makes such limitation ~~available.~~ advisable.

6. This agreement cannot be assigned in whole or in part by Dealer without the consent of Seller in writing first obtained.

7. The sale of any motor fuel which may contain either an "Ethyl" or any other anti-knock compound under the agreement is subject to (a) all the provisions contained in the agreements under which Seller is licensed to manufacture and sell motor fuel containing said compounds and (b) compliance by Dealer with all such provisions, rules, regulations and orders now in existence or which may hereafter be issued by the licensor or any governmental authority having jurisdiction insofar as the same apply to motor fuel purchased by Dealer from Seller. If Dealer shall fail or refuse to comply therewith, Seller may either suspend deliveries of such motor fuel or terminate this agreement in respect to such motor fuel. It is expressly agreed that such gasoline containing an "Ethyl" or other anti-knock compound is sold for use as a motor fuel only ~~and is not to be~~ used or resold for cleaning purposes under any circumstances.

8. Any notice to be given hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been duly given if and when deposited in the United States mail, properly stamped and addressed to the party for whom intended at the address of such party herein specified, or when delivered personally to such party at such address.

9. Any Sales Contract or agreement covering petroleum products for resale heretofore entered into between the parties hereto is hereby cancelled and terminated on and as of the effective date hereof except as to any liability or obligations which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said contract prior to such effective cancellation date.

10. In the event Seller shall cease to market any of the products listed herein in the territory where Dealer is located, this agreement shall cease to cover such products but shall remain in full force and effect as to other products covered.

3578 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 330.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF MARYLAND.

Kriete Osborn,
Plaintiff,
vs.
Sinclair Refining Company,
Defendant.
} Civil Action No. 9769

Answer to Complaint.

Answering the Complaint filed against it herein, Defendant alleges as follows:

1. The Complaint fails to state a claim against Defendant upon which relief can be granted.

2. Defendant admits the allegations contained in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 of the Complaint.

3. (a) Answering paragraph 8 of the Complaint, Defendant alleges that for some time prior to January 1, 1956, when Sherwood Brothers, Inc. (hereinafter called "Sherwood") was merged into Defendant, Sherwood had an agreement with Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company (hereinafter called "Goodyear") whereby Goodyear paid Sherwood a commission on products sold by Goodyear to dealers selling products marketed by Sherwood. Said agreement was terminated upon the date of the said merger. Since prior to 1956 Defendant has had an agreement with Goodyear whereby Defendant purchases tires, tubes, batteries and battery cables from Goodyear and resells them to distributors. Such transactions constitute actual and not merely "purported" sales, as alleged in the Complaint. The distributors in turn sell the merchandise to dealers, including those who handle Defendant's petroleum products. Goodyear ships the merchandise direct to the distributor. Invoices, however, are sent to and paid by Defendant, which in turn bills the distributor. With respect to so-called "car and home merchandise", including fan belts, filters, spark plugs, polishes, radios, bicyles, and many items manu-3579 factured by Goodyear and others, Goodyear sells direct to the distributor but pays Defendant a commission on such sales.

(b) Except as hereinabove admitted, the allegations of paragraph 8 of the Complaint are denied. In particular Defendant denies that there is or ever has been any plan or intention by Defendant to compel its dealers to sell the products of Goodyear or any other company or to restrain such dealers from selling competing products as alleged in the Complaint. Defendant likewise denies that it has at any time refused to lease service stations or to sell petroleum products to persons who would not buy products sold by Goodyear. Defendant avers that, on the contrary, it has not in any way attempted to coerce its dealers, including Plaintiff, into purchasing products sold by Goodyear. In fact, Plaintiff for many years has been and still is a distributor of products manufactured by Firestone Tire & Rubber Company and sold such products as well as many other products purchased from other manufacturers and distributors, including Goodyear products, at the premises leased from Defendant. Plaintiff's choice of products to be sold and/or distributed by him was entirely voluntary.

4. Answering paragraph 9 of the Complaint, Defendant admits that its representatives regularly called upon Plaintiff and urged and requested him to purchase products sold by Goodyear, but denies that such solicitations were in pursuance of any plan such as is alleged in the Complaint, or that its representatives urged and requested him to refrain from purchasing competing products. Defendant admits the remaining allegations of paragraph 9, except that it has no knowledge as to whether Plaintiff stocked only Goodyear batteries. Defendant avers that Plaintiff's decision to stock Goodyear tires and batteries was made without any coercion whatever by Defendant.

5. Answering paragraph 10 of the Complaint, Defendant denies the allegations thereof, and in particular denies the existence of the alleged plan therein referred to.

6. Answering paragraph 11 of the Complaint, Defendant denies the allegation that no representative of 3580 Defendant made any complaint to Plaintiff concerning the operation of his service station. Defendant admits that the volume of gallonage being sold by Plaintiff had been increasing slightly prior to the time of cancellation but avers that it had not been increasing as much as Defendant considered reasonable, particularly in view of the fact that in 1953 and 1954 Defendant had at its own expense completely rebuilt and modernized Defendant's service station. Defendant avers that the only reason for the cancellation of the said lease was its dissatisfaction with the operation of the said station by Plaintiff resulting in a failure to realize anticipated profits on the sale of petroleum products through the station as well as an actual net rental loss to Defendant.

7. Answering paragraph 12 of the Complaint Defendant denies the allegations thereof except that it admits that Plaintiff's business at these premises was necessarily terminated by the cancellation of the lease which cancellation was strictly in accordance with the provision in paragraph 4 thereof that "either party may terminate this lease at the end of the original term or any successive yearly term, on Thirty (30) Days written notice given prior to the end of any such term."

8. Answering paragraphs 13 and 14 of the Complaint, Defendant denies the allegations thereof.

Wherefore, having fully answered, Defendant demands that the Complaint be dismissed.

Add DC to type symbol when dry charged constr. is wanted.

Double headed Insulfloth ("Insul.") P indicates plastic separators, DG indicates plastic and fiberglass, (Delsglas).

For higher voltage Diesel Engine types, use two or more batteries connected in series by heavy cables.

Prices on H. D., T. & B. and Diesel batteries are without special terminals. Special assemblies or terminals are wanted make selections from chart above in S-7000 T. & B. Repl. Spec. book. Extra prices for such selections are shown on dealer lists. Drop type steel handles will be furnished no charge unless requested that they be left off.

Prices include Federal Excise Tax and necessary domestic polishing. State Sales Tax, if any, is to be added. All prices are subject to change without notice. All shipments will be billed at prices in effect on date of shipment. Dry charged battery prices include electrolyte.

Beginning or fully charged specific gravities on wet charged Goodyear Batteries are 1.270 or 1.280 and are shown on strap or vent cap. In testing batteries for state of charge, readings should be proportioned to these levels beginning sp. gr. shown on top of batteries if hydrometer is used. See Chart in Dealer Guide S-7004.

GUARANTEE AND ADJUSTMENT POLICY

Any Goodyear Battery which fails to give satisfactory service because of defective material or workmanship within a period of 90 days from date of sale to the original user will be either repaired or replaced at our option at any service station handling Goodyear Batteries without charge to the user, except transportation.

After expiration of the 90 days, any battery which fails in normal service because of defective material or workmanship will be adjusted to the original user with a new battery at a pro rata price based on miles or months of service (whichever occurs first) as indicated in the Adjustment Units column on current Goodyear price sheet. Normal passenger car service is considered not to exceed 1,500 miles per month. Where actual mileage figures cannot be determined, the mileage driven shall, for the purpose of adjustment, be assumed to have been 1,500 miles per month in passenger car service (ordinary family use); 1,000 miles per month in commercial service (trucks, taxis, light delivery and salesman's cars).

Adjustment units shown for Passenger Car Batteries apply to normal passenger car service. When Passenger Car Batteries are used in commercial service as defined above or in farm tractors, the adjustment period in months will be one half of the units shown.

Dry charged batteries must be kept sealed and protected from moisture until activated.

Dry Charged Batteries must be date coded by dealers at time of retail sale for adjustment consideration by Goodyear. Goodyear Dry Charged Batteries submitted for adjustment must have been activated with electrolyte of approved grade and specific gravity (1.260 to 1.300 S.G. and in accordance with instructions on battery tag.

If any additions (other than approved distilled water or battery grade sulphuric acid) are made to the electrolyte of a Goodyear battery, the above guarantee and adjustment policy will be nullified.

On all customer claims for adjustments dealers should first carefully examine the battery for damage or abuse (damaged or misused batteries are not adjustable) and the battery should be given a slow charge before testing. Then test all cells (by Thermo-Hydrometer or All Purpose Voltage Tester) to determine state of charge or condition of battery. If battery "comes up" and if all cell readings are reasonably uniform (within 30 specific gravity points), replace in customers car.

GOODYEAR BATTERY REPLACEMENT CHART — PASSENGER CARS

(See H. D. Truck, Bus and Tractor Replacement Chart (S-7900 and S-7900A) for replacement data for Trucks, Buses, Tractors, Farm Tractors and Off-the-Road vehicles, for H. D. Battery assembly data and for type equivalent charts)

This list shows Goodyear Batteries to fit all recent makes and models of passenger cars. Group Number indicates battery size (case dimensions only, electrical capacity not considered) on original equipment basis only.

No recommendations are shown: DeLuxe All-Weather types of standard capacity equivalent to or greater than the original equipment battery, and Double Eagle types are of higher capacity with special features recommended to car or truck owners who have more severe driving conditions or who want a more dependable, longer lived battery.

GOODYEAR BATTERY POLICY AND SALES PROGRAM

Effective October 31, 1951

For Use of Goodyear Organization Only

GOODYEAR BATTERY PRICE STRUCTURE AND DEALER CLASSIFICATION

(Applies to the Goodyear Branded Line of Batteries Only — Does Not Apply to Resolute Batteries)

CONSUMER PRICES

Goodyear prints a list entitled "Suggested Consumer Prices," B-304. On this price list, in addition to Suggested Consumer Prices, there is an additional column "Suggested Consumer Exchange Prices." This reflects values of traded-in batteries, and the use of these prices is urged to meet current and competitive merchandising practices. In addition to prices, this list carries complete specification data and passenger car replacement chart. Because this price list is the only one with complete data, it should be furnished in all cases with various dealer price lists.

PICK-UP DEALER

This dealer who does not carry an inventory and whose service facilities consist chiefly of installing a battery in a customer's car after he has secured it from some nearby battery stocking point, is classed as a pick-up dealer. Goodyear recommends that such a dealer be sold at B-304 list less 20%.

CONTRACT DEALER

This is a retail dealer who carries a stock of batteries, furnishes service to his customers, and in most instances has recharging facilities. The Contract Dealer sells to the Pick-Up Dealer, the Commercial Fleet Operator and to consumers. He buys at "Contract Dealer Prices," List B-307.

DISTRIBUTOR

This type of dealer, in most instances, does a retail business, some wholesale business, carries a fair stock of batteries, has adequate service facilities to care for the requirements of his trade, and is usually located in a metropolitan area or a county seat town. This type of dealer is sold at "Goodyear Distributor Prices," List B-310.

SERVICE DISTRIBUTOR—PREFERRED DISTRIBUTOR WHOLESALER—ZONE WHOLESALER

These categories are large merchandisers and distributors of storage batteries—both retail, commercial and wholesale.

This type of dealer carries an adequate stock of storage batteries at all times, takes most deliveries in quantity lots on a direct factory basis, solicits the dealer trade in a metropolitan area or in an area where he normally distributes merchandise.

They also serve Fleet Accounts and sell National Accounts, and under a plan arranged and recommended by Goodyear, the Service Distributor has a substantial investment in stock, equipment and sales solicitation. They are compensated for all services rendered by enjoying Goodyear's Prices as established in accordance with their annual volume.

These distributor's buying prices permit them to sell to the Distributor, the Contract Dealer, the Pick-Up Dealer, Commercial Fleet Operator and to consumers.

CONTRACTS

New Goodyear Battery dealers should be signed on contract G-110. The G-110 Goodyear Service Station Agreement provides identification of battery dealer category for billing and mailing. If dealer is already signed on a G-110, form B-215 should be filled out when Goodyear Batteries are added to his line or when his category is changed. B-61 associate dealer contracts should be executed for all associate battery dealers who should be on Akron battery mailing list.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR ABOVE DESCRIBED DEALER CATEGORIES

Annual purchase requirements for the establishment of above described categories are listed below. The meeting of these qualifications must be on a basis of (a) dealer's actual purchase volume from us, (b) if new dealer, actual annual purchases from previous supplier, or (c) on a careful analysis of probable unit sales. Qualifications of all dealers will be reviewed semi-annually and revisions made in dealer category and price qualification in accordance with his battery purchase volume. Increases in qualified prices are not retroactive. Decreases in qualified prices are retroactive to the first of the calendar year affected.

Classification	List	Qualifications
Consumer	B-304
Commercial Fleet (local)	B-304 less 20%	5 - 25 Trucks
Commercial Fleet (Large or National Acct.)	B-307 or B-310	25 Trucks or More

DIRECT FACTORY SHIPPING ALLOWANCES ON GOODYEAR BATTERIES

(Does not apply to Resolute Batteries but Resolute may be included to make up the quantities).

Goodyear effects a saving in warehousing costs and freight when shipments are made direct to the dealer from the factory and this saving is passed on to the dealer whenever the dealer wishes to take advantage of it and is willing to anticipate his needs and places a direct factory shipment order with the understanding that it will take longer time for delivery than shipment from the district warehouse. There is no minimum factory shipment on HD Truck and Bus, Diesel or Marine Batteries. When these types are included with a direct factory shipment of passenger batteries, one 12-volt HD Truck and Bus or Diesel type battery will be considered as two battery units.

DIRECT FACTORY SHIPPING ALLOWANCE

Quantity	Extra Allowance
10 Batteries	2%
25 Batteries	3%
50 Batteries	4%
100 Batteries	5%
500 Batteries (Truck Load)	8%

Crating allowance of $2.50 per battery will be allowed on HD Truck and Bus or Diesel type batteries when shipment is made within a factory city or when made in truck load lots in which shipments the batteries can be shipped uncrated.

RESOLUTE BATTERY POLICY AND SALES PROGRAM

The Resolute Battery is offered in six types of five sizes with suggested consumer and exchange prices designed to meet mail-order, chain and other low price competition. Price lists are B-318, B-319, B-320 and B-322. Dealer prices will apply to the corresponding Goodyear Battery dealer categories. B-322 prices apply to Preferred Distributors, Wholesalers and Zone Wholesalers in addition to Service Distributors.

This "price" line will be welcomed by many dealers and stores which have felt the need of lower selling prices on a quality product. In most cases, the Resolute Battery will and should be used as a "leader" or for "plus" sales when a "price" buyer is sold.

Resolute Batteries are not identified as a Goodyear product. They are good quality batteries. They are available for order of ten units with shipments from factory only, freight paid. Resolute Batteries may be combined with Goodyear Batteries in making up direct factory orders but direct factory allowance will not apply to Resolute Batteries.

Resolute Batteries are not subject to the shipping allowances offered Goodyear dealers on Goodyear Batteries, but are to be combined with Goodyear Batteries in determining Goodyear Battery dealer category (Contract Dealer, Distributor, Service Distributor, etc.).

An extra 5% will be allowed on Resolute Batteries for minimum shipment from factory of 50 units of Resolute Batteries only.

PRICE PROTECTION

In the event of a concurrent price reduction on both suggested consumer and dealer prices, dealers will be rebated the difference between their new buying price and that at which they were billed on all Goodyear and Resolute Batteries purchased during the thirty-day period preceding such reduction. This does not apply to Goodyear Battery Cables.

TERMS

Regular 2% discount for payment on or before the 10th Prox is offered on Goodyear and Resolute Batteries, Goodyear Battery Cables and on all Goodyear battery tools and equipment. Where desired and applicable and upon approval of District Credit Manager, dealer may have special payment terms as follows:

10 Goodyear or Resolute Batteries or mixed Goodyear and Resolute—2% on 1/3 of amount for payment 1st 10th Prox, 2% on 1/3 of amount for payment on the 10th of the second month and 2% on final 1/3 for payment on the 10th of the third month.

Fast Chargers or other major battery equipment items selling at $100.00 or more may be purchased on deferred payment terms over several months as approved and set up by District Credit Manager.

GENERAL PRICE POLICIES

As stipulated on the B-304 price list, all prices as shown on price lists above described are for lead acid, wet charge, storage batteries and prepayment of freight for 200 lb. shipments from either factory or district is in accordance with current policy in that regard. If such shipments originate at district warehouse points, tires or other merchandise stocked at districts may be included with batteries for such freight allowances. Prices include federal excise tax and necessary domestic packing.

State sales taxes, if any, are to be added to prices as listed. All prices are subject to change without notice. All shipments will be billed at prices in effect at date of shipment. Whenever quotations are to be made to state or federal government accounts, send requests for bid to Government Sales Department, Akron.

ADJUSTMENT ALLOWANCE

(Applies to Goodyear and Resolute Batteries)

Guarantee and adjustment policy is detailed on B-304 and B-318 lists and adjustment units are given for each battery.

(A) Contract Dealers—All claims for adjustment consideration will be handled by the Contract Dealer with the customers, computing the adjustment price based on Suggested Consumer price in accordance with the terms and adjustment units as covered in the Goodyear Battery Warranty detailed on price list B-304.

Adjusted batteries are referred by the dealer to the District Service Representative for replacement consideration with freight paid by dealer. Price charged to dealer is computed price less 10%.

(B) Other Dealers—A 1% adjustment allowance is offered to all direct dealers other than Contract Dealers to compensate them for handling their own adjustments other than 90-day free replacements. The 1% allowance is applied on billing price after deduction of extra discounts or shipping allowances.

Ninety-day replacements are handled by dealers referred to under B who will refer all claims for replacement consideration to the District Service Representative, freight prepaid. When such ninety-day replacements are approved, replacement will be made by Goodyear on a no-charge basis.

When a dealer (B) elects to forego the 1% adjustment allowance and have Goodyear District adjust each battery as submitted, freight paid, the adjustment (except the ninety-day service free replacements) is computed at consumer price level and the dealer (B) is billed at that price less 20% discount.

Batteries shipped to the dealer more than four months previous to the sale to the customer are not subject to adjustment at the District. Batteries shipped to Zone Wholesalers are code dated two months ahead of actual shipping date which gives them six months shelf life.

GOODYEAR BATTERY CABLES

Battery cables are to batteries what tubes are to tires and should always be considered a natural part of a battery dealer's purchases. Cable prices are established in accordance with the dealer's battery classification. The Contract Dealer is sold at Contract Dealer cable prices which, with Suggested Consumer Prices, are printed on reverse side of battery list B-307. Battery Distributors are sold at net Distributor prices which are listed on reverse side of battery price list B-310. Cable lists for all other battery categories are printed on reverse side of each battery list.

Goodyear Battery Cables are stocked at Car and Home Field Warehouses and all shipments will be freight prepaid regardless of weight. As cable factories are not at the same points as battery factories, there is no direct factory shipping allowance available on cables.

Ignition and spark plug cables and wire, together with accessories for this merchandise and other battery accessories, shown on pages 8, 9, 10 and 11 of Goodyear Cable Catalog, are not stocked in field warehouses as all battery cables are, and all orders for this merchandise will be filled only by direct factory shipment or from Massillon warehouse and all such shipments will be prepaid.

BATTERY DATING RINGS

To enable Dealers, Stores and Distributors to identify date of sale to the customer, Dating Rings are made available. It is recommended that they be used to stamp date code on connector of each battery sold whether to a consumer or to dealer. This procedure is also to be followed by District Warehouses and stores as well as by all classes of Dealers.

Goodyear has two types of Dating Rings, one for Company Districts, Warehouses and Stores use, called the Goodyear Universal Code Dating Ring, and the Dealer Battery Dating Ring for use of Dealers on either retail or wholesale sales. Batteries shipped to dealers and stores from factories are code dated with the Universal Code Dating Ring.

BATTERY EQUIPMENT POLICY

All Battery Service and Sales Equipment and Tools are sold on a net basis to all classifications of dealers at the prices established on the Battery Equipment Price List B-262, with quantity allowances to any classification of dealer as shown, subject to 2% cash discount only. To help our plan for loaning PowR SavRs to Associate Dealers, we give a 20% discount to Zone Wholesalers on all PowR SavRs applied to either the single lot price or the quantity price.

Quantity purchase discount applies to all purchases made within the calendar year. If 12 items are ordered at any one time, quantity lot price will be allowed on the invoice. If such items are bought one at a time or in groups throughout the year, the dealer may obtain rebate at the end of the year on all such purchases to reduce the net price to the lowest quantity price earned when dealer makes such claim.

No record of such purchases will be maintained in the district. It will be the dealer's responsibility to submit his claim for such rebates at the end of the year substantiating his claim with invoice numbers covering.

Pages 50A and 50D in section VIII of Field Representative's manual cover policy on repairs and claims on battery equipment.

BATTERY PARTS

Battery parts for use on batteries from different sources of manufacture are not interchangeable and this must be kept in mind when ordering. Battery type and part number must be specified on order. Districts should order parts on G-905 and send to nearest manufacturing point of battery or batteries to be repaired.

There is a suggested Retail Price on Battery parts (B-376). The price to all dealers is List less 35%.

All parts sold f.o.b. factory. Items cannot be included with other merchandise to make prepaid shipment. Stocks of battery parts are not to be carried by District or Field Warehouses.

DEALER BINDERS

When a new Battery Dealer is signed, it will be the responsibility of the District Management to see that he is provided with such price lists, selection charts, manuals, etc. as are currently available. To facilitate this, we have selected the contents of a Dealer Binder, S-7935, which will be made up and sent from the Sales Promotion Department at Akron upon receipt of G-1133 order from the District specifying "one Battery Dealer Binder, S-7935, no charge." Contract Dealer price lists only are included in this package and therefore price lists to Battery and Cable Distributors and other categories are to be furnished from District.

At time of price change Akron will notify all contracted battery dealers and distributors of record. Dealer Price Book Subscribers among them will be sent the quantities subscribed for. Price lists required beyond this by stores, dealers or distributors are to be furnished by district or ordered separately from Akron.

Any special requirements of binders or other printed material can be ordered from Akron for direct shipment to store or Dealer. Price cards or display cards for PowR SavRs at the time of price or other changes will be sent to all owners of PowR SavRs including stores. Special needs for display cards or price cards and Double Eagle Demonstrators will be filled on District order for shipment direct to Dealer or store.

BATTERY RETURNS

Because of the perishable nature of batteries, there is established a program limiting Goodyear's responsibility on the return of batteries.

Except in exceptional credit situations, (and then only on personal approval of District Manager, and when batteries under consideration have not been in dealer's hands more than 60 days) batteries are not to be accepted for return for credit. See Wholesale Field Operating Manual for details.

SCRAP BATTERIES

It is desirable that all scrap batteries be promptly turned into lead refining channels. Wherever possible, scrap batteries should be taken in on all sales and sold to approved reputable firms which guarantee such handling.

NATIONAL ACCOUNTS

Goodyear Batteries are on the approved list of many National Accounts. Dealers and stores should be encouraged to solicit local branches of these firms for battery and cable business.

BATTERY INVENTORY MAINTENANCE

Batteries are perishable merchandise. The Goodyear organization must assume the responsibility of "Protecting Our Good Name" by strictly following prescribed procedures for battery care and maintenance in district warehouses and stores and by showing all Goodyear Battery Dealers the importance of keeping all stock batteries fully charged at all times. Oldest batteries in stock should always be sold first. Failure to follow these rules will cause trouble when the batteries are sold with resulting unfair adjustment claims.

FACTORY CONTACT CAMPAIGNS

To assist Field Representatives in signing up direct or associate battery dealers, we offer letter series campaigns which will be mailed to prospects when lists are sent to Sales Promotion Department, Akron, by District Office. List of associate dealer prospects should show name of supplying dealer or store. Associate Dealer Campaigns are offered to supplying dealers at no charge.

Identify these mail campaigns as follows:

Conversation -- Mr. Nicholas J. Govoruhk - Baltimore Battery Company -- Mr. Jones, District Manager - Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company - Mt. Royal & Oliver Sts.

Time 10:25 A.M. Wednesday, April 4th.

Mr. Govoruhk asked Mr. Jones why he could not sell Betholine Sinclair Stations Goodyear Batteries. Mr. Allen, Goodyear Service Manager, agreed at the time Mr. Govoruhk was granted distributorship that he could not sell to the Betholine Sinclair Stations.

Mr. Jones replied that Brooks Huff was their largest distributor in the T. B. A. line and they have to protect their established distributors and must confine additional outlets.

JAMES HOOPER RECOMMENDS SCHENUITS!

James W. Hooper, owner of Hooper's Service Station at 4912 Harford Road, knows the tire business inside and out. Here's what he has to say about Schenuit Tires.

"The first thing a customer buying a tire asks me is . . . How is this tire for wear? That's when I'm glad it's a Schenuit Tire he's asking about, because I know I can tell him sincerely that he'll get more safe miles out of a Schenuit Tire than any other first line tire. It's a good feeling to know your selling the best . . . and that's a Schenuit Tire!"

Insist on Schenuit, the custom-built, unconditionally guaranteed tire.

Mr. James W. Hooper

Baltimore 14, Maryland

Dear Sir:

We in Shell are proud of our dealer representation. It is a pleasure for me to welcome you as a newcomer to this group. We are confident that this relationship will prove to be both profitable and pleasant.

Attached are fully executed copies of your lease and Gasoline Sales Agreement with us. As your acknowledgment of the receipt of these contracts, we would appreciate your acknowledging and returning to us a copy of this letter.

We are also pround of the full line of products which we are in a position to offer you, tires, batteries and accessories, as well as gasolines, motor oils, greases and specialties. We believe that merchandise must be sold on its quality, reasonableness of its price and its public acceptance; rather than by contractual provisions. These are the factors which guide us in the distribution of petroleum products under the Shell brand and in the selection of the lines of tires, batteries and accessories which we represent. Consequently, if you again refer to your contracts with us you will not find a single provision obligating you to buy your requirements of these items from or through us.

We will solicit your business for each of these items because this is a business in which we are engaged and because we feel that they will contribute to your overall success as a service station dealer. The extent to which we will enjoy your patronage must depend upon your voluntary acceptance of our product lines and the service that we are able to render. Your business, which we at all times will solicit, will be very much appreciated.

Yours truly,

Acknowledged:
James W. Hooper.

Service Station Manager's Agreement

This Agreement, dated May 21, 1954, between Shell Oil Company (herein called "Shell"), and W. E. Edwards of Terre Haute, Indiana (herein called "Manager").

Witnesseth:

1. Employment. Shell hereby employs Manager, and Manager hereby accepts employment by Shell to operate Shell's service station located at 22nd and Wabash in Terre Haute, Vigo County, Indiana.

2. Consigned Products. Shell shall stock the station with "Shell" gasolines and such other products as Shell may elect to consign to Manager. Inventories of such consigned stocks shall be maintained in such quantities as Shell considers adequate for the proper operation of the station. Title to all products consigned to Manager shall remain in Shell until sold, and Manager shall sell such products at prices fixed by Shell. Manager shall account to Shell for consigned products sold, in the following manner: At the time of each replacement delivery, Manager shall pay Shell in cash, on partial account for consigned products theretofore sold, an amount equal to Shell's retail prices for the quantities of gasolines so delivered (less the commissions specified below), and Shell's dealer prices for the quantities of other consigned products so delivered, as such prices are in effect for each product or grade thereof and for the station at the time of such delivery. At the time the price of any consigned product is changed or Manager's account as to any consigned product is closed out by termination of this Agreement or otherwise, an inventory of each such consigned product shall be taken, and the difference between the quantity consigned and the quantity in stock shall be determined. If the price is increased, a credit memorandum shall be issued by Shell to Manager in an amount equal to such difference in quantities multiplied by the per-unit price increase. If the price is reduced, Manager shall pay Shell in cash an amount equal to such difference in quantities multiplied by the per-unit price decrease. If Manager's account as to the consigned product is being closed out, Manager shall pay Shell in cash Shell's retail prices for such difference in quantities of gasolines (less the commission specified below), and Shell's dealer prices for such difference in quantities of other consigned products. Such prices shall be those in effect for the respective products or grades thereof and for the station at the time of the inventory.

3. Other Merchandise and Services. Manager shall have the right, for his own account: (a) to purchase from Shell or such other suppliers as Manager may choose, and sell at the station, such other items of merchandise as Shell may approve, and (b) to perform such services at the station as Shell may approve, provided that Manager shall pay for such items of merchandise purchased from Shell, in cash at the time of delivery, Shell's dealer prices therefor then in effect for the station; and provided that Manager shall not engage in automotive body work or major engine repairs at the station without Shell's prior written approval. Manager shall obtain all licenses and permits which may be required, and shall pay all fees, taxes and other charges which may be assessed or incurred, by reason of the transaction of such business by Manager for his own account.

4. Compensation. As full compensation, subject to the payment of all sums payable by Manager hereunder: (a) Manager shall retain the following commissions per gallon for the sale of consigned gasolines:

Grade of Gasoline	Commission	Minimum Commission
"Shell Premium"	3.0¢	1.5¢
"Shell"	3.0¢	1.5¢

provided, that at any time when Shell's retail price for any grade of gasoline at the station is considered by Shell to be sub-normal, the above-specified commission for such grade may be reduced, but never below the minimum commission above-specified for such grade; and (b) Manager shall retain all profits made on the sale of other consigned products (after paying to Shell the amounts specified in Article 2), all profits made from the sale of other merchandise purchased by Manager, and all receipts from approved services performed by Manager.

5. Operation. Manager shall: (a) devote his full business time to the operation of the station and use his best efforts to promote the sale of "Shell" products; (b) comply strictly and fully with all of Shell's instructions, rules and regulations, and all Federal, state and local laws, ordinances and regulations, applicable to the operation of the station; (c) keep such records and make such reports as Shell may require; (d) employ, and pay all wages and salaries of, such assistants at the station as Shell may require and approve, and discharge any such assistant at Shell's request; (e) pay for all supplies and small items of equipment required in connection with the operation of the station; (f) collect and pay, as directed, such taxes, fees or charges as Shell may desire or be required to collect from or pass on to customers, either as a separate item or as part of the retail selling price, and which are not included in the prices specified in article 2; (g) withhold and pay over to Shell such employee taxes and contributions as Shell is or may be required by law to withhold on the compensation of Manager and his assistants; and (h) be solely responsible for all cash collected, shortages in consigned products, and loss or damage of property owned by Manager or his assistants. Manager shall have no authority to make any commitments whatsoever in the name or behalf of Shell; and any unauthorized credit extended by Manager shall be for the account and at the risk of Manager alone.

6. Insurance—Indemnity. Manager shall carry at all times automotive bodily injury and property damage liability insurance covering such automotive equipment as he may utilize in the operation of the station, with minimum bodily injury limits of $10,000 per person and $20,000 per accident and a property damage limit of $10,000 per accident, and furnish Shell on request satisfactory evidence of such coverage. Manager shall indemnify Shell against all claims, suits, loss and liability arising out of the operation of any such automotive equipment, or out of the performance at the station of any automotive body work or major engine repairs.

3603 7. Security. At Shell's request, Manager shall furnish Shell satisfactory security for the performance of Manager's obligations under this Agreement, which may include surety bonds covering Manager and any or all of his assistants. Shell shall have a lien on all equipment, merchandise and other property owned by Manager at the station, to secure the performance of Manager's obligations hereunder; and in the event of any default by Manager in such performance, Shell shall have the right to enforce said lien in the same manner as permitted or provided by law for the enforcement of chattel mortgage liens.

8. Termination. This Agreement and Manager's employment hereunder shall continue until terminated by either Shell or Manager by giving twenty-four (24) hours' notice to the other at any time. Upon any termination of this Agreement, Manager shall immediately account to Shell for all consigned products not previously accounted for, as provided in article 2 hereof, and for all of Shell's equipment and other property used by Manager at the station during the continuance of this Agreement, including the equipment listed in attached Exhibit A, and shall pay Shell at current depreciated prices for any of such equipment or property which is not on hand at such time.

9. Entirety—Execution. This Agreement is the entire contract, and merges or supersedes all other promises, representations and understandings, with reference to or in consideration of the subject matter hereof. Neither this Agreement nor any amendment or supplement thereto shall be binding on Shell unless and until it is signed in Shell's behalf by a representative duly authorized by its Board of Directors, and a copy thereof so signed is delivered to Manager.

In Witness Whereof, this Agreement is executed as of the date first herein written.

Tire & Tube Sales

Mr. J. S. Parks
Room 1105

Dear Sir:

Some time ago I informed you that Mr. Supplee had requested a thorough exploration of tire propositions of various tire companies in order that the Sales Department would have an opportunity to determine whether or not there were more desirable programs than those that we are presently operating under. At the time, you suggested that the matter be deferred until the new year. Since this assignment is quite a considerable task, I should like to have it started at once and, if possible, completed before the end of February. I think we should invite all of the majors; i.e., Goodyear, Firestone, U. S., Goodrich, and General, to present their propositions on their name brands. In addition to that, I think we should also have propositions submitted, if possible, on certain of the desirable brands that are controlled by these majors, such as Kelly-Springfield, Fisk, Federal, Miller, and Hood.

We should also explore thoroughly the possibility of marketing our private brand and in this connection, should get proposals or refusals from the five majors, as well as from the Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company and the Lee Tire & Rubber Company. I do not believe that there are any other brands on which we would be interested in entertaining proposals.

I already have contacts with Mr. S. Gaylord of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio; Mr. S. R. Milburn, U. S. Rubber Company, New York, New York; Mr. M. G. Huntington of the Allied Lines Division of the B. F. Goodrich Company, Akron, Ohio; Mr. G. W. Stephens, President of the Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company, Mansfield, Ohio; and Mr. J. Addison, Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio. Mr. Charleston already has Mr. Stephens' proposal on the United brand, as well as on a private brand. If you wish me to do so I can make the necessary arrangements through these contacts that 3610 I have, for definite appointments.

I am attaching hereto a list of the principal points that must be explored in each proposal and also a list of the pertinent facts regarding our operation that you will probably have to have for discussion with representatives of the various manufacturers.

Very truly yours,

Tires

Mr. D. T. Colley
Room 1702

Dear Sir:

There are several broad choices that should be considered by an oil company that wishes to market a line of tires. These are:

1. Major brands—Otherwise known as the original equipment lines—represented by Goodyear, Firestone, United States, and Goodrich.
   A. The manufacturers in this group with the exception of Firestone also offer allied brands. Goodrich has Kelly-Springfield. United States has Fisk, Federal, Gillette, G & J, and others. Goodrich Hood, Miller, Brunswick, and Diamond. Some of these brands have been offered to all companies for their exclusive use during a contract period.
2. Minor brands—These include General, Seiberling, Lee, Mansfield, Dunlop, Cooper, Pharis, Dayton, Armstrong, and a number of other lines that are not nearly so well known.
   A. Some of these manufacturers also have allied brands. For example: Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company manufacture, in addition to the Mansfield tire, Century, Richland, and United. The allied lines of this group of manufacturers have in some cases been offered to oil companies on an exclusive basis.
3. Private brands—a name that is owned by the oil company or other mass marketer and used on a product that is made for the company by some tire manufacturer.

Following is a listing of some of the major oil companies and an indication of the type of tire marketing that they are employing:

PRIVATE BRAND		MINOR & ALLIED BRANDS		MAJOR BRAND
Oil Company	Brand	Oil Company	Brand	Oil Company	Brand
Standard Oil (Ohio)	Atlas	Phillips Petrol.	Lee	Shell Oil (E. Coast)	Firestone & Goodyear
Standard Oil (N.J. & Subsidiaries	Atlas	Atlantic Ref.	Lee	Texas Co.	Firestone & Goodrich
Standard Oil (Ind.)	Atlas	Signal Oil	Lee	Mid-Continent	Firestone
Standard Oil (Cal.)	Atlas	Sun Oil	Kelly-Springfield	Union Oil Co.	Firestone
Standard Oil (Kty.)	Atlas	*Shell Oil (West Coast)	India (General)	Sinclair	Goodyear
Socony-Vacuum	Mobil	*Tide-Water Associated Oil	Federal (US)
Cities Service	Actue
Gulf Oil Corp.	Gulf
Pure Oil Co.	Yale
American Oil Co.	Amoco

*Companies have exclusive use of allied brands.

Commission Exhibit No. 3514-C.

Acceptance

The big four have far more public acceptance by virtue of their original equipment policy, national advertising programs and their dominant position in the industry than any of the other brands. Majors, including their production of allied and private brands, supply approximately eighty per cent of the replacement passenger tires. Among the well-known allied brands are Kelly-Springfield, Fisk, Miller, and Hood. The outstanding minor brands are General, Seiberling, and Lee. The better established private brands include All-State, Riverside, Atlas, and Yale. Atlas is an oil company brand that has been on the market for twenty years. During this time, it has been nationally advertised and nationally distributed. Yale originated by an old New England Tire Company and subsequently pushed by General as an allied line, was finally purchased by Pure Oil Company after a period of exclusive marketing.

Completeness of Line

Only the major brands offer a complete line. Even their allied lines are not complete in the strictest sense of the word. Under the "Cons" of the Lee analysis is shown the number of sizes and types not available in their line, which gives a picture of the significance of a complete program. As is indicated, it would require unreasonable inventories to obtain 100% coverage with a considerable portion of this inventory provided for only a relatively small percentage of the total national tire business.

Availability

All of the majors were invited to submit proposals to The Atlantic Refining Company. Only one has been advanced on a house brand and that by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company. They are aggressively soliciting our business. All of the majors were also invited to submit proposals on their allied brands. The B. F. Goodrich Company is the only company that presented such a proposal and this was restricted to one brand; namely, Diamond.

We did not canvass all of the minor brand manufacturers for the obvious reason that the majority of them afforded us no improvement over our present supply arrangements. We did contact General but they indicated that they would prefer to see us complete negotiations with The Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company, in which company General holds a substantial interest. Seiberling was not approached because of their publicly proclaimed policy to do business only with the independent dealer. A proposition was submitted by the Cooper Tire & Rubber Company.

All manufacturers that were contacted, including our present suppliers, were invited to submit private brand proposals. Only one manufacturer; i.e., the Mansfield Tire & Rubber Company, was interested.

Attached to this presentation is a price comparison of passenger and truck tires which shows Atlantic's profit margins with the resale schedules that could be used for each of the several companies that have submitted proposals. This includes a price comparison using our present Lee price structure as the one hundred per cent base.

3614 The "Pros" and "Cons" of our opportunities in doing business with each of these manufacturers are also included. Cooper's proposition is not submitted in this presentation as it has no apparent advantages for Atlantic which are not better handled by the other companies.

This presentation and Atlantic's benefits with the several companies has been discussed at length with the members of the T. B. A. Products Committee. It was their unanimous opinion that Lee appeared to be the best choice for our company. To their approval, I would like to add my own since it is also my opinion after careful analysis that the Lee franchise is the best available at the present time for Atlantic.

Very truly yours,

(Using Lee as 100 level)

Lee Cost

Pass. (100%)

Truck (100%)

includes consignment, advertising assistance, training, adjustment allowance, cash discount allowance and prepaid shipments.

United Cost

Pass. (101.0%)

Truck (96.5%)

We have added 5.2% for average freight charge plus 1½% the estimated value of consignment, plus 1% for equivalent advertising assistance.

Diamond Cost

Pass. (99.4%)

Truck (97.2%)

We have deducted 1% for C/L shipments (2% is allowance but only about 50% of our deliveries would be C/L).

The following have also been deducted from Atlantic Confidential Cost:

2% Adjustment Allowance
1% Advertising Allowance
½ of 1% Anticipation Allowance
2% Cash Discount

We have added 1½% which is the estimated value of consignment.

3620 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 351I.

PRO	CON
1. Presently established and accepted by dealer and consumer.	1. Limited line—missing sizes and designs represent approx. 4% of National output in units but probably 10 to 15% in dollar volume. (Diamond estimates Tractor Tires dollar potential in our area as 20% of Truck.) Full line would include about 35 additional on and off highway truck tires and tube and 150 tractor and implement tire and tube sizes.
2. Good purchase costs.	2. Branch competition and friction in certain areas. This may be reduced as a plan is being developed to give the branches some credit for our business.
3. Profitable selling structure.	3. Minimum sales promotion assistance. A new Sales Promotion dept. at Lee may improve this situation.
4. Competitive quality.	4. Minimum field assistance.
5. Adjustment allowance to assist if handling "Road Hazard" guarantee.	5. Not as progressive a company as some competing manufacturers.
6. Limited competition with some control from other Lee channels.	6. Smaller company with limited manufacturing facilities, affecting their promptness in shipping certain size and design tires.
7. Local company, giving quick handling on most problems.	7. Reluctance to admit defects in workmanship and material has created field problems.
8. Fourteen years of business relationship.	8. Not allowed by contract to cover the full Atlantic Marketing territory. Ohio is not included. This matter is under further consideration now.
9. Assurance of continuing present total volume at a rate dependent upon our own salesmanship.
10. No inventory investment.
11. Unusually good public acceptance in E. Pa. and Phila.
12. Eliminate investment in present company-owned inventory. C.O.D. estimate is $470,000.

3621 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 351J.

United

PRO	CON
1. Presently established and in inventory throughout most of our territory.	1. Limited line. Approximately equal to Lee although we are told tractor tires will be added to their program.
2. Purchase price on a cost plus basis without authorization of mold cost.	2. No assistance in advertising or promotional expense. Estimated necessary expenditure: approximately 5% of sales value.
3. Excellent product performance record.	3. Loss in sales volume if it were the sole tire marketed by Atlantic estimated at 20% the first year.
4. Exclusive distribution in our territory.	4. The probability of needing five more years to establish the brand with dealers and consumers before volume equaled the present total sales level.
5. Moderate amount of consumer acceptance already established.	5. Inventory investment — estimated: $1,000,000.
6. Some obligation by Atlantic because of this company's assistance during the tire shortage.	6. Lowered profits due to increased merchandising expenditure.
7. Maximum control of profit margins and resale prices.	7. Assumption of all adjustment costs or approximately 2½% of the sales value.
8. Full benefit of advertising and sales promotion expenditures.	8. Considerably less public acceptance than Lee after 3 years sale by our company.
9. Assistance in training costs.
10. Continuation of present road hazard guarantee.
11. Less expense to company to establish in place of Lee than other preferred lines.

3622 COMMSSION EXHIBIT NO. 351K-L.

Private Brand

PRO	CON
1. Purchase on cost plus basis should give the lowest cost price over a long period.	1. Mold costs estimated 11/26/47 at $63,000—includes 70 Passenger molds covering 9 sizes and 20 Truck molds covering 17 sizes. Not included are white walls, second line, cushion types or special purpose truck.
2. Maximum control of profit margins and resale prices.	2. Present passenger tire prices on cost plus basis—not as favorable as maximum distributor deals.
3. Full merchandising flexibility.	3. All advertising and promotion costs at company expense—estimated at 5% of sales value.
4. Complete control of adjustment policies.	4. Continuous and intensive publicity required before Atlantic and private brand are associated in the consumer's mind.
5. Full benefit of advertising and sales promotion expenditures.	5. Lowered profits due to increased merchandising expenditures.
6. Sole source for inventory replacement.	6. Limited line of sizes and styles. Would not be as complete as present Lee line.
7. Increased company prestige as private brand is a current trend among Cll Companies.	7. Direct reflection on the company with consumer product dissatisfaction.
8. Ability to change supplier without disturbing Marketing program.	8. Assumption of all adjustment costs or approx. 2½% of sales value.
9. Possible increased salesmen's interest and activity because of company label.	9. No field assistance by manufacturer.
	10. All training costs at company expense. Estimated present cost to suppliers is $7500 per year.
	11. Lower volume for period necessary to build dealer and consumer acceptance—estimated at 15% below present volume in first year.
	12. Inventory investment — estimated at $1,000,000.
	13. Reduced truck tire volume even after establishing brand name. It is estimated that this would be at least a 25% reduction from our present level.
	14. Deviation from established policy of marketing only manufacturers' branded products.

File: Batteries

Mr. S. J. Heideman
Room 1210

Dear Sir:

As per your request we contacted the following storage battery companies in an attempt to discover whether they had at present or contemplated in the future a battery program for direct dealer merchandising similar to the commission plan offered by certain tire manufacturers.

Prest-O-Lite Battery Company Inc.
Globe-Union Inc.
Delco-Remy Division General Motors Corp.
Electric Auto-Lite Company
Willard Storage Battery Co.
Electric Storage Battery Co.
See under "OK 11 A.M." Jan 10th Gould-National Batteries, Inc.

Replies to our inquiry were received by phone or letter from everyone with the exception of Exide and Auto-Lite. We understand Mr. Connell of Exide talked to Mr. Paxson and believe Auto-Lite prefers that any consideration of a national oil account be handled by Prest-O-Lite.

Prest-O-Lite, Willard and Gould-National believe that they could offer us something through their distributor organization, and would like to discuss the matter further. We attach their replies to our inquiry. The Delco people believe that their distributors would be willing to negotiate with us individually but they would not care to act for the individual distributors, or to play any part in the program.

The other concerns which replied have no acceptable program nor have they given consideration to any.

When the attachments have served your purpose will you please return same for our files.

Very truly yours,

Purchasing Department

Anti Freeze
Tire Chains unless delivered by Field Warehouse
All types of Equipment—Battery Chargers, Display, Service Station, etc.
Advertising and Sales Promotion items.

Payment of Commission

Akron will pay all commission to Shell in connection with this plan. Rates of commission vary by type of Shell account, and type of product. Therefore it is of the utmost importance that all Shell accounts be correctly classified on G-1209 records and also when reported on G-1204 so that the correct amount of commission will be computed by Akron.

Rates of Commission follow—

(A) Approved Petroleum Jobber or Petroleum Distributor
All Merchandise (except Resolute Battery Volume) 7½%
Resolute Battery Volume 7½%

3708 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 391A-C.

Shell Oil Co.

Sales Commission Plan.

The Shell Oil Co., will be paid a sales commission on net sales (by authorized supply points) of certain Goodyear products to Shell Franchise Jobbers and Shell Independent Dealers, (hereinafter referred to as Shell Accounts) as recommended by Shell and approved by Goodyear District Manager.

All sales under this plan are sales by an authorized supply point to the Independent Shell Account. Billing issued to Shell Oil Co. covering purchases either for Shell "Own Consumption" purposes or by Shell Company-operated stations are not subject to sales commission.

Payment of commission will be made to Shell by Akron and will be based on sales reported to Akron by Districts on monthly G-1204 reports.

Establishment of Authorized Supply Points.

District Manager will determine supply point for each Shell Account approved.

Goodyear Districts, Field and Factory Field Warehouses, Goodyear Service Stores and Goodyear Independent Dealers may serve as authorized supply points for these accounts. See Page 1-A for products each class of supply point may deliver.

The supply point will make delivery of the merchandise, issue billing and carry the Accounts of the Shell Accounts they serve.

Master Record G-1209

Shell Oil Company will prepare G-1209 on each Shell account which is to participate under the plan. All copies of the form should be approved and forwarded by Shell to the Goodyear District Manager for approval and completion.

The G-1209 must be filled in completely as provided on the form.

After G-1209 is completed and approved by both Shell and Goodyear District Manager, District Office will distribute copies as follows—

Original (white)	—District Office file
Duplicate (canary)	—Shell Oil Company Division Office
Triplicate (pink)	—Goodyear Field Representative
Quadruplicate (blue)	—Supply Point where a Goodyear Store (other supply points handled by list—see below)

G-1209 provided to Stores which are not supply points for merchandise other than Car and Home Merchandise must be clearly marked "applies only to Car and Home Merchandise".

If more than one Store will act as a supply point, the additional Store (stores other than the regular supply point) should be notified of the approved Shell account by letter.

Independent dealer supply points should be furnished a list of the Shell accounts who will buy from them and on whom we ask them to report.

Credit Policy

All Shell Accounts participating under this plan will establish credit with the Goodyear District, Store or Independent Dealer, which has been designated to serve them. Purchase, may, of course, be made on a cash or COD basis also. Districts must maintain separate B-80 on each COD or cash discount.

No Change Replace Sheet Dated 3-3-55.

3710 Price Policy

Approved Shell Accounts under this plan will purchase their requirements on the same basis as any independent dealer at the prices and discounts for which they can qualify in accordance with our regular sales program for tires, tubes, batteries, C&H Mdse, etc.

Products Eligible Under Sales Commission Plan

Sales of the following listed products to approved Shell accounts are to be reported on the G-1204 reports when delivery is taken from authorized supply point as indicated below:

(A) When delivery is taken from and/or billing issued by District

All Goodyear Tire and Tubes (Except Airplane) including seconds.

Goodyear Automotive and Farmlight Batteries and Battery Cables.

* Goodyear Camelback
Goodyear produced Recaps & Repairs

Sales Commission Plan—General

All Goodyear shipments will be to the supplying dealer —we will not drop ship to the Shell dealer for account of the dealer.

Important — Careful attention under the Independent Dealer Supply Point handling is required to avoid payment to Shell of duplicated commissions under the following circumstances.

When a Shell account is authorized under this plan, commissions are to be paid only on this Shell account's purchases from his supply point. If this authorized account is the supply point for other Shell accounts, then sales to such other accounts are not eligible for commission as would result in our paying commission to Shell on the original sale and then paying a second commission on the same merchandise when it was resold to the other Shell Account.

The instructions outlined above under "Independent Dealer Supply Points", therefore, are applicable only if the dealer supply point is not an oil company approved commission account.

Goodyear Store Supply Points

District Manager will provide stores that are to function as supply point with G-1209 of specified Shell Accounts for whom the store is the designated supply point. As any changes occur in the G-1209, District Manager will notify store of change by copy of G-1209. Upon receipt, Stores must immediately revise their records.

It is suggested that stores file the visible G-1209 form in their stock ledger binder for ready reference, Stores receiving lists of accounts from their District Manager should order supplies of blank G-1209 forms with which to establish their visible system.

Special Instructions Covering Store Car & Home Points

Only those stores specifically approved by District Manager may operate as Car & Home Supply Points.

When so approved supply point stores may sell and bill to specified Shell accounts any Goodyear Car and Home merchandise stocked at our Field Warehouse. Brake Lining and related merchandise, General Electric and Hotpoint Major Appliances, GE Radios and Motorola Radios and Heaters are not involved under this arrangement.

The Shell Accounts' buying price should be either dealer or "75" price net except for cash discount. Quantity shipping allowance will not apply. Annual Bonus will be paid if earned.

Re: Hanselman Tire & Battery Company
Springfield, Illinois

Mr. E. C. Flynn
District Manager
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company
Peoria, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Flynn:

I have been hopeful that I would have an opportunity to meet you sometime at Springfield where we could discuss the Hanselman Tire and Battery account. This subject has been raised with you by Mr. Charles Mead, Manager of our Division Retail Department and Mr. Paul Houser, District Manager, Decatur-Springfield. It is my understanding that you have consistently refused to recommend that Shell receive credit for T. B. A. sales being made by Goodyear to the Hanselman account and the purpose of this letter is to request that you reconsider your decision.

We recognize the fact that Hanselman was a former Goodyear employee; however, we wish to point out that we were directly involved with John at the time he started his business venture and a lease-contract was signed with him for Shell Petroleum Products from the very beginning. Our people have consistently worked with this account for furthering of the T. B. A. volume; however, your predecessor, as well as yourself, have denied us the credit for this account which we know we are rightfully entitled to receive. During 1946-47 Mr. Hanselman swung his purchases over very heavily to General Tire. Prior to January, 1948, at which time he returned to Goodyear 100%, we had several discussions with him regarding his future source of tire supply and definitely did assist in influencing his decision to go along with the Goodyear program. In fact, Hanselman asked our opinion and advice as to whether or not he should select Goodyear or another supplier. We recommended your company because we felt at that time that due to his background of experience he might be benefited to a greater extent, and further, we had no doubt in our minds as to your company's concurrence in our request for credit on the account.

For your information, there has never been any question about our contract being direct with John Hanselman on the sale of gasoline, and also it is important to 3716 recognize that we have loaned a considerable amount of equipment, such as pumps, tanks, lift and air compressor, in addition to other monies expended in the development of the service facilities and appearance of this unit. There is also no question as to the fact that Mr. Hanselman operates his tire business out of the location which we have under lease-contract and frankly, we just cannot reconcile ourselves to your line of thinking in connection with the part we play in this account.

Our associations with your company in the past have been most pleasant and we propose to continue to do everything we can to cooperate with you and your people; however, this particular case has reached the point where we feel our rights are being ignored and I wish to go on record with you at this time that unless favorable action is taken by you and your Company to assure Shell receiving credit on this account retroactive to January 1, 1948, we will have no alternative other than to encourage Mr. Hanselman to find a new source of T. B. A. supply at the expiration of his present annual contract.

We ask that you review this situation, after which we would appreciate receiving your comments and favorable decision to comply with our request.

Yours very truly,

Shell—Re: Hanselman Tire & Battery Company
Springfield, Illinois

In the matter of qualifying subject account under our Shell Sales Agreement, as a result of your further investigation and our discussions with our Akron management, it has been mutually agreed to qualify the account, effective June 1, 1948.

In view of this decision, will you please issue a G-1209 for the account covering tires, batteries and C & H M, effective June 1, 1948, with sales credit to Shell accruing from that date.

Mr. Pegg, Mr. Mueller and Mr. Meade of the Shell Division Office—St Louis, are thoroughly in accord with this arrangement and assure us complete cooperation in the further development of the account.

If we can be of any further assistance in the matter, please advise.

Subject—Shell Oil Co, San Francisco—Sales Commission Plan

Effective January 1, 1949 Shell Oil Company, Inc., San Francisco will be sold on a sales commission basis, superseding the present Resale Program. It has been mutually agreed also, that this changeover will begin at once on a limited scale and will be completed between now and the first of the year. All changes prior to January 1st should be effective as of the close of our accounts receivable either October 25th or November 25th.

The following preparatory steps are necessary to insure the change of program with a minimum of confusion. (It will be necessary to expedite action for setting up the special accounts mentioned above.)

List of Shell Accounts to Participate

Shell will submit a list of all their dealers who will be eligible in its opinion to participate under this program.

It is the responsibility of the District Manager to discuss this list of accounts with the proper Shell representative and mutually agree on the specific accounts to participate under the commission program and as direct Goodyear dealers or as Associate Dealers under supplying dealers and stores.

The District Manager will then assign the approved list of accounts to field representatives (or Store Managers where the account will be sold as a Store Associate Dealer) so immediate contact can be made with the Shell accounts to explain and sell the new program. These contacts should be made before the changeover date so that the Shell Account is not left without a source of supply.

The District Manager will classify each approved account to be sold as a district account for dealer discount, battery classification, and any guarantees just as is done for independent dealers. He will arrange, too, for a source of supply (District, Store, or Dealer) for each Shell outlet. Whenever practical, the District should be the designated supply point.

District should notify by letter these Dealers who are appointed Supplying Dealers. (Field Representatives should make verbal arrangements with the dealers prior to this letter.)

Stores should be notified by letter those dealers for whom they will act as supply point. (This letter will be replaced as soon as possible by approved G-1209 forms.)

3722 Stores so designated must secure immediately X-606 Shell Commission stamp to identify all invoices and credit memoranda on eligible products as subject to commission. Stores order this stamp from Akron on G1051C.

A list of the approved accounts with proper dealer classification and supply point noted will be submitted to the District Operating Manager for his use.

G-1209

Districts and Store will accept the approved list of accounts as authority to pass invoices for sales commission until G-1209's are issued.

The Operating Manager will use this list to prepare G-1209 forms for all accounts. Distribute in the established manner. This should be done, if possible, before January 1st. (Destroy as of changeover date present B-96 records of accounts operating on approved Shell credit limits.)

Goodyear Dealer Supply Point

Where a Goodyear Dealer is appointed as a Supply Point for approved Shell Dealers, he will carry the accounts on his own books. It will be the responsibility of the Goodyear Field Representative to arrange for and if necessary to secure each month a copy of the Goodyear Dealers' invoices and credit memos to the eligible Shell account covering eligible Goodyear Products. Form G-1208 can be used if the dealer's billing system does not provide for extra copy of invoices.

These documents will then be handled by the district as explained in special account instructions (Shell Oil Co., New York).

Price Policy

Approved Shell Accounts under this plan will purchase their requirements on the same basis as any independent dealer at the prices and discounts for which they can qualify in accordance with our regular sales program for tires, tubes, batteries, C & H Mdse, etc.

Credit Policy

The Shell accounts must establish credit with the Goodyear Supply Point which is to serve them. Shell Oil Company is no longer involved, but will be glad to furnish credit information based on its past experience.

Districts will withdraw all B-96 credit limits being sure to notify dealer and store supply points that no deliveries after the changeover date for the account of Shell are permitted. (Final billing under Shell Resale Program by dealer and store supply points must be cleared immediately after the commission plan is put into effect for the individual dealers.)

The necessary credit information should be secured and appropriate credit limits established as quickly as possible for accounts carried in district accounts receivable.

Shell Dealers may, of course, purchase on a cash or COD basis.

Disposition of Back Orders

Present back orders as of the effective date of the change should be referred to the Shell Account to determine if the merchandise is still desired. If merchandise is desired, reinstate the order under the dealer's name. Back orders for those Shell accounts assigned to supplying dealers or stores should be referred to the supplying dealers or stores for further handling with the Shell account.

3724 Sales to Company-Owned and Operated Stations

Sales to such accounts will be handled under a Marketing Resale Agreement which is explained in the special account instructions (Shell Oil Co., N. Y.).

Billing will be made on B-16 form upon receipt of proper purchase order signed by station manager. Invoices must be rendered to Shell in quadruplicate. All discounts are to be shown on the face of the invoice.

Sales to these Stations are not subject to commission and are not to be included, therefore, on the reports of sales which is the basis for payment of commission.

Purchases for Own Consumption

There is no change in instructions pertaining to purchase for own consumption—standard Shell purchase orders will be issued and the regular own consumption discounts are to be extended on the face of the invoice.

Sales for own consumption are not subject to sales commission.

General

1. The new plan accepted by Shell Oil Co, San Francisco, is identical with the present program used by Shell, New York. Therefore, use as basis of this program the instructions as outlined in the Special Accounts Folder under Shell Oil Co., New York. All Goodyear personnel should review these instructions carefully.
2. District Information Letter #1052A announced that Goodyear Dealers, with Akron approval, might be established as supply points for Shell Independent Dealers on Car & Home merchandise. This plan will still be in effect.
3. Review instructions in Wholesale Field Operating Manual, pages C-30 through C-30P, to insure correct handling of forms and reports—G-1203, G-1204, G-1205, G-1206, G-1208, G-1209. (Particularly, see C-30K—C-30M on Shell Oil Co, New York.)
4. Shell Oil Co Division Offices will furnish each district the G-1204 forms filled out except for the figures to be transferred from the G-1205's. Each district will, of course, make a summary sheet for each Shell Division per manual instructions.
5. For an excellent general discussion of this program, read the section in the new Field Representatives Manual under "Oil Company Distribution and Its Importance" (Section VIII, pages 93-105).

6. Goodyear will not be involved in Shell's bonus problem with the accounts in each of its divisions which are transferred to the commission plan before the first of the year. Our regular plan for payment of annual bonus—bonusable purchases projected to an annual basis—will apply.

Mr C H Mead, Jr
Shell Oil Company, Inc.

Dear Charlie:

I am returning to you, unsigned, two G-1209's which request that G D Armstrong Co. Inc., of Laytonsville, Md., be approved as a supplying dealer for Laurel Park Servicenter at Laurel Park, Md., and Bowie Shell Service at Bowie, Md.

Approved supply points for both of these dealers are the Goodyear Service Store in Washington and Alfred Stidham Tire Company in Washington, also the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company District at Baltimore, Md.

Either of these two accounts can certainly be amply supplied by one of the three approved supply points and I suggest that you encourage your stations to please permit themselves to be supplied by one of those three points.

I cannot imagine what advantage they would find in wanting to buy from Armstrong, even tho' I must agree that Armstrong is a very fine organization and one of our most valued dealers.

My reason for taking this attitude is the fact that we very definitely discourage our dealers from selling Goodyear tires outside of their authorized territory, and in servicing either Laurel or Bowie, the Armstrong Company are out of their territory.

A situation of this kind, of course, presents us with a serious problem for, naturally, we are certainly not in a position to dictate to any good dealer exactly where he may sell the merchandise which he purchases from us—all we can do is ask that they remain within the boundaries which we establish. However, in the case of Oil Company stations where we have already authorized and established an ample number of supply points, all with good service, we cannot pay the Oil Company in question a commission on merchandise delivered by a dealer who is operating outside of his territorial boundaries.

I believe that you will sympathize with our position in this matter and that your Field Representatives will courteously request the operators of these stations to buy their Goodyear merchandise from approved supply points. If, however, they refuse to do so I suppose there is very little you and I can do about it.

3728 Kindest personal regards.

Marketing Resale Agreement—Company Operated Stations (Commission Basis)

In addition to those operated by Shell salaried employee, Shell also has in operation throughout the country a number of Company Owned Stations which are operated on a commission basis.

Where these stations are involved, the Shell District Manager or Salesman will issue Form D-258 to Goodyear for the stations' initial order of tires, tubes, batteries and car and home merchandise.

Shipment and billing of the initial order covered by the D-258 will be handled strictly in accord with instructions on Salary Operated Station purchases.

Only the initial order will be ordered on D-258 and charged to Shell. All subsequent orders from the station will be billed to the individual managing the station on commission.

Districts will, therefore, establish credit limit on the operator as an individual and handle the account the same as any other District account. District Manager will establish levels at which the account will be billed.

In some instances a dealer or store may be established as a supply point for these stations, in which case the dealer or store will handle and bill the account direct.

Sales to these stations, after the initial order (and all back orders thereof) has been shipped, will be included in volume on which Shell will receive commission. Therefore, Shell should submit G-1209 on these stations in accordance with Shell. "Sales Commission" instruction and all billing to the operator as an individual should be stamped "Shell Commission".

Sales Commission Plan

General

All Goodyear shipments will be to the supplying dealer—we will not drop ship to the Shell dealer for account of the dealer.

Important — Careful attention under the Independent Dealer Supply Point handling is required to avoid payment to Shell of duplicated commissions under the following circumstances.

When a Shell account is authorized under this plan, commissions are to be paid only on this Shell account's purchases from his supply point. If this authorized account is the supply point for other Shell accounts, then sales to such other accounts are not eligible for commission as such would result in our paying commission to Shell on the original sale and then paying a second commission on the same merchandise when it was resold to the other Shell Account.

The instructions outlined above under "Independent Dealer Supply Points", therefore, are applicable only if the dealer supply point is not an oil company approved commission account.

Goodyear Store Supply Points

District Manager will provide stores that are to function as supply point with G-1209 of specified Shell Accounts for whom the store is the designated supply point. As any changes occur in the G-1209, District Manager will notify store of change by copy of G-1209. Upon receipt, Stores must immediately revise their records.

It is suggested that stores file the visible G-1209 form in their stock ledger binder for ready reference. Stores receiving lists of accounts from their District Manager should order supplies of blank G-1209 forms with which to establish their visible system:

Special Instructions Covering Store Car & Home Supply Points.

Only those stores specifically approved by District Manager, (after approval by Okron) may operate as Car & Home Supply Points.

When so approved supply point stores may sell and bill to specified Shell accounts any Goodyear Car and Home merchandise stocked at our Field Warehouse and Sea-Bee Outboard motors. Brake Lining and related merchandise, General Electric and Hotpoint Major Appliances, GE Radios and Motorola Radios and Heaters are not involved under this arrangement.

The Shell Accounts' buying price should be either dealer or distributor price net except for cash discount. Quantity shipping allowance will not apply. Annual Bonus will be paid if earned.

3740 Payment of Commission .

Akron will pay all commission to Shell in connection with this plan. Rates of commission varies by type of Shell account, and type of product, therefore it is of the utmost importance that all Shell accounts be correctly classified on G-1209 records and also when reported on G-1204 so that the correct amount of commission will be computed by Akron.

Volume subject to sales commission must be segregated under the following classifications:

(A) All new tires and tubes including seconds, recaps and repairs, special priced stock, motorcycle, bicycle, truck farm, industrial and wheelbarrow tires and tubes but excluding airplane tires and tubes.

(B) Goodyear batteries including farmlight, battery cables

(C) Resolute batteries

(D) Car & Home and other products subject to commission not detailed above.

(See Page 1A—Shell Special Account Instructions).

Commission is payable on the above merchandise only if delivery is made in accordance with schedule on page 1A of Shell Special Account instructions. Credit memos should be deducted from respective commission volume accumulations.

Recording of Volume for Accounts on District Ledgers

* Tire and Tube Volume

Post bonusable items including credits for experimental Truck Bonus to the B-80 statistical section as usual.

* Non Bonusable Tire and Tube items such as Motorcycle, Bicycle Tires and Tubes, etc., which are eligible under the sales commission plan are to be posted in the blank column of the B-80 at the time postings are made to the B-80. Post at merchandise net invoice level.

 Goodyear Automotive Batteries Including Farmlight

Post Bonusable items to B-80 statistical section in usual manner. Enter net battery volume on G1204

* Resolute Batteries

Resolute volume should be entered on B-80 in the appropriate column of the statistical section. This volume must be kept entirely separate from Goodyear Battery volume accumulations.

Car & Home Merchandise & Miscellaneous

Post to Statistical Section of B-80 such volume which is subject to sales commission. Enter on B-80 at net invoice price after deduction of all allowances. Include only items specifically designated as applicable for sales commission.

3744 Delivery of tires and tubes to Shell Oil Co., Jobbers by supplying dealers Upon approval by Akron and the Division Manager, Goodyear dealers may be established as supply points for tires and tubes sold to Shell Jobbers. The supplying dealer will receive 7½% commission based on contract dealer prices for all tire and tubes delivered to Shell Jobbers. Under this arrangement, supplying dealer will bill Goodyear District for all tires and tubes delivered to Jobbers for the account of Goodyear.

Products

Only Goodyear tires and tubes are to be handled under this plan, other Goodyear products may be purchased by the Jobber from his usual source of supply.

Credit Approval

District will provide supplying dealer with a monthly credit limit on each approved Shell Jobber. Credit limit will cover deliveries during the statement month and will be considered as renewed with the close of each statement. Limit should be based on contract dealer price with deliveries recorded at the same level. Any deliveries beyond the approved credit limit become the supplying dealer's responsibility. Cash or COD deliveries may not be made by supplying dealer under this arrangement.

Purchase Orders

Jobbers will present purchase order for tires and tubes directly to the supplying dealer made out to the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc. Telephone or verbal orders may be accepted, however, supplying dealer will be responsible for determining that delivery is made only to authorized representative of the Jobber. Supplying dealer will obtain signature of Jobber or common carrier on each delivery and must be in a position to prove delivery in the event of dispute. Supplying dealer will bill the District daily for all deliveries made under this plan attaching to such billing the Jobber's purchase order if available.

Billing

District will issue "R" invoice billing to Jobber daily as billing from the supplying dealer is received. "R" credit memo should then be issued to the supplying dealer for the merchandise delivered, plus 7½% commission. Credit memo will be priced at dealer's buying level and will be deducted from bonusable volume.

Transportation

All deliveries or shipments to the Jobber's bulk plant will be made by supplying dealer, transportation charges collect. Drop shipments to the Jobber's associate dealers are not permitted.

Commission to Shell Oil Co.

* Shell Oil Co. will receive 5% commission on deliveries under the above plan instead of 7½%. Districts must arrange to keep such billing to the Jobber segregated on B-80 from volume covering deliveries by the District or other approved supply points under the regular commission program. This can be accomplished by earmarking volume under the regular plan as entries are made to the Statistical Section of the B-80.

G-1204 Reports

Tire and tube purchases by Jobbers under this plan will be broken down between 5% and 7½% on G-1204 reports, but in the current month column only. Show total for 7½% volume and separate total for 5% volume, earmarking the latter by the suffix "5%". When totaling G-1204 pages include the Jobber's volume subject to 7½% on line "J" in usual manner. At bottom of G-1204 write in volume subject to 5% as follows, "tire and tube deliveries this month by Goodyear dealer for account of Goodyear $ (Show total of all 5% volume on page)"

* In preparing summary G-1204 sheets, show the following separate totals on tires and tubes at the bottom of the page (current month tire and tube column only).

1. Show total of 7½% purchases on line "J"
2. Show total of 5% at bottom of G-1204 as outlined above. (Must agree with total of amounts written in at bottom of individual G-1204 sheets).

In completing year to date section of G-1204 (both individual and summary) show only one figure for total of 5% and 7½% purchases and in totaling this section include 5% purchases in same figure with 7½% volume and insert on line "J".

3746 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 397A.-B.

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.
Akron 16, Ohio

January 30, 1953

Mr George L Switzer
Shell Oil Company
50 West 50th Street
New York, New York

Dear George:

We all recognize that in your T.B.A. sales tires and tubes represent the preponderance of dollar volume—somewhere between 70 to 80% as a matter of fact.

On this premise, therefore, our combined efforts should be directed to explore every opportunity to increase the sales of tires and tubes.

What are the ingredients to successful tire merchandising through service stations?

In our book they line up in importance about this way:

1. Service
2. Stock of merchandise
3. Display of merchandise
4. Point of sale advertising
5. Enthusiastic solicitation

Our purpose in writing concerns points three and four.

Realizing that service station operators generally have space and financial limitations, we suggest this idea which we know will increase tire sales yet circumvent these limitations.

Tire selling, like car selling, is a "horse trading" business, therefore, any successful tire operation is, or should be, in the used tire business.

And used tire merchandising alone can be profitable, but more important it can help increase new tire sales.

We all know the value of mass display—the used car lot with two or three hundred cars—chain groceries with tables loaded high with one product, etc.

3747 That is display and advertising in one package and is very effective in selling merchandise.

Here is a plan being used successfully and we suggest it be tried in some of your more aggressive stations.

Build a two tier tire rack 15 to 20 feet long, at rear and joined to the station building, facing the court.

Such a tire rack can be used two ways.

All used tires even "junkers", after being cleaned up, segregated by size and amount of serviceable wear remaining and prices, can be displayed most effectively.

Used tires are bought—not sold, and used tire buyers certainly will "shop" such a display. Here is a "live" new tire prospect either on the spot or in the future.

A chain or cable run through the tires with a lock arrangement, eliminates the need for removal at night.

The other plan is to accumulate 50 or so junkers and have these wrapped and displayed along with the salable used tires.

In most large cities a dealer or retreader has a tire wrapping machine and this service can be obtained. Dealers in areas where there are tire factories can arrange this service through them.

In the interest of increasing your dealers' profits, your commissions and our sales, we would like to have your approval for promoting this merchandising idea.

If you agree we will supply our sales organization with the necessary information and data, who in turn will promote the program with your field people and dealers.

There will be some expense involved—iron pipe or ordinary 2" x 4" lumber, a long chain, lock and labor.

You, of course, will decide whether this should be considered part of the station equipment, or whether your dealer bear the expense. We would be guided by your decision.

Repeating, tires and tubes make up ¾ of your total T.B.A. sales. Here's a program that will substantially increase your dealer sales and profits. We know it has real merit and recommend that it be used.

We will appreciate your views and if agreeable we will start on it immediately to be ready for the heavy tire buying season ahead.

Yours very truly,

J W Basista

Subject: [illegible]

Dear Mr Gibson

This will confirm with you in a general manner the fundamental principles of our merchandising Commission Plan under which the Shell-Tex Tank Company are operating as of above date.

Allowance must be made for rounding an understanding on any provisions that might develop as we gain experience in working under this plan with you and on any points we may, through oversight, omit herein.

Under the merchandising Commission Plan we would compensate you on a basis outlined later in this letter, for actively assisting us in selling and promoting the sale of our merchandise through such independent resale outlets as are otherwise in or propose to engage in the sale of your products and as agreed upon in writing with you from time to time.

It is understood that you would acknowledge certain responsibilities in that your field representatives would call upon such customer in company with our salesmen or otherwise and cooperate and assist us in our efforts to promote and encourage the sale of our merchandise by the customers to whom such sales shall be made by us. You would see that your field offices work cooperatively with us with the view to assisting us to the fullest practicable extent to conduct the arrangements with all such customers and you would maintain adequate qualified personnel to render efficient services incidental to the plan on your part.

Under the plan Shell and Goodyear would agree upon the list of Dealers on whose purchases a commission would be earned by Shell. It is implied to assume that all Dealers now purchasing our products through you would be approved to operate under the Commission Plan. Any future additions or deletions of Dealers would be by mutual agreement.

We would sell these Dealers on a direct basis for the account of Goodyear or on an Associate Dealer basis through our Stores or Independent Dealers. This, at the election of Goodyear.

Establishment of Discount & Delivery

Goodyear District Manager will determine the delivery point for each small account approved. Goodyear Distributor, Goodyear Factory Sold customer, Goodyear Service Store, or Goodyear Independent Dealer, may serve as intermediate delivery point for same accounts that are approved by Goodyear District Manager. The delivery point will make delivery of the merchandise, issue billing, and carry the accounts of the small accounts they serve.

Credit Policy

All small accounts participating under this plan will establish credit with the Goodyear District, Store or Independent Dealer, which has been designated to serve them. Investigation will, of course, be made on a case by case basis also, and termination statement rendered accordingly.

Price Policy

Approved small accounts under this plan will purchase their requirements on the same basis as any Independent Dealer at the prices and discounts for which they can qualify in accordance with Goodyear regular sales program for Tires, Tubes, Batteries, Car and Home Accessories, etc., in effect at time of shipment.

Commission Basis

Commissions are payable on the net purchase price of Goodyear merchandise. Normally this would be invoice level, however, it is necessary to periodically adjust the volume to allow for earned discounts not reflected on our invoices.

Invoices Distributed under Sales Commission Plan

A. Item delivery is taken from and/or billing issued by Goodyear District Office -

All Goodyear Tires & Tubes (except Airplane) Incl. Accords.
Goodyear Automotive Specialties Batteries Factory Cables, Complete Batteries.

... the recommendation of our District ..., we will establish a Goodyear Store or a Goodyear Dealer as supply point on all Old Tire Car ... warehouses. Commission will be paid to Mill ... on such deliveries on the same basis as for deliveries made from a Goodyear District or warehouse.

... Eligible Under Commission Plan

1. All ... billed on any of the eligible ... listed above.

2. All ... not listed above as eligible ... including, but not limited to - ... Metric ... for ... Tires.

... Metric Tubes.
... Tubes, Grade ... Accessories.
... Tubes ... Tubes.
... Tires.
... - ... delivered by ... warehouse.
... - ... - ... Tires, ... Tubes, ... Accessories, etc.
... ... herein ... items.

[redacted]

All Goodyear shipments will be to the applying dealer. We will not drop ship to the Shell dealer for the account of Goodyear's dealer.

Goodyear have District Offices currently in Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Fresno, Salt Lake, Denver and El Paso.

Near the end of this year three Goodyear delivery points will be increased by the addition of a Goodyear District. The Fresno stock transfer will be handled through Goodyear's depot at that point.

We have two Shell warehouses on our Coast - one in Los Angeles and one in Portland.

We have 10 stores in Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington. In all major cities we have either Goodyear Company owned and supplied Independent dealers. In other words, we will provide for adequate delivery service for all types of Shell accounts.

I feel the proposed change in plan will not cause any major dislocation of supply since which have satisfactorily served Shell-California for many years. Furthermore, our experience working with Shell in the past has been satisfactory and will act as a guide in our future operation.

Under the Combined Plan of operation Shell cannot earn commission on its own purchases, either for export, Service Stations, or own Consumption.

Billing to Shell on this type of purchase is on the same basis as now in use.

Should this not be the case, please [illegible] let me know if I can be of further help.

Very truly yours,

[redacted]

Memorandum

Re: Docket No. 6486—List C—Goodyear

Set forth below are comments with respect to the various items included in the Commission's typewritten request for material and data, undated, entitled "List C—Goodyear."

Item No.	Comments
5A.	Note: Goodyear has no knowledge or information whereby it can classify oil company retail outlets as "lessee, contract, etc." or oil company distributors as "consignees, etc."
5C(c).	Note: Column headed "Number of Retail Accounts" includes Goodyear dealers and associate dealers which are served by Goodyear stores.
5D.	Note: There is some duplication of associate dealers and dealers which cannot be avoided. Dealer figures do not include distributors or associate dealers served by Goodyear stores.
7A.	Note: There is a possibility of duplication in the number of stores acting as "O. C. S. D.'s" due to the fact that the same store may be acting as "O. C. S. D." for both the parent oil company and its subsidiaries or affiliates.
3760 7B.	Note: There is a possibility of duplication in the number of dealers acting as "O. C. S. D.'s" due to the fact that the same dealer may be acting as "O. C. S. D." for both the parent oil company and its subsidiaries or affiliates.

8A. Note: There is some duplication in items 2 (warehouses) and 4 (Goodyear dealers) which cannot be avoided.

8B. Note: Due to the fact that Goodyear districts overlap Atlantic Refining Company marketing regions and both companies' districts overlap state boundaries there are a number of states serviced by more than one warehouse.

8C. Note: Column headed "Total Number Dealers Signed" includes both Atlantic retailers and distributors.

3846 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 404.

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Bailment Agreement

This Agreement, made this ..... day of ....., 19....., by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, party of the first part, and ..... of .....

.....

party of the second part, Witnesseth, That,

For the mutual considerations hereinafter set forth and by reason of the special trust and confidence the party of the first part (hereinafter referred to as "Sherwood") reposes in the party of the second part (hereinafter referred to as "Agent"), it is agreed that Agent may act as a non-exclusive bailee for hire for Sherwood in the territory described at the end hereof, with headquarters at ..... , State of ..... ; and Agent hereby agrees to act in such capacity subject to the following terms and conditions:

1. The respective rights, duties and obligations of the parties in performing hereunder shall be those imposed by law upon Sherwood as bailor and Agent as bailee for hire as enlarged by this agreement, it being understood that the choice of the term "Agent" is for reasons of past Sherwood Brothers Incorporated practice and not for legal reasons, and there is no intention by the use of such term or the performance of any act hereunder to clothe party of the second part with any powers, rights or authorizations, representative or otherwise, not herein affirmatively set forth.

2. Agent shall receive, care for, measure and account for in conformity to Sherwoods' requirements, and sell, exclusive of other similar products, the oils, lubricants and other products (herein referred to as "products") that Sherwood supplies for sale, and shall deliver and collect for all products thus sold, it being understood that all such products shall remain the property of Sherwood until sold and that the proceeds therefrom shall be the property of Sherwood and subject to its orders. If Agent shall handle and deal in property other than that supplied for sale by Sherwood, Agent shall not permit the same to interfere with Agent's obligations and duties hereunder, Agent agrees not to commingle with Agent's funds the proceeds of sales or other moneys of Sherwood and likewise agrees to keep Sherwood's products separate and apart from the property of Agent and that of third parties. Agent shall exercise the highest degree of care to insure against any contamination, adulteration or any accidental mixing together whatsoever of the various petroleum products to be stored, handled, sold and delivered hereunder.

3. Sherwood shall specify not only the prices at which products bailed to Agent shall at all times be sold but also all governmental taxes, excises and exactions to be charged and collected in connection with such products, their sale, delivery or other disposition; and Agent agrees not to deviate therefrom.

4. Unless otherwise directed, Agent shall make daily deposit of all collections in the bank designated by Sherwood, and shall each day secure and transmit receipted deposit slip, certificate of deposit or such other evidence of such deposit as Sherwood may specify; and shall report daily, or as often as Sherwood may require in writing, all stocks, sales, collections, deposits and remittances on form provided by Sherwood, such report to show stocks, sales, collections, deposits and remittances made from date of last previous report to and including date of current report.

5. Agent shall send all reports, evidences of deposit, remittances, inventories, and correspondence to Sherwood at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland, except as otherwise directed by it.

6. Agent shall submit to Sherwood an inventory of all products and property remaining on hand on the last day of each month or on such other business day as Sherwood may direct for closing monthly business.

7. Agent shall obtain prompt return when due from customers of storage and sales equipment and all shipping barrels (heavy steel drums) and furnish strict accounting thereof, and of all light iron barrels returned for credit by customers, reporting the number to be credited to each customer by name; and shall make such disposition of all containers as Sherwood may direct.

8. Sherwood reserves the right to reject, either with or without cause and without assigning to Agent any reason for such action, any orders taken by Agent. No commissions are to be paid on rejected orders or on orders cancelled by purchasers. In computing and paying any commissions earned under this agreement, or any other sum that may be due Agent from Sherwood, there shall be deducted therefrom and retained by Sherwood for its own use sums equivalent to commissions which Agent may have theretofore received from sales upon which customers have returned the products for credit, and any other like items reducing Sherwood's net cash receipts from such sales.

9. Agent shall at Agent's own expense furnish necessary trucks, truck-tanks, motive power, drivers, labor, water, light, power, and heat, and shall also pay all necessary expenses in draying Sherwood's products and equipment and in making sales, deliveries and collections. Agent shall also at Agent's own expense apply for in Agent's own name and have installed at Agent's headquarters a telephone which shall be listed in the proper telephone directory and other directories in the name of Sherwood Brothers Incorporated with the street address of Agent's headquarters. All charges for local and long distance calls made by means of such telephone, whether such calls be of a business or private nature, shall be for the account of Agent, and Sherwood shall not in any case be obligated to pay any such charges or to reimburse Agent for any payments so made. Sherwood may pay any such charges and deduct the amounts so paid from any moneys then due or thereafter to become due Agent.

10. Agent shall: (a) employ no improper, questionable or illegal methods in soliciting or securing business covered by this agreement; (b) observe the price schedules of Sherwood and any instructions given Agent covering matters for which Sherwood is responsible hereunder; (c) exercise due vigilance in protecting the equipment, property and products of Sherwood, notifying it promptly in writing of any condition which may arise requiring its attention; (d) make collections of such accounts in Agent's territory as Sherwood may deliver to Agent for that purpose; (e) assist Sherwood generally in promoting the successful merchandising of its products and the profitable utilization of its properties; (f) secure and maintain in force at Agent's cost any and all permits and licenses required by law for the conduct of Agent's operations as bailee hereunder; (g) comply with all valid laws, ordinances and regulations as to weights and measures and as to the transportation of flammable products and, in addition, with safety recommendations of Sherwood.

3848 11. In consideration of the fulfillment of the stipulations, obligations and requirements hereof, and as full payment for any and all service performed by Agent hereunder, Sherwood agrees to pay monthly to Agent commissions on only those sales and deliveries made by Agent in Agent's territory which accord with the conditions and rates specified in the schedule set forth below:

(6) .....
(.....%) Per cent.

12. The parties agree that the foregoing schedule includes all rates and describes the exact conditions and circumstances under which commissions shall be payable and that Agent shall be entitled to no compensation for any sale, delivery or service not plainly embraced within the specific terms of, or for which no applicable rate is provided in, said schedule. Sherwood reserves the right to effect deliveries from its stock of products bailed to Agent. Sherwood shall have the right to withhold payment of commissions on any sale or delivery made by Agent until payment therefor has been received by Sherwood. If Sherwood shall desire to change, add or eliminate any rate or any provision in said schedule the same shall become effective upon fifteen (15) days' written notice to Agent and a memorandum thereof in writing may be signed by the parties hereto as provided in Paragraph No. 25 hereof in lieu of the execution of a new contract, provided that no such change shall alter or modify any other provision of this agreement.

13. In the event Sherwood, at its sole discretion, pays to Agent any sum as an advance against commissions earned hereunder, the amount of such advance so paid to the Agent shall be deducted and withheld by Sherwood from the amount of Agent's commissions actually due during and payable for the month in which any such advance payment shall have been made.

3849 14. Agent shall not extend credit for Sherwood's account to any customer without first securing permission in writing from Sherwood so to do, and shall withdraw any credit so extended when so directed by Sherwood. Agent shall be liable to Sherwood for any loss sustained through violation of these provisions. Sherwood is authorized, at its option, to charge Agent with the invoice value to customers of products delivered in violation of such provisions, and shall have the right to deduct and retain for its own use said invoice value from any moneys that may then be due or which thereafter may become due Agent; and such deduction shall be construed and accepted as payment of commissions hereunder.

15. Agent shall be liable to Sherwood for any demurrage or storage charges assessed by any common or contract carrier owing to Agent's neglect to promptly unload and release stake and transport trucks, barges, tank cars and other railroad cars, or to take out merchandise shipments intended for Agent's handling.

16. Agent shall be responsible for, and hereby assumes all responsibility for, any and all acts of Agent and Agent's employees, whether they be acts of commission or omission, resulting in cost, loss or damage to Sherwood, and Agent hereby agrees to indemnify, save harmless, and reimburse Sherwood for and on account thereof. Agent hereby assumes all responsibility and full liability to Sherwood, and hereby agrees to indemnify and reimburse it, for any shortages or losses in, or arising out of, sales, collections or deliveries hereunder, or in the products, equipment or property of Sherwood bailed to Agent or coming under Agent's control including, without limitation, responsibility and liability for losses of Sherwood's funds by reason of loss, theft, robbery or burglary, and Agent hereby authorizes Sherwood to deduct from any and all moneys due to Agent during the life of this agreement, and retain for its own use, amounts for the payment of such shortages or losses; and Agent agrees that Agent's liability hereunder shall be that of an insurer, except as to losses resulting from fires not due to Agent's negligence.

17. Agent agrees to and does hereby accept full and exclusive liability for the payment of any and all taxes and contributions for unemployment insurance and for old age retirement benefits, pensions and annuities now or hereafter imposed by the Government of the United States and by the Government of any State of the United States, which are measured by the wages, salaries or other remuneration paid to persons employed by Agent, for Agent's own account, for work Agent is required to perform or have performed under the terms of this bailment agreement and Agent further agrees that, in order to relieve Sherwood of any possible secondary liability for such taxes or contributions, Agent will do everything necessary from time to time to elect voluntary coverage under applicable laws or regulations and to comply with, or bear the burden of contesting, any regulations and any amendments thereto, which may be promulgated by the administrative authority under such applicable law. Sherwood shall have the right to withhold from commissions and any other sums due Agent the amounts of any such taxes and contributions which may be imposed or levied for the purpose of paying same direct to the proper State and Federal authorities; and Agent agrees to furnish Sherwood such information as may be requested or required by Sherwood to properly report and effect payment of such taxes.

18. If required by Sherwood, Agent shall furnish surety bond acceptable to Sherwood in form and amount to indemnify Sherwood fully against loss of any moneys, values, products, goods, wares, merchandise, equipment and property bailed to Agent or coming under Agent's control or possession hereunder.

19. If Agent is a corporation, or if unincorporated and has, at any time, one or more employees, Agent hereby agrees, at Agent's own expense, to provide and maintain in effect workmen's compensation insurance, securing the payment of compensation to Agent's employees, or employer's liability insurance in accordance with the laws of the States in which Agent performs work under this agreement.

20. If Agent is a copartnership, each of the partners acting for himself and for the copartnership agrees with each other and with Sherwood: (a) that the partners shall be jointly and severally bound and liable as general partners hereunder; (b) that Sherwood may deal with any (one) partner of its choice; and (c) that the death or withdrawal of any partner shall be effective to automatically terminate this agreement.

21. Agent hereby designates ..... one of Agent's employees, as Agent's duly authorized representative to receive products from Sherwood, to execute receipts for same, to make reports and transmit information to Sherwood at the time and in the form and manner required by Sherwood, and Agent hereby agrees that any and all acts of said representative shall be deemed to be the acts of Agent. Agent shall have the right to change Agent's designated representative, provided written notice of such change shall be first given to Sherwood at the place named in Paragraph No. 5 hereof.

22. At any time during the life of this agreement or at the termination hereof Sherwood shall have the right to audit the books, accounts, station records and inventories relating to this bailment and moneys and stocks on hand; and Agent shall afford Sherwood and its employees full cooperation and assistance in making such audit or audits.

23. As a gratuitous convenience to Agent and as limited herein, Agent may use, for the storage and distribution of products bailed to Agent pursuant to this agreement, Sherwood's bulk oil storage and distribution facilities, if any, located in Agent's territory consisting generally of a warehouse, storage tanks and auxiliary equipment, provided that any such use shall be in a careful and proper manner so as to effectively avoid the creation or continuance of any nuisance, fire hazard or dangerous condition whatsoever and that during the period of such use Agent shall keep Sherwood's facilities, together with its contiguous property, in a safe, clean, orderly and sightly condition. The parties expressly recognize that this authorization (a) does not in any way obligate Sherwood to continue to allow Agent to use any such facilities for any particular period of time, (b) constitutes a bare non-assignable license to Agent to use those portions of such facilities as Sherwood may designate and solely as herein specified, (c) may be revoked forthwith by Sherwood at any time upon giving oral or written notice, (d) shall in any event ipso facto terminate upon termination of the bailment arrangement herein established, and (e) under no circumstances or conditions gives Agent any estate, property interest or right of possession in any such facilities. Sherwood makes no representation to Agent as to the present or future fitness or suitability of such facilities for the uses herein authorized or as to the character or effect of any work hereafter performed for or by Sherwood, at its discretion, at, upon, or in connection with such facilities including maintenance, repair, removal, replacements or additions thereto and assumes no liability or responsibility whatsoever to Agent or Agent's servants, employees or third parties for injury to persons, damage to property, expense, or loss, of whatsoever nature occasioned by or connected with Agent's use of said facilities or directly or indirectly resulting from Agent's exercise of the license herein granted, whether or not occasioned by Sherwood's negligence or that of any agent, employee or contractor of Sherwood. Agent agrees to reimburse Sherwood for any and all cost, expense or damage to Sherwood arising from or directly or indirectly connected with, the exercise by Agent of the right of use hereby authorized, excepting only normal costs of maintenance, repairs, removals, replacements or additions. Agent shall make no changes whatsoever in the physical condition of Sherwood's facilities without its prior written consent.

24. This agreement cannot be assigned in whole or in part by Agent without the consent of Sherwood in writing first obtained. Agent shall incur no indebtedness of any character whatsoever in the name of Sherwood, nor obligate Sherwood in any manner without first securing written authority so to do from an Officer or Manager of Sherwood. Sherwood shall not be responsible for any unauthorized debts or obligations incurred by Agent. Either party may terminate this agreement at any time with or without cause; and upon the termination hereof, regardless of the state of the mutual accounts, Agent shall forthwith deliver to Sherwood or its representatives all equipment, property, products, moneys, credits, books of account, and station records of whatsoever form, bailed to Agent or coming under Agent's control, Agent hereby waiving any and all liens and the right to assert the same.

25. This agreement cancels and supersedes all previous agency and bailment agreements between the parties. The counterpart hereof held by Sherwood shall be considered the original, and shall be the binding agreement in the event of any variation between such counterpart and the one held by Agent, and such counterpart held by Sherwood shall constitute the full and entire agreement between the parties hereto. All proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to the matters covered by this agreement are merged in this instrument, and no amendment or modification of this agreement shall be valid unless evidenced by a writing signed by Agent and a representative of Sherwood authorized to sign this instrument.

3850 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 405A-B.

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Equipment Rental Agreement

This Agreement, made and entered into this ..... day of ....., 19....., and to become effective on the ..... day of ....., 19 ....., by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, party of the first part, hereinafter referred to as "Sherwood", and ..... of ....., party of the second part, hereinafter referred to as "Customer" and by the singular neuter pronoun.

Witnesseth, That, in consideration of the sum of One ($1.00) Dollar in hand paid by Customer, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and in consideration of the mutuality hereof and of the rentals provided herein, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. Sherwood hereby hires and rents to Customer, and agrees to deliver to Customer's place of business, such equipment as Sherwood may from time to time deem necessary for the economical and convenient handling, storing, dispensing, advertising or testing by Customer of petroleum products on the premises herein described, and Customer hereby agrees to pay Sherwood as rental for such equipment the sum of One ($1.00) Dollar per annum, payable annually in advance, during the continuance of this agreement. Sherwood shall have the right to substitute for any equipment placed with Customer other equipment of like character and quantity and in the event of such substitution this agreement in all its terms shall apply to such substituted equipment.

2. Equipment delivered to Customer shall be used by Customer in its business upon only the following premises situated in the City of ....., State of ..... at No. ..... Street, or (if in the county) ..... miles .... of the City; of ..... on ..... Highway, State of ..... said premises also being known as ..... and owned by ..... and shall at all times be treated and considered as personal property and in no sense fixtures or a part of the real estate, regardless of the manner in which it may be installed or used on said premises.

(Insert which direction)

3. Each delivery to and acceptance by Customer of any equipment that may from time to time be placed with Customer, including substitutions therefor, shall be evidenced by a receipt on Sherwood's Form SB-46 Equipment and Materials Receipt, which shall be signed by Customer at the time of receiving such equipment and which when so signed shall become a part of this agreement with the same force and effect as though embodied herein; provided, however, that any equipment heretofore or hereafter delivered by Sherwood to Customer whether or not evidenced by said Receipt, shall be subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement. It is understood and agreed that Customer's acts of accepting such equipment described in said receipt was in good and serviceable condition at the time of its delivery to Customer.

4. Such equipment shall at all times be and remain the property of Sherwood, and shall be used by Customer only for the purpose of handling, storing, dispensing, advertising, or testing petroleum products. Any authorized representative of Sherwood shall at any reasonable hour have the right to inspect such equipment.

5. Customer hereby agrees that it will, unless specifically exempted by Sherwood in writing from so doing, maintain such equipment in good condition and repair and pay all cost and expense in connection therewith; that it will not encumber or remove such equipment or permit anyone except Sherwood to remove or take possession thereof; that it will exercise care in the protection and preservation of such equipment and will not efface, deface, damage or destroy the same or suffer others so to do; that it will not do or suffer to be done anything whereby such equipment or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the title of Sherwood thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; and that it will pay or reimburse Sherwood for any loss or damage Sherwood may sustain in the event of the happening of any of the foregoing or other contingencies. If, upon demand, Customer shall for any reason fail or refuse to return to Sherwood any of such equipment, Customer shall be liable to Sherwood for the value, set forth in Sherwood's said Form SB-46 Equipment and Materials Receipt, of such equipment not returned or, if no value is set forth in said Receipt, for the fair market value thereof. Customer hereby further agrees to comply with all applicable state laws and municipal ordinances, rules, and regulations in connection with use, installation, erection, operation, maintenance and display of such equipment or of any part thereof.

6. In the event Customer should at any time use such equipment for any purpose other than the handling, storing, dispensing, advertising or testing of petroleum products, or should violate any of the obligations of this agreement, Sherwood shall have the right to declare this agreement terminated and, without notice to Customer, may with men, vehicles, and necessary tools enter the premises whereon such equipment or any part thereof may be located and remove the same therefrom, whether affixed to the premises or located in, on or under the same, or not, without recourse to any legal proceedings for that purpose, and without liability for damages resulting from so doing.

7. In the event this agreement is terminated within ..... year(s) from the date hereof, for any breach or default specified in paragraph numbered "5" or "6" hereof, the expenses of delivering and installing said equipment as such expenses are shown on Sherwood's books and records, shall be paid by Customer to Sherwood, unless such equipment shall have been installed at Customer's expense, and the expense incurred by Sherwood in removing such equipment shall also be paid by Customer to Sherwood.

8. This agreement shall continue so long as may be mutually agreeable to the parties hereto, it being further agreed that either party to this agreement may terminate the same at any time upon giving five (5) days' written notice to the other party (no previous notice being required in the event of breach or default); provided that in the event this agreement shall be terminated by Customer as provided in this paragraph within the period specified in paragraph numbered "7" hereof, Customer shall reimburse Sherwood for its expenses as provided in paragraph numbered "7" hereof in the same manner as though this agreement had been terminated by reason of Customer's breach or default.

3852 9. Upon the termination of this agreement by notice or in any other manner Sherwood shall have the right and privilege of removing such equipment or any part thereof from the above described premises.

10. Customer shall pay all taxes, license fees, permit fees, inspection fees, occupation taxes and any and all charges, fees or assessments of whatsoever nature that may be levied, assessed or charged on or against such equipment or any part thereof, or on the installation thereof or Customer's use or operation thereof; and in the event of Customer's failure or refusal so to do, Sherwood may, at its option, pay the same, and, upon presentation of invoice therefor, Customer shall reimburse Sherwood for payments thus made.

11. If any of such equipment shall consist of signs or other advertising devices arranged for artificial illumination or if electric current is used in connection with the operation or maintenance of any of the equipment covered hereby, Customer agrees to pay for all charges for the electric current used in such illumination, operation, or maintenance.

12. Customer, for itself, its heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Sherwood, its sucessors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons), and to persons (whether they be third persons, Customer, or employees of either of the parties hereto), by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any such equipment or any part thereof, or of any gasoline, oils, or other products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defect in the construction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use or operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling or dislocation of such equipment or any part thereof, or by reason of any other casualty, whether due to the negligence of Sherwood or otherwise.

13. Sherwood hereby authorizes Customer to use the trademarks and brand names of Sherwod solely on and in connection with the products purchased from and so identified by Sherwood, the same to be used during such time only as this agreement shall be in effect. If Sherwood shall lend to Customer or permit Customer to use any sign or device of any kind bearing Sherwood's name or any trade-mark, brand name, symbol or slogan, to be used for the purpose of identifying or advertising Sherwood's products Customer agrees upon demand to return such sign or device to Sherwood and to discontinue the use of any word, name, phrase or thing which Customer is hereby authorized to use. Customer is permitted to use Sherwood's said name, trade-marks, brand names, signs, devices and s'ogans only upon the following conditions: (a) that they will be used in such way only as Sherwood may authorize; (b) that they will not be used in the identifying or advertising of any products except those supplied by Sherwood; (c) that Customer will not permit anyone else to exercise or use any of the rights, privileges or things granted or lent to Customer; (d) that Customer will not claim any right, title or interest in or to Sherwood's name, trade-marks, brand names, signs, devices and slogans; and (e) that Customer will never directly or indirectly deny or assail or assist in denying or assailin gthe sole and exclusive ownership of Sherwood in and to the same. Failure or refusal by Customer to comply with the terms and conditions set forth herein shall entitle Sherwood to terminate forthwith the within agreement; but such termination shall not in anywise prejudice Sherwood's claim for damages.

14. This agreement is personal to Customer and shall not be assigned in whole or in part by Customer without the consent of Sherwood in writing first obtained.

15. This agreement is executed in duplicate, and the counterpart thereof held by Sherwood is to be considered the original and shall be the binding agreement in case of a variance in any particular between it and any other signed copy. All proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to matters covered by this agreement are merged in this instrument; and no amendment or modification of this agreement shall be valid unless evidenced by a writing signed by a duly authorized representative of Sherwood.

3. Whereas, Sherwood is willing that Second Party may use and operate said station on and for his own account for the purpose aforesaid:

4. Now, Therefore, in consideration of the payments to be made by the Second Party, as hereinafter provided, and in consideration of the full and faithful performance by the Second Party of all the terms and conditions to be performed by him, as hereinafter set forth, Sherwood hereby gives and grants Second Party the right to use and operate said station on and for his own account for ..... year(s) beginning the ..... day of ....., 19..... Unless terminated as hereinafter provided, before or at the expiration of such period, this Permit shall continue in full force and effect as to all its terms, provisions and conditions from year to year, subject to cancellation by either party as herein specified. This agreement may be cancelled and terminated by either party at the expiration of the period herein specified, or at the end of any yearly period thereafter upon thirty (30) days previous written notice to the other party.

5. In consideration of being permitted to use and occupy said station and premises, to operate the same for his own account, for each month during the period in which this Permit shall be in effect or for each month of any renewal or extension thereof, Second Party shall pay Sherwood in accordance with either of the following:
Strike out either "A" or "B", whichever does not apply.

A. The sum of ..... ($.....) Dollars per month, payable in advance on the first business day of each month;

B. A sum equal to ..... (.....¢) cent(s) per gallon of all gasoline which shall be delivered to said station for sale therefrom, payable upon demand from Sherwood, provided however, that Second Party shall pay upon Sherwood's demand at least ..... ($.....) Dollars per month.

All sums payable hereunder shall be payable in lawful money of the United States at Baltimore, Md., or at such other place as Sherwood may from time to time designate.

3856 6. Second Party covenants and agrees that he will use and occupy the premises and station in a careful, safe and proper manner; that he will not permit or suffer any waste thereon or thereof, or any nuisance thereon or thereabout; and that he will maintain said premises in a clean, neat, orderly and sightly condition. Second Party further covenants and agrees that he will, at his own cost, maintain in good condition and repair any and all buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, and other personal property on said premises; and that he will not encumber or remove the same, or do or suffer to be done anything whereby the same or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the right of Sherwood therein or the title thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; it being expressly agreed that Second Party acquires hereunder no interest in any buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, or other property now on said premises or which may hereafter be placed thereon by Sherwood, except the right to use the same as in this Permit provided.

7. Second Party shall be liable for and agrees to pay all license, permit, and inspection fees, occupation and license taxes, and all water, gas, telephone and electric light and power charges assessed or charged on or against said premises and station or Second Party's use of occupancy thereof, including all taxes levied and assessed on Second Party's property located thereon during the period hereof.

8. Second Party shall comply with and obey all laws, ordinances, rules, regulations and requirements of the State, City, Village, or other governmental subdivision in which said premises are located, so far as same affect Second Party's use and occupancy of said premises and the operation of said station.

9. Second Party, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes, discharges and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Sherwood, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands, and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties thereto or of third persons) and to persons (whether they be third persons, Second Party, or employees of either of the parties hereto), caused by, growing out of, or happening in connection with, Second Party's use and occupancy of said premises or any buildings, structures, equipment or appliance located or to be located thereon, or by reason of any other casualty, whether due to negligence of Sherwood or otherwise.

10. Second Party, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Sherwood, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons), and to persons (whether they be third persons, Second Party or employees of either of the parties hereto), by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any such equipment or any part thereof, or of any gasoline, oils, or other petroleum products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defects in the construction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use or operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling, or dislocation of such equipment or any part thereof, or by reason of any casualty, whether due to the negligence of Sherwood or otherwise.

11. In the event Second Party shall (a) violate any agreements, covenants, conditions, and obligations of this Permit upon him imposed, or (b) be in any manner in default hereunder, Sherwood shall have the right to declare this Permit cancelled and terminated; and shall have the further right, without notice and without recourse to any legal proceeding, to enter upon the premises and repossess itself of same, including all property embraced within this Permit; and shall have a first lien upon all merchandise and other property of Second Party located upon the premises to secure the payment of all charges accrued hereunder and the full performance by Second Party of all obligations to Sherwood; and shall further have all the rights and remedies provided by law for the recovery of possession.

12. Upon the termination of this Permit by lapse of time or otherwise, Second Party agrees to return to Sherwood the said premises and station, together with all other property embraced within this Permit, and any other property of Sherwood located on said premises, in their condition when received by Second Party, reasonable wear and tear incident to proper use thereof excepted. In the event Second Party shall for any reason be unable to return any of said property, he agrees to replace the same with similar property of like value, or to pay Sherwood the market price therefor.

13. Sherwood reserves the right of entry of its representatives, agents, and employees for the purpose of examination and inspection of said premises and any property of Sherwood located thereon.

14. Second Party shall make no alterations or changes in or additions to any buildings, structures or improvements on said premises without first procuring the written consent of Sherwood so to do. Any work so authorized by Sherwood shall be at the sole cost and expense of Second Party, and any such alterations, changes or additions so made by Second Party shall forthwith become the property of Sherwood, and Second Party shall have no claim of any kind or character therefor.

15. This Permit is personal to Second Party and shall not be assigned in whole or in part, nor shall any rights or privileges herein granted Second Party be sold, transferred or assigned without the written consent of Sherwood first obtained.

16. If during the period of this Permit proceedings are instituted for the condemnation of said premises or any part thereof, or if Sherwood shall dispose of its interest in said premises or any part thereof, either voluntarily or involuntarily, in order that the premises may be devoted wholly or partially to any public use; this Permit shall, at the option of Sherwood and upon written notice to Second Party, forthwith finally cease and terminate, and Second Party shall not be entitled to any damage award or purchase price, or any part of either, which may be paid on account of such condemnation or sale.

17. Any prior agreement or permit under which Sherwood gave to Second Party the right to use and operate said station on and for his own account is hereby cancelled and terminated on ~~and as of~~ the day preceding the commencement of the period hereof, except as to any liability or obligations which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said agreement or permit prior to such effective cancellation date.

18. If the lease held by Sherwood shall be cancelled or shall terminate for any cause prior to the expiration of the within Permit, this Permit shall automatically terminate without previous notice, and Sherwood shall not be liable to Second Party in damages or otherwise on account of such cancellation or termination. If the operation of a service station on said premises shall be prohibited or restricted during the period hereof by statute, ordinance, order of court, or other governmental authority, and not because of any fault or neglect of Second Party, this Permit shall be subject to termination at the option of either of the parties hereto.

19. All notices given under this instrument shall be in writing, and may be given either in the statutory method, if any, in the State where the premises are located or by depositing the notice in the United States registered mail, postage prepaid, enclosed in an envelope addressed to the party to be notified as such party's address as shown in this instrument or at any other known address of Second

Party, and the date upon which such notice is so mailed shall be treated as the date of service. If there be more than one Second Party, notice to one shall constitute notice to all. In addition, any notice given by Sherwood to Second Party shall be valid if served upon Second Party in person or delivered to or left upon the premises.

In Witness Whereof, the parties have hereunto subscribed their names or caused the same to be done the day and year first above written.

3858 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 407 A-D

Service Station Lease

This Indenture of Lease, Made and entered into in duplicate this ..... day of ....., A. D., 19....., by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, authorized to transact business in the State of ....., having its principal office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland, party of the first part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessor"), and ..... of ....., part ..... of the second part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessee," whether one or more, and when referred to by pronoun the masculine gender will be used);

Witnesseth:

1. Whereas, Lessee desires to lease from Lessor the filling and service station, including other structures and facilities, if any, for the servicing of motor vehicles, hereinafter referred to as "station", and the premises upon which the same is located, as hereinafter described, for the purpose of marketing through said station petroleum products and other merchandise; and,

2. Whereas, Lessor is willing to lease said station on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth;

3. Now, Therefore, in consideration of the premises, the rents herein reserved, and the covenants, conditions, and agreements herein set forth, on the part of the Lessee to be paid, maintained, kept, and performed, Lessor does hereby demise and lease unto Lessee that part and only that part of the following described premises used for and constituting an oil and gasoline service station, and excluding all other parts or portions of said premises, located at .....
..... and situate in the City of ....., County of
....., and State of ....., to wit;

together with the buildings, structures, improvements, pumps, tanks, appliances, furniture, tools, and other personal property located thereon, as set forth in an inventory taken and signed by the parties hereto, marked "Exhibit A" and attached to and made a part of this lease to the same effect as though written out in full herein, including any additions thereto or substitutions thereof which may be made by Lessor from time to time; receipt of any substituted or added equipment shall be evidenced by Lessor's Receipt Form SB-46 "Equipment and materials Receipt," and said receipt when signed by Lessee shall become a part of this lease with the same force and effect as though embodied herein; provided, however, that any equipment heretofore or hereafter delivered by Lessor to Lessee, whether or not evidenced by said receipt, shall be subject to the terms and conditions of this lease. It is understood and agreed that Lessee's act of accepting such equipment and signing said receipt shall be construed to be an acknowledgment by Lessee that the equipment described in said receipt was in good and serviceable condition at the time of its delivery to Lessee.

4. To Have And To Hold the above demised and leased premises, and all rights, privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, unto Lessee for and during a term beginning on the ..... day of ....., 19....., and ending on the ..... day of ....., 19....., and thereafter for successive terms of one year each, provided, however, that either party may terminate this lease at the end of the original term or any successive yearly term, on Thirty (30) Days' written notice given prior to the end of any such term. If the above premises are held by Lessor under lease, this lease shall in no event continue in effect for any longer period than the balance of the term specified in any such underlying lease, regardless of the term herein provided. No previous notice or refund of rentals shall be required in the event of termination or cancellation of this lease for breach or default as hereinafter provided.

3860 5. Lessee shall yield and pay to Lessor as rental for said premises for and during said term the following sums:

All rentals shall be payable in lawful money of the United States at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland, or at such other place as Lessor may from time to time designate.

6. Lessee covenants and agrees that he will use and occupy said premises and station in a careful, safe and proper manner; that he will not permit or suffer any waste thereon or thereof, or any nuisance thereon or thereabout; that he will keep the sidewalks adjacent to said premises free from snow and ice; and that he will maintain said premises in a clean, neat, orderly and sightly condition. Lessee further covenants and agress that he will, at his own cost, maintain in good condition and repair any and all buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, and other personal property hereby leased to Lessee; and that he will not encumber or remove the same, or do or suffer to be done anything whereby the same or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the right of Lessor therein or the title thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; it being expressly agreed that Lessee acquires hereunder no intestest in any buildings, structures, equipment, appliances, or other property now on said premises or which may hereafter be placed thereon by Lessor, except the right to use the same as in this lease provided.

7. Lessee shall be liable for and agrees to pay when due all license, permit, and inspection fees, occupation and license taxes, all compensation fees, rents, and charges assessed and imposed by municipalities for the installation, use or maintenance of approaches or driveways serving said premises; also all water, gas telephone, and electric light and power charges assessed or charged on or against said premises and station or Lessee's use or occupancy thereof, including all taxes levied and assessed on Lessee's property located thereon during the term hereof.

8. Lessee shall comply with and obey all laws, ordinances, rules, regulations and requirements of the State, City, Village, or other governmental subdivision in which said premises are located, so far as same affect Lessee's use and occupancy of said premises and the operation of said station.

9. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes, discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons) and to persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee, or employees of either of the parties hereto), caused by, growing out of, or happening in connection with, Lessee's use and occupancy of said premises or any buildings, structures, equipment or appliances located or to be located thereon, or by reason of any other casualty, whether due to negligence of Lessor or otherwise.

10. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any loss, damage, injury or other casualty to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons), and to persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee or employees of either of the parties hereto), by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any such equipment or any part thereof, or of any gasoline, oils, or other petroleum products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defects in the construction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use of operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling, or dislocation of such equipment or any part therof, or by reason of any casualty, whether due to the negligence of Lessor or otherwise.

11. Lessee agress to display continuously on said premises a sign to be furnished by Lessor showing that Lessee is occupying said premises under a lease.

12. If Lessee shall default in the performance of any covenant contained in this lease, or if Lessee shall violate any agreements, covenants, conditions and obligations of this lease upon him imposed, or if Lessee shall become bankrupt or become insolvent in the opinion of Lessor, or shall make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, Lessor in any such event shall have the right to declare this lease terminated, and shall have the further right, without notice and without recourse to any legal proceeding, to enter upon the premises and repossess the same, including all property embraced within this lease, and Lessor shall have a first lien upon all merchandise and other property of Lessee located upon the leased premises to secure the payment of rent and all charges hereunder and the full performance by Lessee of all obligations to Lessor; and Lessor shall further have all the rights and remedies provided by law for the recovery of rent and possession. It is understood that the acceptance of rent by Lessor after default or the happening of any above contingency shall not be construed as a waiver of the rights of Lessor herein specified. If Lessee is an individual and if he shall die during the term of this lease or any extension thereof, this lease shall automatically terminate.

3862 13. Upon the termination of this lease by lapse of time or otherwise, Lessee agrees to return to Leessor the said premises and station, together with all other property embraced within this lease, and any other property of Lessor located on said premises, in their condition when received by Lessee, reasonable wear and tear incident to proper use thereof excepted. In the event Lessee shall for any reason be unable to return any of said property, he agrees to replace the same with similar property of like value, or to pay Lessor the market price therefor.

14. If there is a safe or chest included in the equipment leased hereunder, Lessee agrees to maintain said safe or chest in good and usable condition throughout the term hereof, and to bear the expense of any repairs thereon or replacement thereof; it being understood and agreed that Lessee shall assume any losses from robbery, burglary or larceny of the contents thereof, and of any property embraced within the lease.

15. Lessor reserves the right of entry of its representatives, agents, and employees for the purpose of examination and inspection of said premises and any property of Lessor located thereon.

16. Lessee shall make no alterations or changes in or additions to any buildings, structures, or improvements on said premises without first procuring the written consent of Lessor so to do. Any work so authorized by Lessor shall be at the sole cost and expense of Lessee, and any such alterations, changes or additions so made by Lessee shall forthwith become the property of Lessor, and Lessee shall have no claim of any kind or character therefor.

17. This lease is personal to Lessee and shall not be assigned in whole or in part, and said premises or any part thereof shall not be sublet, nor shall any rights or privileges herein granted Lessee be sold, transferred or assigned without the written consent of Lessor first obtained.

18. If during the term of this lease proceedings are instituted for the condemnation of said premises or any part thereof, or if Lessor shall dispose of said premises or any part thereof or its interest therein, either voluntarily or involuntarily, in order that the premises may be devoted wholly or partially to any public use, this lease shall, at the option of Lessor and upon written notice to Lessee, forthwith finally cease and terminate, and Lessee shall not be entitled to any damage award or purchase price, or any part of either which may be paid on account of such condemnation or sale.

19. Any prior agreement under which the Lessor leased the above described premises and equipment to the Lessee is hereby terminated on and as of the day preceding the commencement of the term hereof except as to any liability which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said agreement prior to such effective cancellation date.

20. If the above described premises are held by Lessor under lease, and if such underlying lease shall expire in accordance with its terms or be terminated for any cause at any time prior to the expiration of the term herein provided, this lease, at the same time, shall expire and terminate without previous notice to Lessee, and Lessor shall not be liable to Lessee in damages or otherwise on account of such prior termination. This lease shall be subject to all conditions and restrictions affecting the premises, including those which may be of record or in the underlying lease, if any, and also including building, building line, and zoning restrictions. If Lessee shall abandon, desert or vacate the premises during the term of this lease, or during any extension or renewal period, for a period of more than two (2) calendar days, Lessor may terminate this lease and repossess the premises. If the operation of a service station on said premises shall be prohibited or restricted during the term hereof by statute, ordinance, order of court or other governmental authority, and not because of any fault or neglect of Lessee, this lease shall be subject to termination at the option of either party.

21. All notices given under this instrument shall be in writing, and may be given either in the statutory method, if any, in the State where the premises are located or by depositing the notice in the United States registered mail, postage prepaid, enclosed in an envelope addressed to the party to be notified at such party's address as shown in this instrument or at any other known address of Lessee, and the date upon which such notice is so mailed shall be treated as the date of service. If there be more than one Lessee, notice to one shall constitute notice to all. In addition, any notice given by Lessor to Lessee shall be valid if served upon Lessee in person or delivered to or left upon the premises.

22. This lease shall not be binding upon Lessor until signed on its behalf by its President or Vice-President, notwithstanding the delivery of possession to or the acceptance of any rent from Lessee. All proposals, negotiations, representations and agreements with reference to matters covered by this lease are merged herein, and no amendment or modification hereof shall be binding upon Lessor unless the same shall be in writing and signed by its President or Vice-President.

Dealer Sales Agreement

This Agreement, made and entered into this ..... day of ....., 19....., by and between Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, having its principal office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore - 3, Maryland, as Seller and ..... of ....., as Dealer:

Witnesseth, That for the considerations herein contained, Seller hereby agrees to and hereby does, sell to Dealer, and Dealer hereby agrees to, and hereby does, buy from Seller, during the period this agreement is in effect, Dealer's requirements for resale of the following petroleum products:

Betholine
Sinclair H-C Gasoline
Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil
Opaline Motor Oil
Emerald Motor Oil
Pennant Motor Oil
Laclede Motor Oil
Sinclair Lubricants and Greases
Richsol Cleaning Fluid
Sinclair Superflame Kerosene
Sinclair Specialties
Sinclair Anti-Freeze

And such other products marketed by Seller as the parties hereto may agree upon from time to time.

Prices: For each delivery of any of the above products Dealer shall pay Seller's official established price per gallon (or other applicable unit) for the quantity delivered to Dealer prevailing at the time and for the place of each such delivery (without any discount or deduction therefrom) as posted at Seller's bulk plant from which delivery is made. Dealer agrees that Seller shall have the right to change said price from time to time without notice to Dealer except as posted at Seller's bulk plant or as shown on Seller's invoices.

If at any time Seller may establish different prices applicable to different classes of dealers, Dealer agrees that Seller shall have the right to determine the classification (or classifications as to different products) in which Dealer belongs and the prices hereunder applicable to Dealer, and Seller's determination in that respect shall be conclusive as to Dealer.

Place of Delivery: Products purchased hereunder shall be delivered in quantities and at times established by Seller's delivery schedules to Dealer's place of business above listed and to any other points agreed upon between the parties.

Duration of Agreement: This agreement shall continue in effect for ..... year(s) beginning the ..... day of ....., 19..... Unless terminated, as hereinafter provided, before or at the expiration of such original period, this agreement shall continue in full force and effect as to all its terms, provisions and conditions from year to year, subject to cancellation by eiter party as herein specified.

Terms: Net cash on delivery. If Seller shall extend credit to Dealer, the right to withdraw credit at any time is reserved by the Seller. Payments shall be made by Dealer in lawful money of the United States, or its equivalent, and shall be made to Seller's agent through whom delivery is made or to Seller's principal office. Checks, if accepted, shall be subject to final collection.

Additional Provisions: The additional provisions printed on the reverse side hereof constitute a part of this agreement.

In Witness Whereof, Seller and Dealer have executed this agreement.

Additional Provisions

3872 1. In addition to the prices herein provided, Dealer shall pay Seller amounts equivalent to any and all taxes, duties, charges and inspection fees, and any and all increases therein, which are now or may hereafter be imposed, directly or indirectly, by any domestic or foreign governmental authority or agency on, against, in respect of or measured by the products covered by this agreement, or any material contained in such products, or the importation, exportation, production, manufacture, sale, transportation, delivery or other handling of such products or material or any feature thereof or of this agreement. The amounts of any such taxes, duties, charges or inspection fees shall be added to the prices herein provided when Seller either pays or becomes liable for the payment of any such taxes, duties, charges or inspection fees.

2. In the event that Seller should at any time during the life of this agreement discontinue the marketing of any products covered hereunder in dealer's territory and market some other similar product as a replacement thereof Seller shall have the right and privilege to deliver such other product instead of the product discontinued.

3. This Agreement may be cancelled and terminated by either party at the expiration of the original period herein specified, or at the end of any yearly period thereafter, upon thirty (30) days' previous written notice to the other party. Dealer agrees that Seller shall also have the right to terminate and cancel this agreement at any time upon thirty (30) days' previous written notice by Seller to Dealer.

4. Dealer shall not change or alter by any means whatsoever the nature, quality, or appearance of any of the products purchased and sold hereunder. Any violation of this provision by Dealer shall give Seller the right to suspend immediately further deliveries hereunder of such products or to terminate this agreement. Seller shall have the right from time to time during the life of this agreement, to change, alter or amend any of the trade names or brands under which products covered by this agreement are now or may hereafter be marketed. Seller agrees that the commodity sold hereunder shall be uniform in quality and at all times up to its standards.

5. It is mutually agreed that Seller shall not be obliged to furnish any products hereunder nor be liable for loss or damages for failure so to do or for failure or delay in making deliveries of such products when such failure or delay arises from (a) any cause beyond Seller's control; or (b) by reason of reduction in or failure of Seller's supply of such products or containers therefor at any point from which Seller customarily makes or would make deliveries to Dealer or shipment to Dealer's destinations, or of Seller's supply at the point of manufacture, of raw or other materials from which such products are manufactured or which constitute components thereof; or (c) from discontinuance or interruption of any means or method of transportation customarily used by Seller in making deliveries to Dealer's destinations or to the vicinity thereof; or (d) from or through acts of God, strikes, lockouts, differences among or with its workmen, fires, explosions, sabotage, accidents, riots, civil commotion, acts of war, results of warfare, or war conditions in this or any foreign country; or (e) mechanical breakdowns in its manufactories, or breaks in or total or partial destruction of its supplying pipe lines; or (f) the restriction or prohibition or pervention of the importation of necessary finished or raw materials; or (g) acts of foreign or domestic Governmental authority, or requests, orders or requisitions of constituted authorities, civil or military, or the exercise of eminent domain, or any seizure or appropriation of any of Seller's property or of the management or operation thereof, whether regarded as lawful or unlawful; or (h) any increase in Seller's cost of materials or of manufacture or of delivery, or any decrease in Seller's prices for such products, imposed by Governmental actions or orders; or (i) any other cause beyond Seller's control, not enumerated herein, whether or not such cause shall be similar to any of the specifications of excuse hereinbefore stated. Seller shall not be liable for loss or damage to the premises where deliveries are made or to Dealer's property unless such loss or damage is caused solely by Sellers negligence. Seller reserves the right to limit quantities delivered hereunder when in Seller's opinion the current or prospective supply of such product or products makes such limitation advisable.

6. This agreement cannot be assigned in whole or in part by Dealer without the consent of Seller in writing first obtained.

7. The sale of any motor fuel which may contain either an "Ethyl" or any other anti-knock compound under the agreement is subject to (a) all the provisions contained in the agreements under which Seller is licensed to manufacture and sell motor fuel containing said compounds and (b) compliance by Dealer with all such provisions, rules, regulations and orders now in existence or which may hereafter be issued by the licensor or any governmental authority having jurisdiction insofar as the same apply to motor fuel purchased by Dealer from Seller. If Dealer shall fail or refuse to comply therewith, Seller may either suspend deliveries of such motor fuel or terminate this agreement in respect to such motor fuel. It is expressly agreed that such gasoline containing an "Ethyl" or other antiknock compound is sold for use as a motor fuel only and is not to be used or resold for cleaning purposes under any circumstances.

8. Any notice to be given hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been duly given if and when deposited in the United States mail, properly stamped and addressed to the party for whom intended at the address of such party herein specified, or when delivered personally to such party at such address.

9. Any Sales Contract or agreement covering petroleum products for resale heretofore entered into between the parties hereto is hereby cancelled and terminated on and as of the effective date hereof except as to any liability or obligations which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said contract prior to such effective cancellation date.

3876 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 412A-H.

Sherwood Bros. Inc.
Baltimore, Md.

1-1-50

Sales Commission Plan.

Sherwood Bros, Inc will be paid a sales commission on net sales of Goodyear products to Sherwood accounts by authorized supply points.

All sales under this plan are sales by an authorized supply point to an independent Sherwood dealer account. Billing issued to Sherwood Bros. In covering purchases for "Own Consumption" are not subject to sales commission.

Payment of commission will be made to Sherwood by Akron and will be based on sales reported to Akron by Districts on monthly G-1204 reports.

Establishment of Authorized Supply Points

District Manager will determine supply point for each Sherwood Account approved.

Goodyear District, Field and Factory Warehouses, Goodyear Service Stores and Goodyear Independent Dealers may serve as authorized supply points for these accounts. See Page 1-A for products each class of supply point may deliver.

Establishment of Goodyear Stores and Independent Dealers as supply points for Car and Home merchandise requires prior approval by Akron.

The supply point will make delivery of the merchandise, issue billing and carry the Accounts of the Sherwood Accounts they serve.

Master Record G-1209

Sherwood Bros. Inc will prepare G-1209 on each Sherwood account which is to participate under the plan. All copies of the form should be approved and forwarded by Sherwood to the Goodyear District Manager for approval and completion.

The G-1209 must be filled in completely as provided on the form.

After G-1209 is completed and approved by both Sherwood and Goodyear District Manager

District Office will distribute copies as follows:

Original (white)—District Office File

Duplicate (canary)—Sherwood Bros, Inc Division Office

Triplicate (pink)—Goodyear Field Representative

Quadruplicate (blue) — Supply Point where a Goodyear Store (other supply points handled by list—see below)

G-1209 provided to Stores which are not supply points for merchandise other than Car and Home Merchandise must be clearly marked "applies only to Car and Home Merchandise".

If more than one Store will act as a supply point, the additional Store (stores other than the regular supply point) should be notified of the approved Sherwood account by letter.

Independent dealer supply points shoud be furnished a list of the Sherwood accounts who will buy from them and on whom we ask them to report.

Credit Policy

All Sherwood Accounts participating under this plan will establish credit with the Goodyear District, Store or Independent Dealer, which has been designated to serve them. Purchases may, of course, be made on a cash or COD basis also. Districts must maintain seperate B-80 and B-80D on each COD or cash account.

3878 Price Policy

Approved Sherwood Accounts under this plan will purchase their requirements on the same basis as any independent dealer at the prices and discounts for which they can qualify in accordance with our regular sales program for tires, tubes, batteries, C&H Mdse, etc.

Products Eligible Under Sales Commission Plan.

Sales of the following listed products to approved Sherwood accounts are to be reported on the G-1204 reports when delivery is taken from authorized supply point as indicated below:

(A) When delivery is taken from and/or billing issued by District

All Goodyear Tire and Tubes (Except Airplane) including seconds.

Goodyear Automotive and Farmlight Batteries and Battery Cables.

Resolute Batteries.

Goodyear produced Recaps & Repairs.

All Dill and Schrader Valve Merchandise.

Sea-Bee Outboard Motors.

Goodyear Repair Materials as follows—Small and Bicycle Tube Repair Kits, Quart size Steptread Cement, Emergency Self-Sealing Patches, Small Containers Cold Patch Cement, Gasket Compound, Bicycle Rim Cement, Shaler M-50 Repair Kits and Motorists Vulc-Patch Kits.

(B) When Delivery is taken from and billing issued by Goodyear Stores

All Goodyear Tires and Tubes (Except Airplane) including Seconds. Goodyear Automotive and Farmlight Batteries and Battery Cables.

Goodyear Produced Recaps & Repairs.

(C) When delivery is taken from a Field or Factory Field Warehouse

Goodyear Car and Home Merchandise.

Goodyear Brake Lining, Rivets and Wheel Weights.

Goodyear Repair Materials—The same and only those items listed above under (A).

Includes merchandise shipped direct to dealer by manufacturer.

(D) When delivery is taken from and billing issued by an Independent Dealer

All Goodyear Tire and Tubes (Except Airplane) including seconds.

Goodyear Automotive and Farmlight Batteries and Battery Cables.

Sea-Bee Outboard Motors (Only if Akron has approved the dealer as supply point for Car & Home Mdse.)

Goodyear Car & Hom Mdse stocked at Goodyear Field Warehouse (Only if Akron has approved dealer as supply point).

Products Not Eligible Under Sales Commission Plan.

Billing covering products listed hereunder, regardless of delivery point, is not subject to commission and is not to be recorded by Stores nor included in G-1204 volume on which commission is to be paid.

3880 Adjustment billing of any of the eligible products listed above.

All products not listed above as eligible products including but not limited to

General Electric and Hotpoint Major Appliances
General Electric Radios
Motorola Radios, Aerials and Accessories
Motorola Car Heaters
Anti Freeze
Tire Chains unless delivered by Field Warehouse
All types of Equipment—Battery Chargers, Display, Service Station, etc.
Advertising and Sales Promotion items.

Sales Commission Plan.

General

All Goodyear shipments will be to the supplying dealer—we will not drop ship to the Sherwood dealer for account of the dealer.

Important—Careful attention under the Independent Dealer Supply Point handling is required to avoid payment to Sherwood of duplicated commissions under the following circumstances.

When a Sherwood account is authorized under this plan, commissions are to be paid only on this Sherwood account's purchases from his supply point. If this authorized account is the supply point for other Sherwood accounts, then sales to such other accounts are not eligible for commission as such would result in our paying commission to Sherwood on the original sale and then paying a second commission on the same merchandise when it was resold to the other Sherwood Account.

The instructions outlined above under "Independent Dealer Supply Points", therefore, are applicable only if the dealer supply point is not an oil company approved commission account.

Goodyear Store Supply Points

District Manager will provide stores that are to function as supply point with G1209 of specified Sherwood Accounts for whom the store is the designated supply point. As any changes occur in the G-1209, District Manager will notify store of change by copy of G-1209. Upon receipt, Stores must immediately revise their records.

It is suggested that stores file the visible G 1209 form in their stock ledger binder for ready reference. Stores receiving lists of accounts from their District Manager should order supplies of blank G 1209 forms with which to establish their visible system.

3882 Payment of Commission

Akron will pay all commission to Sherwood in connection with this plan. Rates of commission varies by type of Sherwood account, and type of product, therefore it is of the utmost importance that all Sherwood accounts be correctly classified on G-1209 records and also when reported on G-1204 so that the correct amount of commission will be computed by Akron.

Rates of Commission follow:

(A) Approved Petroleum Jobber or Petroleum Distributor

All Merchandise (except Resolute Battery Volume) 7½%

Resolute Battery Volume 7½%

Identified on G 1204 and G 1209 as Oil Company Franchise Jobber or Distributor.

Car & Home Merchandise—If account is approved Car & Home Mdse. wholesaler 7½% Identified on G1204 and G1209 as approved Car & Home Jobber.

(B) Approved Oil Company Dealer (not Jobber or Distributor)

All Merchandise (except Resolute Battery Volume) 10%

Resolute Battery Volume 7½%

Identified on G-1204 and G-1209 as Oil Company Dealer.

If account is approved Car & Home Merchandise wholesaler—Car & Home Commission 7½% Identified on G1204 and G1209 as Car & Home Jobber.

3884 G-1204—Reports

Volume subject to sales commission must be segregated under the following classifications:

(A) All new tires and tubes including seconds and special priced stock, motorcycle, bicycle, truck farm, industrial and wheelbarrow tires and tubes but excluding airplane tires and tubes.

(B) Goodyear batteries including farmlight.

(C) Resolute batteries.

(D) Car & Home and other products subject to commission not detailed above. (See Page 1A—Sherwood Special Account Instructions).

Commission is payable on the above merchandise only if delivery is made in accordance with schedule on page 1A of Sherwood Special Account Instructions. Credit memos should be deducted from respective commission volume accumulations.

Recording of Volume for Accounts on District Ledgers
Tire and Tube Volume

Post bonusable items including credits for experimental truck to the B-80D statistical sheet as usual.

Non Bonusable Tire and Tube items such as Motorcycle, Bicycle Tires and Tubes, etc., which are eligible under the sales commission plan are to be posted in miscellaneous column of the B-80D at the time postings are made to the B-80. Post at merchandise net invoice level.

Goodyear Automotive Batteries Including Farmlight

Post Bonusable items to B-80D statistical section in usual manner. On guaranteed accounts postings should be made to the B-80D at the level prior to deduction of guaranteed annual bonus. Show annual bonus allowed as a separate item in a miscellaneous column at top of B80D. Enter net battery volume on G-1204 (Battery Bonus volume less annual bonus).

Resolute Batteries

Resolute volume should be entered on B-80D in appropriate column. This volume must be kept entirely separate from Goodyear Battery volume accumulations.

Car & Home Merchandise & Miscellaneous

Post to B-80D such volume which is subject to sales commission. Enter on B-80D at net invoice price after deduction of all allowances. Include only items specifically designated as applicable for sales commission.

Recording of Volume for accounts Sold by Stores and Supplying Dealers

Sales of merchandise subject to commission by dealer and store supply points to approved G-1209 accounts is to be entered to B-80D statistical ledger sheet as outlined in Wholesale Field Operating Manual page C-30B.

We have delivered Credit Identification Cards to certain motorists, to be used by them for credit identification purposes. Such motorists may wish to use such cards in connection with their purchases on credit at service stations, of the following products:

(1) Petroleum Products Marketed by Sherwood Brothers Incorporated and service jobs performed at the ordinary service station which involve the sale or use of such Products, namely, chassis lubricating (in whole or in part) and car washing; and

(2) Goodyear tires, batteries and other automotive accessories (except radios and heaters), Provided tires are mounted and batteries and other accessories are attached to the motor vehicle at the time of purchase.

Credit Identification Cards are serially numbered and bear an expiration date. Specimens of these cards have been or will be furnished you on our Placard Form SB-2094.

We understand that you desire to make credit sales of the above mentioned petroleum products, services and accessories to those holding such Credit Identification Cards who may apply to your station for the same. We are willing to accept assignment of the accounts arising from such credit sales under the following terms and conditions:

All sales of the above products, services and accessories shall be made for your own account. In making such sales you shall use such forms of delivery tickets, invoices, reports and other forms as we may supply you for use. Credit Delivery Tickets covering sales to holders of Credit Identification Cards must, in each case, show the Kinds of Merchandise Sold, the Quantities Sold, the Prices at Which Sold, the Total Value of Each Purchase, the Credit Identification Card Number, Auto License Number, Customers Name and Signature of Purchaser. Credit Delivery Tickets not prepared in conformity with the foregoing will be rejected by the Company. We do not assume any liability and shall not be liable for any tax for which you are liable to any governmental authority. If any applicable tax is not included in or added to the price, you will be in the position of absorbing such tax. In any event, you will have to account to the proper governmental authority for any applicable tax. You shall assume and pay, and hold us free of, any and all taxes that are now or may hereafter be imposed on the products or services, or upon the sale or furnishing thereof.

Subject to the terms and conditions set forth on our Placard, Form SB-2094, we will accept assignment by you of the accounts arising from such credit sales and in consideration for the assignment of each such account, we will allow you credit for the amount thereof on your purchases from us.

As to such accounts you shall keep such records and make such reports to us as we may from time to time specify and require with the privilege to us to examine or have examined such records when we may wish to do so.

This proposal is submitted in duplicate, and if the terms and provisions thereof are acceptable to you, you will please so indicate by signing the same at the place indicated hereon, and when executed on our part it will constitute a contract between us, with the understanding that either of us may terminate it at any time with or without cause. A copy of the executed contract will be forwarded to you. Any contract or agreement now in effect with you covering credit sales by you to the holders of Credit Identification Cards is hereby cancelled and terminated on and as of the date hereof, except as to any liability that may have accrued prior to such date.

Subject Batteries

On Friday, March 24, 1944, a meeting was held with Mr. Ted Hardy, Goodyear Battery Division Manager, Mr. Stucky of Baltimore District, John Mann and myself. At this meeting the complete battery program was discussed.

Battery dealers are classified as Contract Dealer, Distributor and Service Distributor, depending on the amount of potential volume done. Most of our accounts will fall in the Contract Dealer class, some in the Distributor and eventually we will have one or two in the Service Distributor classification. Brooks-Huff is a Service Distributor. In order that there be no misunderstandings in the future, it will be set up that Brooks-Huff can sell a Service Distributor account and Goodyear will rebate the 2-7% discounts earned from Distributor. If this matter has not been brought up of course he would have been unable to sell such an account.

Very definite committments for the rest of this year have been received regarding supplies of batteries. We will be very surely allocated up to 1000 batteries for the rest of this year. Mr. Hardy made this committment. It is interesting to note that 2100 units have been allocated in complete size ranges. Half were shipped March 17 and have been received at Mt. Royal warehouse and the other half were shipped yesterday. So the supply seems adequate for right now. While this is not a battery season right now, still I feel it is the one thing we can put immediate effort on and I am lining up a battery drive. Portfolios for our salesmen have been ordered will not be available until after Apr. 1st.

It has been agreed that Akron will handle all mailings on Tires, Batteries and Car & Home Supplies. As soon as lists can be compiled listing the different items each dealer handles, this mailing program will be instituted. I feel this is a much better method than for Brooks, Goodyear or Sherwood salesmen attempt to handle it. I am sure the information would not reach the dealers promptly and efficiently. Committments have been made from Akron. (Per Ford Cameron).

On Monday, Mar. 20, I further went over the plan with Hardy who at that time wanted to distribute through the Service Store. I would not agree to separate the distribution of tires and batteries and again definite commitments of 1000 per month were made.

Subject

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Mr. DeHoff,

c.c. Mr. John R. Sherwood.

On Monday & Tuesday, Mar. 20 and 21st, further conferences were held with the Goodyear representatives. During this time a complete listing of all our dealers typed on 3x3 cards were presented. This is the list from which we will follow up sales of all Goodyear items and on which we will depend for checking of sales and estimating of commissions. We have presented every retail account on Sherwood books including Leased outlets, Divided and Undivided Accounts, Agents and Distributors. In order that we may capture all our rightful profits we have listed dealers as well as distributors or agents. I did this because in certain instances the dealer will short circuit the agent and buy direct from the Goodyear Store. It is self evident that in cases of this nature which we could not control we would be placed in a position of losing certain commissions. Under the present agreement these accounts will be checked both ways and we will be insured against any loss of this nature.

As I suspicioned and foresaw, the chief discussion centered about two of the best accounts—namely, Armstrong and Dunn and Seibert. I will not go into details, enough to say that after the smoke lifted I was told I had made a very masterful presentation of our side. Before I left I had them committed to Dunn & Seibert 100% and at 10% commission. The other account was committed if we would accept and after conferring with Mr. DeHoff, who graciously admitted we would I later informed them and the outcome of the discussions is that we will share or receive commissions from all of the accounts we have presented them. (Before I proceed let me say that I apologize for the personal allusions in this paragraph and I do not like throwing of boomerang bouquets.) On the Armstrong account we should only expect to receive 7½% of his purchases from Goodyear.

These accounts were then assigned by Goodyear and the writer to Goodyear salesmen and Goodyear distributors. We will know just who will supply each account and who will contact each from Goodyear. This will be good information to have for organizational as well as promotional purposes.

The cards have been handed back to me for further editing and securing of Trade Names, Proprietors, etc. After this and from this list we will develop lists for Akron of all dealers and will indicate whether we want them 3898 to receive Tire information, Battery information, Car & home Supply information or any combination of these three departments. This is being worked upon.

It might be well to state right here that we are to receive our first Sales Report on or about May 1st which will be for the month of March. This is due to the fact Brooks-Huff and the other fellows have until the tenth of the following month in which to report sales, after which the Goodyear accounting offices will have to audit, check and compile a complete report which will be presented to us. So it does seem physically inpossible to get a report much sooner. I have requested that we be given a statement each month instead of the 60 day period mentioned at one time. We must have a 30 day report in order to follow up and get behind certain dealers for sales promotional reasons. This has been agreed to.

As soon as possible we will allocate all the Brooks-Huff accounts to his three salesmen and then they should be in turn allocated to our people.

Subject Goodyear.

On Monday, March 27th, I presented and discussed with John Huff our whole picture. He is very enthusiastic and cooperative as he certainly should be. As stated before he will assign all of our important accounts to his three salesmen who will immediately, or as soon as opportune start working same from the angle of putting in a bank stock, others to increase their battery and tire inventories, etc., and of course since we actually have batteries, they will push this merchandise and attempt to secure new dealers.

Inventories of tires needed right now in the various sizes were compiled and we retired to Goodyear to formulate some concrete plans for getting additional tire merchandise to us following the committments made by Mr. Gaylord. Mr. Doolittle after examining the list which also contained also an examination of the tires wanted as against those needed, doubled the largest order (tires wanted) and sent it to Akron. This was done in order to take proper care of the territories. The rest you know about. I have written to Mr. Gaylord urging delivery of this merchandise and John R. has followed it up most capably.

Not for the sake of alarm but only that all angles may be considered I throw out that at some future date it is entirely possible, and maybe probable that Huff might go to a competitive brand which would make him a direct competitor of ours. In all probability that would be United States. Again, he could supply United States to all his other accounts, keeping our accounts Goodyear. If and when that time comes, we would have to move fast and to be sure I feel we would meet the emergency.

The only other matter I believe is pertinent at this time is we are endeavoring to secure 200 tire certificates from Akron at a price of $2.00 per. I think we will get them and this will enable certain of our dealers to keep a larger inventory on hand and preclude the loss of sales.

John Huff has committed himself to distributing all the order we have just put in to Akron to our accounts, as well as allotting 75% of all passenger tires received by him to Sherwood accounts.

Subject Goodyear Commissions

Goodyear report sheets are now being typed by the Baltimore District Office showing Proprietor, Trade Name, Address, Discount or Commission on All Other Purchases Except Car & Home Supplies, Commission on Car and Home Supplies and Supply Point or Distributor. The master sheet will enumerate the discount that applies while all other reports will give actual Commission figures for each account.

I think it well to set down in writing what discounts (Rate) we expect to receive so there can be no misunderstanding later. They are as follows:

	Commission on Total Purchases
G. D. Armstrong & F. A. Welty	7½%
All other accounts including Dunn & Seibert and all accounts supplied by Brooks-Huff Tire Co.	10%

The reason for the difference is that the first two named accounts are Agents of ours and the procedure in handling Commission Plan for Oil Companies provides for this differential.

While acceptable to me it is hard to reconcile Goodyear's reasoning in this connection and I have been able to get no logical explanations of it from Mr. Doolittle other than it is the cut and dried formula.

3904 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 418A-B.

July 13, 1944

Mr. Ted Hardy
Manager—Battery Department
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.
Akron, Ohio

Dear Ted:

Our battery campaign is over and I would like to give you a brief summary of the results obtained.

First, I want to thank you as well as Mr. Doolittle for arranging to have that fine gentleman and excellent salesman, Mr. Sellers, come up and spend a week with us and get the campaign started. I know it was out of the ordinary to ask Mr. Sellers to assist us in a retail selling campaign but it was largely through his efforts in pepping the boys up and outlining sales details of the campaign that we attained the success we did. I cannot speak too highly about Mr. Sellers. He is sincere, hard working, friendly and he knows his business. Unfortunately, I cannot say that for too many salesmen that I know. He certainly made a hit with all of our salesmen as well as our executives and I think you should be proud to have a man of this calibre working for you. We are eagerly looking forward to Mr. Sellers' early return to Baltimore.

As you know, I was most anxious to have Mr. Sellers' attention and cooperation with us re[illegible]ded and I had stated at the beginning of the campaign that I would be very happy to present him with an order for 500 batteries from Brooks Huff Tire Company at the end of the week. I am now happy to state that before the week was out, Mr. Sellers had secured an order for one carload of Goodyear batteries from Mr. Huff of the Brook Huff Tire Company. That carload of Goodyear batteries has been sold and additional orders placed.

The final results of the sales campaign which ran into the second week are as follows:

89 of the Delco Testers were sold to Sherwood dealers along with a total of 913 Goodyear batteries.

This means that instead of one out of ten of our better Sherwood dealers handling Goodyear batteries, we now have eight out of ten of our better dealers stocking and selling Goodyear. You will be interested to know, I am sure, that already a great many of these new Goodyear battery accounts have reordered and are really co-3906 operating with us and are going to town. It will now be our job to keep the new Goodyear battery accounts in line and I feel sure that we are capable of doing just that.

I think the job was more outstanding because it was done during the worst battery selling month of the year and while I have not heard your reaction to the campaign directly, I feel sure that you are happy to know that we saved the battery allocation for the Baltimore district in July.

With kindest regards and best wishes—

Sincerely,

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated,
Fred D. McCauley,

Mr. Butler Doolittle
Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company
Mt. Royal Ave. & Oliver St.
Baltimore, 17, Md.

Dear Butler:

We are making some rather important changes in our company setup and distribution which I want to tell you about.

Effective August 1 we are transferring to the Sinclair Refining Company all of our business in every respect in Washington and we in turn are getting out of the Washington territory completely. Sinclair will convert the brand names of Richfield to the corresponding brands of Sinclair. Sinclair, of course, know about our relationship with Goodyear and I have sent to them a list of the locations which we have on your approved list, which locations are within our Washington territory being turned over to Sinclair. For your information I am sending you also a copy of this list. Goodyear presumably will transfer these locations from Sherwood's list to Sinclair's list for the development of commissions, and so on.

On September 1 Sherwood is going to take over all of the Sinclair business in the State of Maryland and the Eastern Shore of Virginia. As soon as that is done we will develop a list of the locations which are to be put on the Goodyear approved list. We have a big job to do at these locations in developing merchandise sales because Sinclair has done very little in the past, but I am sure that as time goes on we will be able to bring those locations around in good shape.

We also are going to change all Richfield brands to corresponding Sinclair brands. This will give use a very fine business in Maryland and give us a real opportunity for development in the future. I consider it a very fine forward step in total, although I do hate to lose the nice Goodyear business which we have developed in Washington; however we can't have the cake and eat it too. I am sure we will be able to replace that volume in Maryland before too much time goes by.

For his information I am sending a copy of this letter to Mr. Gaylord at Akron.

With kindest personal regards, I am—

Yours sincerely,

Dear John:

Because of the importance of the change through which our Company is headed so that you might be generally informed of what is taking place I am sending you this memorandum at this time in spite of the fact that all of the details have not yet been worked out and developed.

In recent months we have devoted a great deal of effort to the study of our long range future. Because of development plans for the future now being made by Sinclair we have decided that our company will be considerably better off in the long run handling the Sinclair brands than handling the Richfield brands.

In order to accomplish this change many problems had to be solved. We have worked out a very splendid program with which I am very much pleased and I wish to pass it on to you in its present state as follows:

1. We are, effective August 1, 1944, transferring to Sinclair all of our Washington business and operations. This includes all of our properties, equipment, accounts, and everything else. It means that we will not have any participation whatever in any business or operations or problems involved in the territory formerly covered by our Washington Branch.

In Washington, Sinclair will convert all Richfield brands to their corresponding Sinclair brands. Our personnel will be transferred to the Sinclair organization.

2. In exchange for Washington, our Company will be given, effective September 1, 1944, the entire State of Maryland; the State line will be approximately our territory boundary. We will also include the Eastern Shore of Virginia in our territory. Sinclair will, of course, retain in Washington that part of Maryland which comprises the Washington metropolitan area.

In Maryland all of the existing Sinclair business will be transferred to Sherwood; consisting of fifteen agencies and two distributors. At the same time we will convert all of our Richfield brands to corresponding Sinclair brands. Our established Sherwood brands will, of course, not be changed.

3912 All of this will actually give our Company a decided boost in gasoline gallonage. The Sinclair gallonage is to a large extent consumer business, principally with farmers in the fine agricultural parts of our State; consequently their business fits in in a very complementary way with ours. It will give us a better rounded business than we could possibly expect to develop except through many years of hard effort.

As far as Sinclair public acceptance is concerned, we should find that with these changes it will be very materially improved and I feel that it will promptly exceed the public acceptance for Richfield. You may be pleased to know that according to the Maryland gasoline tax records our Company will be in second place, which is something that should make us feel mighty good.

3. There is under way a plan for decentralizing certain authorities and responsibilities concerning the operations of our Company. We expect to be given greater local authority. I am much pleased with this phase of the change because it should enable us to become, even more than ever, one big happy business family.

Mr. John R. Sherwood has told our people in New York that we were going to show them the finest marketing operation in the entire Sinclair organization. I know we can do it and I know that with this challenging, even exciting prospect for the future I can count on your wholehearted support in the days of hard work which lie ahead.

Mr. John R. Sherwood has already written to Mr. Doolittle concerning this change and asked him to remit sales figures on the Washington accounts after August 1 to Sinclair Refining Company instead of to Sherwood Brothers. This means that after August 1 you will completely forget the Washington territory. However, I shall still expect to receive the same and even more merchandise than before due to this fact that we will take on a much larger chunk of business than we are turning loose in Washington.

With kindest regards and best wishes—

Yours very truly

Sinclair Change-Over Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Dear Mr. Doolittle:

Following up our conversation a few days ago and in an effort to clarify the situation, I would like to set down my thoughts concerning Goodyear quotas in Washington and the State of Maryland.

First, let me say that we cannot deprive the Washington dealers of the tires they have been getting even if it means taking their regular 15% of our total quota from us.

However, we are taking on somewhere around 290 additional Sinclair dealers in Maryland and we will want to have them handle Goodyear tires and batteries and other merchandise as soon as possible, therefore I would consider it very fair if Goodyear could arrange to let us have for Sherwood Brothers what we have been getting in the past but applying that quota only to Maryland. This would mean that Goodyear would set up an additional quota to take care of the number of tires which have been allocated to Washington, only they would set their quota up for the Sinclair dealers in Washington.

I prefer to think about this problem from the angle not of increasing the Sherwood quota but allowing it to remain at the same ceiling it has always been while any increase in quota should be considered for the Sinclair group of stations in Washington. I hope you get my point there.

I hope in the very near future to receive a complete list of the Sinclair dealers which we will take on in Maryland as of September 1, so that I can register them with your company. I hope to be able to forward this list to you in the very near future but in any event starting September 1, naturally I want to get commission on any Goodyear sales to any of our new Sinclair dealers.

I have noted with interest the survey form you have prepared for surveying the dealers in the agents' territories regarding tires, batteries, and merchandise. I suppose that our tire and merchandise program has been sufficiently explained to all of the agents so that they will know why we are making this survey and so that they will know relatively what additional information might be desirable to obtain such as past volume on tires, batteries, and merchandise, potential volume, just what is meant by budget selling, whether the agent thinks he can sell the particular dealer on Goodyear tires and batteries, and on whatever lines of appliances and merchandise we might handle after the war. In any event, the form is a good starter and will give you some information.

It is my own opinion that all of our dealers throughout the territory should be undergoing a cultivation program starting right now to get them in tune mentally with the tire, battery, and merchandise program that we have in mind. It takes quite a little time to get over the first hurdles. Of course we expect to go over all of this with the agents when we get together for a meeting.

It might be too that we will have to plan meetings in each of the agents' territory to explain this program to the dealers themselves. The program will receive better impetus when we develop a plan for participation in the business by the agent. I suppose too you are asking each of the agents whether they are interested in going into this business from their viewpoint, whether it would be on a stocking basis for us, or a distributorship on their own account, or whatever other alternates there are.

I noticed too in your survey that you say nothing about store installations when they become available, in fact some installations are available now. Do you have catalogs to send to each of the dealers showing what may be coming along in the near future, or is it proposed that through the Sales Department each of the dealers will be contacted for development of this information.

In this whole matter I think it of paramount importance that we do not miss the broad view of this tire, battery, and merchandise program. We have in the State somewhere around 900 dealer outlets, each and every one of those, if it sells any gasoline at all, is a potential outlet for tires, batteries, or some kind of merchandise. Even if they sell one spark plug or one can of Utility Oil a year, I want that sale made. I want the merchandise on display, properly displayed, well engineered and designed, and everything else done to really make each of these 900 outlets 3918 produce the best overall volume. I know the agents are busy with shortages, quotas, and so on. So are the dealers, but there is nothing to make the time go by more profitably or quickly than to be actively engaged in a good constructive forward looking program.

Just how you and Mr. DeHoff are planning on carrying this down through the organization to the dealer himself I do not right now know, but it is my request that you develop a program, set up a schedule, and really get going. Of course the same thing applies even in greater degree to the surveying and developing of our dealers in Baltimore. I would like to see your program and schedule when you have it developed.

Very truly yours,

JRS:W John R. Sherwood.

Baltimore 17, Md.

May 29th, 1945.

Mr Fred McCauley
Sherwood Brothers, Inc.
O'Sullivan Bldg
10 Light Street
Baltimore, Maryland.

Dear Sir:

Pursuant to our discussion concerning the possibility of authorizing your agents to become direct Goodyear dealers, I wish to place on record the outcome of our conference.

Our principal difficulty rests in that part of our territory known as the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula, plus the area covered by Kunkel Service Company of Bel Air, Md.

The consequence is that we find ourselves unable to set up as tire dealers your agents in the following territories—

2 Counties in Virginia at the tip of the aforementioned Peninsula.

Also Snow Hill, Md.
Berlin, Md.
Cambridge, Md.
Georgetown, Del.
Seaford, Del.
Dover, Del.
Smyrna, Del.
Easton, Md.
Chestertown, Md.
Elkton, Md.
Havre de Grace, Md.

The one territory on the Peninsula which we can approve, namely, Denton, Md., we recommend against appointing your agent as a tire dealer for the following reason. The Goodyear dealer handling this territory, namely, Earl Crouse, is your agent's brother.

Mr Crouse operates a Sherwood-Sinclair Station and consequently you receive credit for all of the Goodyear tires he sells. He is definitely interested in selling Goodyear tires to all of his brother's gasoline accounts and already has his brother's cooperation in performing this function.

Since the present arrangement, thereby, is apparently entirely satisfactory to both Sherwood Brothers and 3922 Goodyear, we feel that nothing would be gained by any change. If, however, you find it to your advantage to appoint this agent as a tire dealer, then you may consider that such action has our approval.

The territories in which we can approve your agents as tire dealers are—

Westminster, Md.
Frederick, Md. (2 agents)
Hagerstown, Md.
Hancock, Md.
Laytonsville, Md.
La Plata, Md.

This covers all the agency territories presented to me as represented by the territorial map which we studied, with the exception of one territory, namely, Cockeysville, Md.

I have asked that we not be required to give a "yes" or "no" for this territory until a later date and further discussion. The reason in this case is that your Cockeysville territory covers a very broad area about two thirds of which we could readily approve.

The eastern third of this area overlaps the territory presently assigned to Kunkel Service Company of Bel Air and embraces a large number of towns in which Kunkel already has active Goodyear dealerships established, some of which are Sherwood-Sinclair outlets.

It is unfortunate that we are unable to approve the numerous territories covered by your agents on the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula, but we would like to make one rather positive statement of opinion pertaining to that section of Maryland—the Virginia part of this territory we can offer no solution for.

We believe, sincerely, that if we are permitted to operate in the Maryland and Delaware portion of the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula on the same basis that we have operated up to the present time, which is supplying your stations thru our already established dealers, that we will, Post War-wise, be able to realize for you and ourselves almost as large a volume of tire business as we would were your agents appointed tire dealers.

This we believe we would accomplish by virtue of the fact that in this section of Maryland we have an unusually fine group of active, aggressive and longstanding Goodyear dealerships. We would do all in our power to encourage these dealers to render to your service stations unusual service and cooperation, and, furthermore, we would take it as our personal responsibility to follow thru closely on all matters of service, solicitation and general assistance to your service stations in this territory.

3924 In short, we value your business most sincerely.

We believe that there is a great future advantage for both Goodyear and Sherwood to continue the fine exclusive relationship which has existed over the past few years, and we believe that our efforts to cooperate during the past period of the World War proves the sincerity of this feeling.

We do not feel that any great advantage could be gained for Sherwood Brothers other than a possible psychological advantage in appointing agents in the Eastern Shore Section of Maryland as direct tire dealers.

We invite your consideration to this viewpoint.

Very truly yours,

Dear John:

As you know, Mr. Doolittle has already approved the appointment of our agents as Goodyear dealers providing their territory lies in the area west and southwest of a line drawn northward from Baltimore City to the Pennsylvania State Line.

It is my wish now to enter into correspondence, conferences or discussions with Mr. D. E. Randall, Goodyear District Manager, Pittsburgh, Pa. in an effort to have him commit himself to approving Messrs. Garland and Buchholts in Cumberland as Goodyear tire dealers.

When Mr. Shephard was here, he very definitely stated that there would be no opposition to the appointment of our agents in a territory where a Goodyear Service Store was located. I realize that he has no jurisdiction over the Pittsburgh district but feel that his statement was in line with general Goodyear policy. Since our agent and our distributor in Cumberland lie within such a territory, I can see no reason why Mr. Randall would not give his approval to setting these people up as Goodyear distributors.

I shall appreciate it if you will give this matter some thought and act promptly in order to secure a favorable answer to our request. You may want to write Mr. Randall or have Mr. Doolittle write Mr. Randall, or go to see him, or arrange a conference between the three of us but in any event, I would like to get the thing started and if there is any way that I can be of help or assistance, do not hesitate to call upon me.

Mr. John D. Mann,
Special Petroleum Sales Representative
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Inc.
Mt. Royal Ave. & Oliver St.
Baltimore 17, Md.

Dear John:

I would like for you to develop some information for me just as soon as possible after receipt of this letter. The information that I am requesting is a complete outline of how far and to what extent the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company will assist and participate in an advertising campaign for 1946.

I really should have asked about this before and that is why I ask your prompt assistance in assembling all facts and data concerning a 1946 advertising campaign.

As you know, we have been planning for some time on doing some advertising on Goodyear products in connection with our dealer outlets. The time has come when we must have something definite from Goodyear in order to intelligently plan and carry out the program to a successful conclusion. It has been my understanding that it is Goodyear's practice to match dollar for dollar the advertising money spent by Goodyear dealers. Of course, in this instance I am sure you would classify Sherwood Brothers Incorporated as a dealer because it is our intention to advertise for all of our stations. By that, of course, I mean we would advertise for and in the name of Sherwood-Goodyear Dealers. The program would be centrally planned and coordinated and the bills would be paid by Sherwood Brothers Incorporated.

By handling the whole advertising campaign instead of leaving it up to individual dealers I feel it would help the sale of Goodyear products through our dealer outlets and would encourage more of our dealers to handle the Goodyear line.

It may be of interest for you to know that Mr. John R. Sherwood is personally willing to see our company spend some of its own money in order to promote the entire Goodyear setup with our dealers in all eligible territories and particularly here in Baltimore.

Now what I would like for you to do is to try and tie this whole idea together by giving me concrete facts, proposals, schedules, etc. The information I want would include realistic and specific plans on just how a co-3930 operative advertising campaign would work and how it would be applied. I would like to know what amount of money Goodyear would be willing to put up. Should we anticipate a lump sum to be spent over the year or would it be on some sort of a sharing percentage basis related to total sales to our Sherwood dealers.

I would also like to know just how far Goodyear will cooperate in supplying electric signs for our dealer outlets. These would be signs placed either on the building or in the station windows or perhaps on sign poles at some other location.

To sum up I would like to have the whole advertising picture developed in a concrete manner so we would know exactly how far and to what extent we could count on Goodyear's help in both newspaper and radio as well as outdoor advertising in form of signs, electric signs, displays and other features.

It is very necessary that prompt action be taken on this request so that we will be able to do our planning and so that we will be able to swing into action if, as and whom the supply of merchandise reaches the point where we can profitably do some advertising as part of our general merchandising scheme.

Sincerely yours

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Dear Jack:

All of our Sherwood men have arrived safely home after a wonderful trip to visit the Goodyear people in Akron. I hasten to tell you that in my opinion the trip was most successful and I firmly believe that it will actually produce the results that I anticipated.

Again as I expected, you were the perfect host. All of the men are loud in their praises for the efficient manner in which you prepared the three day program as well as the fine entertainment features you provided for them. Jack, I appreciate this greatly and I thank you sincerely for your very splendid cooperation.

I am sure that these fellows have actually caught the enthusiasm of you and your fellow workers as I always do on my visits to Akron. Our men were particularly impressed with Vern Jones department and the store displays on the sixth floor of Goodyear Hall. That is just as I planned and wanted it.

While the boys were in Akron, we did a lot of conniving here and I know that you will be interested to know that they have immediately begun a campaign to sell Goodyear car and home supplies to our dealers and, briefly, the plan is that each territory salesman must bring in to this office every two weeks an order for merchandise from every Sherwood-Goodyear car and home merchandise distributor. Sales records will be kept of each salesman's efforts and I assure you that Goodyear car and home merchandise sales will be accelerated greatly in the year 1946.

We intend to hold up our end of this partnership, we expect to work for what we earn and I am confident that given the proper tools by you fellows, we will produce a job which you will be proud of.

Again I sincerely thank you for your kindness and courtesy to our Sherwood boys and they send their appreciation and kindest regards to a swell guy—Jack Lewin.

Dear John:

I just finished talking to our agent, Mr. Garland, at Chestertown, Maryland and he informs me that a Mr. Davis has taken over the station formerly operated by Mr. Norris Crewes.

Mr. Garland informs me that Mr. Davis is a returned air force pilot and from his description of the fellow, he must be right on the ball. Mr. Davis and Mr. Garland, as well as myself, are very very anxious to get this fellow set up in the tire business. Therefore, please arrange some way to have as many tires as possible, as well as tubes, allocated and tagged for Kunkel's Service Company to be delivered to Mr. Davis in Chestertown.

This is the first request of its kind that we have had from our agent at Chestertown, and it is my desire to show him that we intend to cooperate with him promptly and efficiently.

In addition, I would like for you to make arrangements with Ed Clario to run down there, measure up the place, sell him the necessary store fixtures and establish him as a Sherwood Goodyear Car and Home Merchandise Distributor.

It is very important that we set up these new dealers at the very beginning, therefore, the sooner you can call upon this account with our Mr. Clario, the much better it will work out for all of us.

Please advise me promptly what you are able to accomplish in the tire matter so that I may advise Mr. Garland in Chestertown.

3938 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 430A.

August 6, 1946

As per your request of August 5, I am sending you herewith a copy of my memorandum to Mr. DeHoff and Mr. Jurgens dated December 7, 1945, which quotes from the letter of approval given us by our Directors to extend commissions on Goodyear merchandise to our agents to an extent not to exceed 4% of Goodyear's net billing price to the dealer. This should be sufficient for your files as to the authority for policy.

You also ask to have something specific in the form of a statement of the Company's plan and policy regarding this matter so you can set up your accounting handling accordingly. I would suggest that you take this matter up with Mr. DeHoff and Mr. McCauley because they know the details better than I do. It is our basic policy, for your information, to pay 3% to our commission agents on any Goodyear merchandise sold to our dealers within the territory assigned to each particular agent. In other words, out of our 10% commission, which is paid to us by Goodyear, 3% goes to the agent in the territory, leaving us 7% on that particular transaction. This would mean, I would think, that in each agency operation Goodyear billings to our dealers would be segregated by territories. Out of the commission paid us we would then pay to the agent the 3%. Of course the 3% is based on total, just as our 10% is. The agent would, in other words, receive 30% of our 10%. I would imagine that a routine would be set up whereby our agents would not receive their commissions until we had actually received our commissions from Goodyear.

If there is anything further I can do, let me know.

John R. Sherwood.

Mr. DeHoff:
c.c. Mr. Jurgens

I have received a letter from Mr. Beddingfield dated December 4 on the subject of TBA commission for commission agents. It reads as follows:

"The Directors have approved our sharing your commissions received from Goodyear on sale of TBA merchandise with your commission agents subject to the following:

1. Commission to be paid to the agent not to exceed 4% of Goodyear's net billing price to the dealer.

2. Commission to be paid to the agent based on volume and sales in each agent's territory.

"This authority is given with the understanding that no commission will be paid to commission agents who are dealers in TBA merchandise. The Robinson Patman Law specifically prohibits passing on of commissions to dealers."

"In view of this approval we can now specifically get together in our own minds and decide what we want to do. Personally I am in favor of passing along a 3% commission to our agents who are not already distributors or dealers in Goodyear merchandise; however I think we want to work up the instructions and philosophies back of this move and have everything clear so that we can make it part of a real program for the development of interest in the Goodyear line by our agents and, through them, with our dealers, so that when merchandise actually begins to flow we will have the largest possible number of outfets at the delaer level.

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated,
10 Light Street,
Baltimore 3, Md.

July 30, 1946

This letter sets forth the complete understanding to become effective between us on August 1, 1946, covering the sale of Goodyear Tires, Goodyear Batteries and Goodyear Car & Home Merchandise through our dealers in the territory assigned to you. The arrangement is that you will actively assist in selling and promoting the sale of the above mentioned merchandise to and through dealers handling our petroleum products and will cooperate with Goodyear's representatives and ours in the promotion of such sales. Orders taken by you are subject to the approval or rejection by either Goodyear or our company.

On sales so made we will pay you a commission of 3%, computed on the net amount of invoices excluding the tax and so called "add-on" shown separately thereon after deducting all applicable discounts and allowances other than cash discounts and quantity bonus whether shown on the invoice or subsequently allowed. Sales records furnished us by Goodyear will be conclusive between you and our company as to the basis for computation of any such commission and payment thereof will be made as soon as practical after receiving our monthly statement from Goodyear.

Our company may from time to time authorize payment to you of commissions on the sale of certain merchandise other than that supplied by Goodyear. In such event you will be notified by letter as to the specific items and rates of commission to apply.

This understanding between us shall remain in effect from month to month unless terminated by either of us on 30 days notice to the other, but shall be automatically terminated upon the termination of the Commission Agency Agreement now existing between us covering the sale of petroleum products or upon any termination of the arrangement now in effect between our company and the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. Commissions earned prior to the effective date of any such termination will be paid to you in due course.

Please sign and return two copies of this letter as your assent to this arrangement and retain the third copy.

Mr. H. G. Harper, Manager

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company
Akron 16, Ohio.

Dear Henry:

I hope you will have an opportunity to see Fred McCauley when he pays a visit to Akron this week. I want him to keep in close touch with Goodyear and keep you apprised of the many problems that confront us in the working out of our Goodyear relationships and in working out the construction of a firm foundation for the building of this business in the future.

Mr. H. F. Sinclair paid us a visit yesterday and spent the entire day inspecting our service stations and operations. He was rather complimentary but he let us know in no uncertain terms that he expects the Sherwood organizations in Maryland to act as a spark plug for Sinclair operations all over the country, particularly as far as merchandising and the TBA program is concerned. In order to do this we have got to have your full and strong cooperation, not only in the matter of ideas but also in the supply of merchandise and in the service of supplies.

This brings us to the matter of warehouse again. I know that you have been working hard to secure a warehouse in Baltimore and through no fault of yours the progress has moved forward slowly. I am familiar with the local real estate situation and understand the problems that must confront you in such an undertaking. We here would be glad to give you any possible assistance through our Real Estate Department if you care to have us attempt to do so. Of course we would probably run into the same thing that you have encountered. As you know, I am still very keen about this whole thing. We are moving steadily in the development of stores and in improving the quality of our outlets. We have received appropriations for the development of new stations in our entire territory. The program is definitely forward-looking. Our new stations will have considerably larger stores than the old ones. We are in this thing for keeps. I do hope that you will do everything possible to keep this program going.

With my very warmest regards to you all, I am

Yours sincerely,

Mr. John D. Mann June 3, 1947
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc.
Mt. Royal Ave. & Oliver St.
Baltimore 17, Md.

Dear John:

Attached please find car and home merchandise order for James Thompson as well as memo from Elmore Evans. Mr. Thompson sent in his financial statement to Goodyear some time ago and I wish you would endeavor to have this little order approved at distributor price and passed by your Credit Department. Elmore had worked hard on this account and the opportune time to get these accounts started with Goodyear is right after the lessee takes over the station.

In this respect, I think policy should be established by you and Butler regarding stations which are changed over. When one lessee takes over from another, they buy all of the merchandise on hand at the location, therefore, in most instances where the old lessee has already been approved as a car and home merchandise distributor, it is impossible for the new lessee to qualify by giving us a $250.00 order.

Under the circumstances, I wish you would indicate to me that you will approve the new lessee on the basis of Goodyear car and home merchandise on hand and also the fact that the old lessee was a car and home distributor. In other words, you would transfer the car and home merchandise distributorship from one lessee to another. This would be a big help and I wish you would develop this for me as a matter of future policy.

Sincerely yours,

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

John R. Brown
Cockeysville, Md.

With all the momentarily irrating things that happen during the day, it refreshes me here in the cool of the evening and makes me very happy to be able to report that most of the obstacles which have prevented us from signing up the subject agent as a Goodyear distributor have been overcome.

Butler Doolittle has finally given in and has agreed to franchise Brownie on the complete line of Goodyear products without any reservation or equivocation insofar as two or three accounts lying in Kunkel's territory are concerned. Mr. Kunkel, as I believe you all know, is the Goodyear distributor in Bel Air, Md. and has most of Harford and part of Carroll Counties.

Yesterday and again today Brownie further pledged me that he was going through with the deal and he was beginning to feel rather happy that he was falling in line with the Sherwood plan and he seemed enthusiastic over the fact that he would be in line 100% and would receive additional cooperation from this department which heretofore he has not been receiving.

Contracts, however, have not been signed yet but I think you should know some of the details at this time.

Brownie has on hand approximately $3,000.00 worth of Firestone truck tires, most of which are in sizes which are very slow movers. It is imperative that he receive permission from Mr. Read, District Manager of Firestone, to return those tires to Firestone else he is stuck with them. Brownie owes Firestone some $1,800.00 for merchandise delivered last month and he is withholding payment until the truck tire matter is settled. He has been trying to arrange a conference with Mr. Read but has been unsuccessful up to this date.

The reason he will not sign or prefers not to sign with Goodyear at the present moment is so that he can truthfully tell Mr. Read that he has not signed with any other company because he feels that that question may be asked when he requests an O.K. to return the truck tires. I think his reasoning in this respect is very sound.

Goodyear is not supposed to deliver any tires to Brown unless they have a signed written agreement with him and they cannot possibly give him his full discount as a distributor until the whole deal is okayed by Mr. Sheppard, Goodyear's Division Manager in Atlanta, Ga.

3950 Brownie is completely out of the most popular size of passenger tires at this moment and, therefore, would like to have and has placed an order with me for 50—600 x 16 Goodyear tires.

Yesterday afternoon I suggested a way to work the deal out and Mr. Doolittle agreed to go along with me. My suggestion was to go ahead and ship Brownie the 50—600 x 16 Goodyear tires at regular contract dealer price and when the Firestone matter is squared away, we will date contract back and at that time reimburse him for all the discounts which he should rightfully have received before the contract was executed. We then immediately arranged with Mr. Burns, District Credit Manager, to extend a necessary amount of credit and this morning Brownie okayed the whole deal—he has a complete understanding of it and seems to be very happy that he has made the move.

The tires will go forward to Brownie in the next day or two.

There is not much we can do now until Brownie gets straightened out with Firestone.

Any word of commendation which you may seep to Brownie in the interim will be most helpful and appreciated.

Jackson Manufacturing Company

Kansas City 6, Missouri

Gentlemen:

Last week when I was in Akron, Ohio for the purpose of discussing store fixture planning, with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Mr. Vernon Jones who heads the Goodyear Store Planning Department brought up the subject of Jackson Standards and Shelf Brackets. He explained the many advantages to be had in using your style fixtures and so impressed me that I requested the catalog which he had in his files.

He was of the opinion that any Goodyear dealer or associate dealer could purchase your products at the lowest price. May I explain in this connection that we as a petroleum company are associated with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Incorporated to the extent that they supply our dealer stations with TBA merchandise. We have our own Store Planning Department which works very closely with the Goodyear Store Planning Department. I believe this will qualify us to receive the lowest price offered.

We are planning on using your type standards and brackets extensively in our future station store planning jobs, and it will be necessary for us to have certain information from you so that we may plan accordingly.

Will you please send us your price lists and catalog covering store equipment, designing and also the availability of the standards and brackets. We would also like to know the approximate time for delivery and whether f.o.b. your factory or delivered.

We will appreciate an early reply to this request as we have several jobs that we plan to use your equipment in planning the store setup.

Sincerely yours

Our lessee, Mr. Donnelly, located on the Washington Blvd. called in to our Credit Department one day last week and requested permission to mount a set of Goodrich tires on a customer's car who had one of our Sherwood C.I.C. cards.

He was refused because, as you know, this is not the policy of our company. The only merchandise that is to be sold on open account to any of our charge card customers is Goodyear merchandise with exception of certain accessories.

Therefore, will you contact this lessee and go over the whole situation with him and let us know if we can be of help to you in having a Goodyear representative call in order to secure an original stock of Goodyear tires, tubes and batteries.

To: All Betholine-Sinclair Dealers
Authorized to Honor Credit Cards

Here is some real good news for you. It should help you increase your Goodyear tire and battery business.

Beginning October 1, 1952, you may sell New Goodyear passenger car tires, tubes and batteries on extended 30-60-90 day terms of payment, to holders of Sherwood and Sinclair unexpired credit cards.

Here is the procedure—please read carefully—

1—Confine such sales to New Goodyear passenger car tires, tubes and batteries mounted on the vehicle.

2—Prepare a separate charge ticket (Form SB-31) to cover each such sale. Do not include any other sales, such as gasoline or oil, on the same ticket. Insert, with red pencil, "30-60-90 Days" on the charge ticket in the space provided for "Order No." and be sure to show the license number.

3—It will be necessary that those instructions be followed precisely.

Expressing the hope that this will be of very material benefit to you—

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mac:

Both manufacturers of valve hardware, namely Schrader and Dill, have agreed to extend a special price on their merchandise to Petroleum Distributors and/or commission agents who operate in the tire business on a basis of 100% wholesale only.

This price classification is to be known as "Jobbers" price. It is at a level between the present "Wholesaler" price and the present dealer level.

The idea is that it will enable Petroleum distributors and agents to handle Schrader and Dill merchandise for resale to their service stations on a profitable basis.

We have to have approval of Schrader and Dill before this price can be extended. Therefore, will you be so kind as to submit to me, as promptly as possible, a complete list of your distributors and agents who will fall in this category and who operate within the boundaries of the Baltimore District of Goodyear.

As soon as I receive your list, I will request Akron and Schrader and Dill approval.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Crawford:

We are endeavoring to modernize as many of our dealer stores as possible this year. We feel that by careful study of the dealer's needs and with the use of Goodyear fixtures and hardware, we will be better able to give the dealer a more attractive and better merchandise store thereby selling more Goodyear products and putting more money into the dealer's pocket.

In checking my work sheet, I find that 30 days or more have passed since orders for Goodyear fixtures and hardware have been written and from information received from you some time ago, I was under the impression that a 30 day period could be expected on shipments of fixtures.

We are interested in learning from you the approximate shipping date on fixtures and hardware for the most pressing of these dealer store setups which are listed below:

Our Order 8/6/48	Wm. Dixon	Aberdeen, Md.
Our Order 8/6/48	S. Hahn	Frederick, Md.
Our Order 7/30/48	Dunlap & Stallings	Pasadena, Md.
Our Order 7/26/48	L. J. & Edward Balling	Dundalk, Md.

Any information that you can give me regarding the shipment of the above dealers' orders for fixtures and hardware will be greatly appreciated as we are working on a schedule for our store engineers and can plan for setup dates after hearing from you.

After checking with the suppliers, will you please advice me as to the shipping date, if already shipped, and the approximate date that shipments may be made in cases where there might be a delay.

Thanking you for your cooperation in this matter.

A 1949 Custom Made Plan to Modernize Your Business

Do you know that our company has had more experience in the service station TBA business than any other petroleum company in this area? Through this experience we are able to provide our dealers with a store planning service that will modernize his business to provide: (1) the most effective use of the dealer's floor space, (2) the proper display and association of his merchandise, and (3) the creation of new sales and profit making departments.

In these very competitive times, the alert and aggressive dealer should adjust himself and his business to take every possible advantage of his opportunities. With this custom-built service it is not necessary for you to go to the heavy expense of rebuilding the interior of your store. Our plan makes better use of your present floor space.

Here is all you have to do to join the many Betholine-Sinclair Dealers who have made use of this modernization plan and are showing better gross profits and still better, larger net profits:

1. Fill in the enclosed card and send it to our office in care of H. W. Van Horn, Merchandising Division.

2. One of our representatives will call upon you and go over the entire modernization plan with you, take measurements of your present store and give you a finished plan and estimate as to the cost of modernization. These plans will be made according to your needs, and every foot of space will be considered to make that space pay for itself in added sales opportunities.

3. Having decided that you wish this modernization made, we will order out all necessary material and arrange to have one of our store engineers install the fixtures. He will also place, price and departmentalize; and when the job has been completed, you are ready to introduce to your customers a modern retail store.

No matter what size store you have, we believe that with this modernization plan we can help you to do a better job, make a more attractive place for your customers to shop, and give you what you want most of all —Increased Profits.

Don't delay mailing the attached card, for it means money in your pocket.

On my way out to Ten Hills Saturday I drove by Franklin & Fulton and noticed a Lee Tire Sign attached to lubritory door frame. I'm sure I've seen this sign many times before but must say that it failed to register until Saturday. I think we should ask Elmer to have it removed because of our general policy in not allowing any signs to be attached to station buildings.

Mr. Butler Doolittle
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.
Mt. Royal Ave. & Oliver St.
Baltimore 17, Md.

Dear Butler:

It was very nice of you to use your influence in having the identification truck in Baltimore recently to take care of our new and remodeled station identification needs and we sure appreciate it.

You may recall that it was mentioned some time ago that the new type of valance being used by the identification man on our station windows was not as effective as the Goodyear blue and gold valance and besides not liking the type of valance, I think it was mentioned that due to our other stations having the regular Goodyear valance, this new type did not fit in with our set up.

A tour of stations was made recently by Messrs. John R. Sherwood and G. R. DeHoff and they noticed a change in the type of valance used and also felt that it was not what we wanted as it is our intention to make all of our stations uniform in regards to identification.

I would like to also point out that there is considerable replacement work to be done in the stations, where windows were broken and new ones replaced leaving the new window without a valance.

It is also a fact that most of our stations have exceptional high windows and in these cases it is necessary that the venetian blind valance be used with the regular border to make the installation more attractive. I understood from John Mann that the identification man working here recently did not carry any of the Goodyear blue and gold type valance and the venetian blind valance was not carried in the line.

Here is a summary of what we would like to have and will appreciate your efforts in obtaining same from your Identification Department.

1. We want only the Goodyear blue and gold type valance on All our station windows.

2. We want the venetian blind effect where needed, on the high windows.

3992 3. We particularly would like to have the identification truck here to finish identifying stations as per list given you the first of the year and to replace the new green and white valances that were installed on the windows at several stations recently.

Won't you please do your very best to have the requests handled. We would like to work toward a date of September 15, to have the identification truck and man here to complete the work.

On your reply, or better still, if you will send me an extra copy I will pass it on to Mr. DeHoff for his information.

Thanks again for your usual swell cooperation.

Mr. W. S. Martel, Mgr.,
Automotive Jobber Sales Division
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Martel:

My very best wishes to you for a very Happy and Successful New Year.

You, and through you, your representative, Mr. E. A. Robinson, have done much to make ours happy and successful. For years we have sincerely, and with enthusiam, tried to sell Goodyear automotive merchandise to our dealers and for years our results have not been commensurate with the effort because something has been lacking. I think a fit simile would be that we have been kidding ourselves and I might say, trying to move the immovable object. You and your faithful assistant have now supplied the ingredients in the formula for successful selling of your products and we are sincerely thankful.

No doubt, you have heard by now of the many, many dealers that have been converted 100% from Gates, American Brake Block, Dayton, etc. to Goodyear. I am sure it would delight you to visit us and inspect some of our lubritories with their 100% display of Goodyear fan belts, straight and curved radiator hose. I assure you that quite a transformation has been accomplished.

Your new policy of local distribution has been most successful and you are on solid ground in promoting similar distribution over the country. We have felt for many years that this was the answer to the Car and Home Merchandise sales problem and we have urged the Goodyear Company to establish a general Car and Home warehouse here in Baltimore. They agreed some years ago to do just this, but since the time they committed themselves to this move, there has been a lot of equivocation and we do not have the warehouse for local distribution. That leaves us in the almost untenable position of trying to move the mountain with a pitchfork. It just does not work, and I fear that our overall Car and Home Merchandise business will eventually be lost to competitors who can better serve our dealers.

I want to particularly thank you for sending your Mr. R. A. Robinson to take over the direction of the establishment and promotion of this deal. You could not have picked a better man. Ed is well liked by every salesman, merchandiser and supervisor in the Sherwood organization and the same is true with all of the Brooks-Huff Tire Company. He has a personality that is hard to beat. This may be exemplified by the close association and friendship he has built up with us in the short period he has been associated with us. He knows the features of his product, he knows how to present his proposition 3996 well and he is a tireless worker. We think he is a great fellow and a fine salesman and that applies also to the many, many dealers whom he has personally contacted here in Baltimore. You know people are fast to criticize but slow to praise, but I have always felt that praise should be given where and when due, so once again thank you for sending Ed to us to do the job, because we know Ed had done it in a magnificent manner.

We are considering in the back of our heads a big dealer meeting, which if held would probably be within the next three or four weeks and if we go through with this plan, I think it would be appropriate for you to take part in the meeting. We would be most happy to have you talk to our dealer group and as plans develop, I will so advise.

Once again, let me thank you and Ed for the fine work you have done—we appreciate it—and we want you to know it.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Developing Store at Charles Hudgins
North Ave. & Charles St.
Baltimore, Md.

You exemplified the correct attitude when you promoted the development of the store to Mr. Hudgins.

We would like for you to now take over the assignment of actually bringing this matter to a head.

We all are of the opinion that this location should have one of the most completely stocked stores in the whole State of Maryland. It is one of our topflight stations located at one of the busiest intersections in the City of Baltimore and it is embarrassing to the point of being ridiculous when we are forced to steer interested visitors away from this, one of our best locations because of the lack of store facilities and merchandise. Personally, I feel that if Western Auto can install a store in the middle of the lot south of our station location and Goodrich Rubber Co. can do the business they do at Charles & Oliver Sts., it is all the more reason why we should actually be ashamed of our setup here.

I honestly believe that a smart merchandiser (not necessarily Hebrew), if given this location even with its present facilities, he would do a bangup volume.

Personally, I feel that Charlie Hudgins has the capability for doing an outstanding job here but he needs to be sold. It might be well to get him in the car and take him to Porter's and even Rennie's in Glenn Burnie as well as possibly Fayette Filling Station in east Baltimore.

We are not thinking now in terms of a complete new store using the new Goodyear Standard fixtures, but what we think should be done at this time is for Charlie to spend possibly $200.00 for additional center tables and possibly $2,000.00 for additional lines of merchandise.

We have proved conclusively many, many times that it takes mass display to sell merchandise and this is what Charlie has not done.

Your responsibility is to sell Charlie on this plan up to the point of getting a commitment from him and then calling on Van Horn for any help needed.

4000 It may develop that Charlie will want a commitment from us concerning his station lease. If this matter comes up, you can tell him point blank that we will make no such commitment, however, as long as he does the right thing and cooperates in operating the station as it should be operated, he need have no fear concerning his lease. On the other hand, if anything should happen he will always receive dollar for dollar for the merchandise purchased and the same applies to equipment less a small depreciation.

Go to it and I know you will be successful.

Betholine-Sinclair Service Station
Worth Avenue & Charles Street

Dear Charlie:

Yesterday's meeting in the Conference Room was beneficial because we both had an opportunity to present our problems to each other and make definite plans for the future. It is always well when one can understand and appreciate the other fellows problems and point of view, and then in a cooperative spirit, make plans which will be mutually beneficial.

The important items which you stated you would get started right away are as follows:

1. Get your present low oil ratio of 1.6 up to a minimum of 2% by training and directing your service station salesman to get under the hood, where possible, without asking the customer's permission, and endeavoring to sell more oil changes.
2. Personally train all new men as well as certain old men to give proper Betholine-Sinclair service, including the selling features of all Sherwood products.
3. Provide adequate fixtures and a generous supply of merchandise for resale in the store space to be commensurate with the other physical facilities and reputation of this station. We believe a large, modern, streamlined tire display, coupled with a tire sales course of instruction, would insure a large volume of tire business.
4. More personal service by you. People like to meet and talk to the boss; therefore, whenever possible, you should try to greet your customers personally, and direct the personnel on the driveways.

4006 You displayed a fine cooperative spirit yesterday, Charlie, and I feel sure that by working together, we can accomplish a lot more than we are doing right now.

Yours very sincerely,

Wm F. King #50
Broadway and Courtland Sts

In reference to your letter of March 11th, relative to the condition at the above location, I would like to say first that I agree with you 100%.

Even though it is not apparent, I do feel that some progress has been made in getting the dealer to go along with us on our "complete line".

During the first ten months of 1947, the only Goodyear product being purchased by King was tires, and as near as I was able to determine he was purchasing all of his [illegible] requirements locally - from the large stock of Dealer Belts, Ends and Union batteries.

I was being assigned to the above account in September, I have procured but two orders for accessories & any size; one in October of approximately $150.00 (Paid & delivered) the other in February 1948 for approximately $300.00 (Paid & delivered). I realize only too well that these meager results are far from being satisfactory & neither the best, but I do feel that we are making progress.

This dealer had several rather weak objections being raised & talked to him about his store arrangement and merchandise set-up. Briefly and main objection was that the local Independent was taking up the most of his space etc. - secondly that he felt obligated & loyal to this name & has an established chain, permanent type and large city - thirdly that he had the usual competition on accessories from the King on Broadway

INTER-OFFICE COMMUNICATION

I have discussed our franchise and products very much King on several occasions and feel that we have covered all of the various objections. Think of all the Hotpoint appliances have been removed, second, I think he relizes that his best and fairest obligation is to his partner Howard Bros., and inorder to overcome his third objection, I spent three days in his store working with he and his men rearranging fixtures, trueing riddles, merchandise boxes, have the attic cleaned and rearranging displays, and in pricing merchandise. (Payne spent a full day to help with that)

During these 3 days I gave his men Little Talks on our products and merchandise and how to sell them, sort of to put life and began selling ourselves as well - it was apparent that the dealer was not following up our training and training his men to be salesmen.

Frankly, King himself is a good service station man as far as pumping gas, and getting cars serviced quickly - but he is not a good merchandiser (and never - was a big job for me)

I do have a recommendation to make, and you have already taken action on it, and that is to have King see the office for a thorough understanding as to his responsibilities as merchandising our complete line and training himself and his men to be better salesmen.

It has been my experience that the dealer respond more readily upon hearing it from you and Harry Weller than when King and I see it from the ground like salesmen.

Mr. Beddingfield states in his letter that his Home Office Merchandising Department is interested in seeing a record of the Sherwood Brothers' sales of tires and batteries for the year 1944 and the year 1945. However, I am giving you sales of all departments, leaving to your judgment just what figures you should use.

Dear Mr. Beddingfield:

Subject: Sherwood TBA Program

I am very glad to be able to give you our total figures of business done with the Goodyear people for the year 1945. The dollar volume is as follows:

Tires and Tubes	$393,683
Batteries	21,357
Car & home merchandise	33,170
Total	$448,210

On this volume Goodyear paid us a commission of $44,660.10. Personally I think that this is a perfectly grand record considering the drastic shortage of merchandise. I am sure that this fine record could not have been accomplished without the enthusiastic and efficient leadership and administration of our Mr. Fred McCauley. Under his leadership we were able to do not only this nice volume of business, but we were also successful in laying considerable ground work for capitalizing on the TBA activity in the future. New dealers have been signed up, orders for stores and store fixtures have been taken, and we have established 12 or 13 dealers who will handle major appliances.

A new program was organized late in 1945 whereby our salesmen would be facilitated in doing a better job in the sale and follow up of car and home merchandise. This program has already produced excellent results thus far in 1946. Our problem, of course, is the universal one of encountering difficulty in getting merchandise.

I do feel that great progress has been made and that we can look forward with confidence to a most successful business in our entire TBA undertaking.

I think we might consider that the commissions earned indicated above are practically entirely net, because the expenses that might be charged against the earning of these commissions are practically nil inasmuch as we have always carried on a merchandising assistance program with our dealers. Of course we must recognize too 4030 that the dealers made a substantial profit on this volume, all of which is reflected in the quality of our dealers and their operations and financially their ability to pay us satisfactory rentals for our stations. I am indeed very much pleased with this program.

Very truly yours,

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Vice President.

Copy for Mr. Fred McCauley

January 7, 1947

Mr. R. S. Wilson, Vice President
Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Wilson:

Nineteen Forty Six slipped away without my having had an opportunity to see you, and I hope that that will not recur in 1947; however as we enter the New Year I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know how our business is developing with Goodyear.

As you know, in late 1944 we took over all of the Sinclair business in the State of Maryland and transferred to Sinclair our business in Washington, D. C. We now have a rather nice distribution picture in Maryland, and we are trying hard to improve it all the time, yet we already have an organization which in my opinion can do a very outstanding job on Goodyear products if we get the merchandise.

In 1946 we did just about $600,000 worth of business with Goodyear, of which $100,000 was in car and home merchandise. In order to produce the $100,000 in deliveries we took orders totaling about $175,000. We received nowhere near the number of tires that we were able to sell, nor were we supplied with anything like our requirements of batteries. In other words, there are still a great many foreign tires and batteries being sold to our dealer outlets. If we can convert that business alone we will materially increase our volume. The same is true of car and home merchandise, a great deal of which is being supplied to our dealers by local jobbers, who not only have the merchandise but who are able to give better delivery service, due to our lack of a warehouse in Baltimore. I hope that that too will be corrected.

We have set as our goal with Goodyear for 1947 the amount of $1,000,000.00, of which we expect $200,000 to be in car and home merchandise, and I am hoping for at least a $2,000,000 business in 1950. Personally I believe it can be done and our organization is right with me.

We have separated our TBA Department from the rest of our sales organization. They are specializing in this work. We have taken on additional salesmen, and have put ourselves in position to hit this thing hard on our firm belief that now is the time to really get in there and fight, and build a foundation for this business in the future. If we do not take advantage of the opportunity to build our cornerstones now, we may suffer for years and years to come, and that would be most unfortunate.

4035 I do not want to be hoggish in the matter of supplies of merchandise, but in our organization you have really a laboratory case, which I honestly feel deserves special consideration. The work we are doing has been, and should continue to be, of great value in your development of your business with Sinclair. We can be of great value in this by setting an example of what can be done. To aid us in all this I sincerely hope that you will do everything in your power to help us secure merchandise and services during 1947. We are in this game with both sleeves rolled up. I hope you will get into it with us in the same spirit. Just do all you possibly can and we will do our best on this end of the line.

With every good wish for the New Year, during which I hope many of our problems will be ironed out, I am—

Yours sincerely,

Sherwood Brothers Incorporated

Mr. DeHoff

Mr. Cottman
Mr. Van Horn
Mr. Landon

Yesterday morning we had a conference at Goodyear with Mr. Doolittle to discuss the contents of the letter I wrote him some two weeks ago which concerned our tire and tube volume this year as compared with last. I pointed out that up until September 21, our tire and tube volume was 21.62% less than for the same period in 1946, the decrease in volume being some $60,000.00.

We had an excellent month in September and were able to decrease the percentage of decline over last year to 11%. The volume decline up until October 1 was decreased to some $42,000.00 instead of the $60,000.00 figure which obtained as of September 1.

Facts developed at this conference were as follows: The greater portion of our decline was traced to two large accounts; namely, Brooks-Huff Tire Company and Armstrong in Laytonsville. Brooks-Huff has shown a decline this year over last year of 21% while Armstrong's decline has been 24%. The total Goodyear Baltimore District's decline for tire and tube volume this year over last year as ascertained by authentic figures which were shown to us is 32%. In the face of the Baltimore District decline of 32% and with the knowledge that the greater proportion of Brooks-Huff Tire Co. and Armstrong's decline is due largely to truck tire sales, our decline of 11% denotes that we are making progress even though we are still in the red in this department.

We will have to produce a tire volume of $206,000.00 during the remaining quarter of this year to equal last year's volume. Ways and means were discussed as to how to get this volume in the last quarter. Mr. Doolittle has committed himself to doing everything humanly possible to aid us in reaching our minimum quota for tire and tube sales. Things are being done right now to insure our reaching this volume.

I know you will be interested in knowing that even though we are in the red in the Tire & Tube Department as of October 1, our total volume was $67,681.00 above the same period for last year.

Sinclair Refining Company

Marketer Agreement

This Agreement, made this.....day of.....,
19....., by and between Sinclair Refining Company, a Maine corporation, party of the first part, and.....
party of the second part, Witnesseth, That,

For the mutual considerations hereinafter set forth and by reason of the special trust and confidence the party of the first part (hereinafter referred to as "Sinclair" or "bailor", as the context may require) reposes in the party of the second part (hereinafter referred to as "Marketer" or "bailee", as the context may require), it is agreed that Marketer may act as a non-exclusive bailee for hire for Sinclair in the territory described at the end hereof, with headquarters at.....
....., State of .....; and Marketer hereby agrees to act in such capacity subject to the following terms and conditions:

1. The respective rights, duties and obligations of the parties in performing hereunder shall be those imposed by law upon Sinclair as bailor and Marketer as bailee for hire as enlarged by this agreement.

2. Marketer shall receive, care for, measure and account for in conformity to Sinclair's requirements, and sell, exclusive of other similar products, the oils, lubricants and other products (herein referred to as "products") that Sinclair supplies for sale, and shall deliver and collect for all products thus sold, it being understood that all such products shall remain the property of Sinclair until sold and that the proceeds therefrom shall be the property of Sinclair and subject to its orders. If Marketer shall handle and deal in property other than that supplied for sale by Sinclair, Marketer shall not permit the same to interfere with Marketer's obligations and duties hereunder. Marketer agrees not to commingle with Marketer's funds the proceeds of sales or other moneys of Sinclair and likewise agrees to keep Sinclair's products separate and apart from the property of Marketer and that of third parties.

3. Sinclair shall specify not only the prices at which products bailed to Marketer shall at all times be sold but also all governmental taxes, excises and exactions to be charged and collected in connection with such products, their sale, delivery or other disposition; and Marketer agrees not to deviate therefrom.

4. Unless otherwise directed, Marketer shall make daily deposit of all collections in the bank designated by Sinclair, and shall each day secure and transmit receipted deposit slips, certificate of deposit or such other evidence of such deposit as Sinclair may specify; and shall report daily, or as often as Sinclair may require in writing, all stocks, sales, collections, deposits and remittances on forms provided by Sinclair, such report to show stocks, sales, collections, deposits and remittances made from date of last previous report to and including date of current report.

5. Marketer shall send all reports, evidences of deposit, remittances, inventories, and correspondence to Sinclair at ....., except as otherwise directed by it.

6. Marketer shall submit to Sinclair an inventory of all products and property remaining on hand on the last day of each month or on such other business day as Sinclair may direct for closing monthly business.

7. Marketer shall obtain prompt return when due from customers of storage and sales equipment and all shipping barrels (heavy steel drums) and furnish strict accounting thereof, and of all light iron barrels returned for credit by customers, reporting the number to be credited to each customer by name; and shall make such disposition of all containers as Sinclair may direct.

8. Sinclair reserves the right to reject, either with or without cause and without assigning to Marketer any reason for such action, any orders taken by Marketer. No commissions are to be paid on rejected orders or on orders cancelled by purchasers. In computing and paying any commissions earned under this agreement, or any other sums that may be due Marketer from Sinclair, there shall be deducted therefrom and retained by Sinclair for its own use sums equivalent to commissions which Marketer may have theretofore received from sales upon which customers have returned the products for credit, and any other like items reducing Sinclair's net cash receipts from such sales.

9. Marketer shall at Marketer's own expense furnish necessary trucks, truck-tanks, motive power, drivers, labor, water, light, power, and heat, and shall also pay all necessary expenses in draying Sinclair's products and equipment and in making sales, deliveries, and collections. Marketer shall also at Marketer's own expense apply for in Marketer's own name and have installed at Marketer's headquarters a telephone which shall be listed in the proper telephone directory and other directories in the name of Sinclair Refining Company with the street address of Marketer's headquarters. All charges for local and long distance calls made by means of such telephone, whether such calls be of a business or private nature, shall be for the account of Marketer, and Sinclair shall not in any case be obligated to pay any such charges or to reimburse Marketer for any payments so made. Sinclair may pay any such charges and deduct the amount so paid from any moneys then due or thereafter to become due Marketer.

10. Marketer shall: (a) employ no improper, questionable or illegal methods in soliciting or securing business covered by this agreement; (b) observe any instructions given Marketer in so far as they relate to compliance with Federal, State and Municipal laws, regulations, rulings and ordinances affecting or regulating the possession, handling, sale, inspection or taxation (including exemptions from, and refunds of, taxes and excises) of Sinclair's products whether such instructions shall emanate from Sinclair or the lawful authorities charged with the enforcement of such laws, regulations, rulings and ordinances; (c) exercise due vigilance in protecting the equipment, property and products of Sinclair, notifying it promptly in writing of any condition which may arise requiring its attention; (d) make collections of such accounts in Marketer's territory as Sinclair may deliver to Marketer for that purpose; (e) assist Sinclair generally in promoting the successful merchandising of its products and the profitable utilization of its properties; (f) secure and maintain in force in Marketer's name and at Marketer's cost any and all permits and licenses required by law for the conduct of Marketer's operations as bailee hereunder; and (g) comply with all valid laws, ordinances and regulations as to weights and measures and as to the transportation of flammable products and, in addition, with safety recommendations of Sinclair.

11. Marketer shall not extend credit for Sinclair's account to any customer without first securing permission in writing from Sinclair so to do, and shall withdraw any credit so extended when so directed by Sinclair. Marketer shall be liable to Sinclair for any loss sustained through violation of these provisions. Sinclair is authorized, at its option, to charge Marketer with the invoice value to customers of products delivered in violation of such provisions, and shall have the right to deduct and retain for its own use said invoice value from any moneys that may then be due or which thereafter may become due Marketer, and such deduction shall be construed and accepted as payment of commissions hereunder. In the event and as often as Marketer shall be indebted to Sinclair upon any account, whether the indebtedness shall arise under this agreement or by reason of any other contract or obligation whatsoever, Marketer agrees that Sinclair shall have the right to deduct from any moneys due or to become due Marketer amounts to be applied in satisfaction or partial satisfaction, as the case may be, of such indebtedness.

12. Marketer shall exercise the highest degree of care to insure against the occurrence of any contamination, adulteration or any accidental or negligent blending or mixing together whatsoever, whether in Marketer's hands or by or upon delivery into customers' containers, of the various petroleum products to be handled, sold and delivered hereunder and shall be directly, wholly and severally liable to all persons, including, without limitation, customers and Sinclair, for all loss, cost, expense, injury and damage, caused by, growing out of, or happening in connection with, any such contamination, adulteration or accidental or negligent blending or mixing however caused, and in addition shall pay all judgments and shall bear the expense of defending on behalf of Sinclair any litigation seeking damages alleged to be due by reason of any contamination, adulteration, blending or mixing together of said products, even if such litigation shall be groundless, false or fraudulent.

13. Marketer shall be responsible for, and hereby assumes all responsibility for, any and all acts of Marketer and Marketer's employees, whether they be acts of commission or omission, resulting in cost, loss or damage to Sinclair, and Marketer hereby agrees to indemnify, save harmless, and reimburse Sinclair for and on account thereof. Marketer hereby assumes all responsibility and full liability to Sinclair, and hereby agrees to indemnify and reimburse it, for any shortages or losses in, or arising out of, sales, collections or deliveries hereunder, or in the products, equipment or property of Sinclair bailed to Marketer or coming under Marketer's control, including, without limitation, responsibility and liability for losses of Sinclair's funds by reason of loss, theft, robbery or burglary, and Marketer hereby authorizes Sinclair to deduct from any and all moneys due to Marketer during the life of this agreement, and retain for its own use, amounts for the payment of such shortages or losses; and Marketer agrees that Marketer's liability hereunder shall be that of an insurer, except as to losses resulting from fires not due to Marketer's negligence.

4049 5. The parties agree that the foregoing schedule includes all rates and describes the exact conditions and circumstances under which commissions and allowances shall be payable and that Marketer shall be entitled to no payment for any sale, delivery or service not plainly embraced within the specific terms of, or for which no applicable rate is provided in, said schedule. Sinclair reserves the right to effect deliveries from its stock of products bailed to Marketer, as to which a loading allowance only shall be payable. Sinclair shall have the right to withhold payment of commissions on any sale or delivery made by Marketer until payment therefor has been received by Sinclair. If Sinclair shall desire to change, add or eliminate any rate or any provision in said schedule, the same shall become effective upon fifteen (15) days' written notice to Marketer and a memorandum thereof in writing may be signed by the parties hereto as provided in Paragraph No. 26 hereof in lieu of the execution of a new contract, provided that no such change shall alter or modify any other provision of this agreement.

16. In lieu of making semi-monthly payments of commissions to Marketer, as provided for in Paragraph No. 14, Sinclair shall have the right to pay to Marketer as an advance payment of commissions accrued during the first half of each month such portion of Marketer's commissions as Sinclair may determine based upon its estimates thereof. The amount of such advance so paid to Marketer shall be deducted and withheld by Sinclair from the amount of Marketer's commissions actually due during and payable for the month in which any such advance payment shall have been made.

17. Marketer agrees to and does hereby accept full and exclusive liability for, the payment of any and all taxes and contributions for unemployment insurance, for sickness and disability, and for old age retirement benefits, pensions and annuities now or hereafter imposed by the Government of the United States and by the Government of any State of the United States, which are measured by the wages, salaries or other remuneration paid to persons employed by Marketer, for Marketer's own account, for work Marketer is required to perform or have performed under the terms of this bailment agreement, and Marketer further agrees that, in order to relieve Sinclair of any possible secondary liability for such taxes or contributions, Marketer will do everything necessary from time to time to elect voluntary coverage under applicable laws or regulations and to comply with, or bear the burden of contesting, any regulations and any amendments thereto, which may be promulgated by the administrative authority under such applicable law, Sinclair shall have the right to withhold from commissions and any other sums due Marketer the amounts of any such taxes and contributions which may be imposed or levied for the purpose of paying same direct to the proper Federal and State authorities; and Marketer agrees to furnish Sinclair such information as may be requested or required by Sinclair to report properly and effect payment of such taxes.

18. If required by Sinclair, Marketer shall furnish surety bond acceptable to Sinclair in form and amount to indemnify Sinclair fully against loss of any moneys, values, products, goods, wares, merchandise, equipment and property bailed to Marketer or coming under Marketer's control or possession hereunder.

19. Marketer shall be liable to Sinclair for any demurrage or storage charges assessed by any common or contract carrier owing to Marketer's neglect promptly to unload and release stake and transport trucks, tank cars and other railroad cars, or to take out merchandise shipments intended for Marketer's handling.

20. If Marketer is a corporation, or if unincorporated and has, at any time, one or more employees, Marketer hereby agrees, at Marketer's own expense to provide and maintain in effect workmen's compensation insurance, securing the payment of compensation to Marketer's employees, or employer's liability insurance in accordance with the laws of the States in which Marketer performs work under this agreement.

21. If Marketer is a copartnership, each of the partners acting for himself and for the copartnership agrees with each other and with Sinclair: (a) that the partners shall be jointly and severally bound and liable as general partners hereunder; (b) that Sinclair may deal with any (one) partner of its choice; and (c) that the death or withdrawal of any partner shall be effective to terminate automatically this agreement.

22. Marketer hereby designates ....., one of Marketer's employees, as Marketer's duly authorized representative to receive products from Sinclair, to execute receipts for same, to make reports and transmit information to Sinclair at the time and in the form and manner required by Sinclair, and Marketer hereby agrees that any and all acts of said representative shall be deemed to be the acts of Marketer. Marketer shall have the right to change Marketer's designated representative, provided written notice of such change shall be first given to Sinclair at the place named in Paragraph No. 5 hereof.

23. At any time during the life of this agreement or at the termination hereof Sinclair shall have the right to audit the books, accounts, station records and inventories relating to this bailment and moneys and stocks on hand; and Marketer shall afford Sinclair and its employees full cooperation and assistance in making such audit or audits.

24. As a gratuitous convenience to Marketer and as limited herein, Marketer may use, for the storage and distribution of products bailed to Marketer pursuant hereto and property sold by Sinclair to Marketer, Sinclair's bulk oil storage and distribution facilities, if any, located in Marketer's territory consisting generally of a warehouse, storage tanks and auxiliary equipment, provided that any such use shall be in a careful and proper manner so as to avoid effectively the creation or continuance of any nuisance, fire hazard or dangerous condition whatsoever and that during the period of such use Marketer shall keep Sinclair's facilities, together with its contiguous property, in a safe, clean, orderly and sightly condition. The parties expressly recognize that this authorization (a) does not in any way obligate Sinclair to continue to allow Marketer to use any such facilities for any particular period of time, (b) constitutes a bare non-assignable license to Marketer to use those portions of such facilities as Sinclair may designate and solely as herein specified, (c) may be revoked forthwith by Sinclair at any time upon giving oral or written notice, (d) shall in any event ipso facto terminate upon termination of the bailment arrangement herein established, and (e) under no circumstances or conditions gives Marketer any estate, property interest or right of possession in any such facilities. Sinclair makes no representation to Marketer as to the present or future fitness or suitability of such facilities for the uses herein authorized or as to the character or effect of any work hereafter performed for or by Sinclair, at its discretion, at, upon, or in connection with such facilities, including maintenance, repair, removal, replacements or additions thereto, and Sinclair shall have no liability or responsibility whatsoever to Marketer or Marketer's servants, employees or third parties for injury to or death of persons, damage to property, expense, or loss, of whatsoever nature occasioned by or connected with Marketer's use of said facilities or directly or indirectly resulting from Marketer's exercise of the license herein granted, whether or not occasioned by Sinclair's negligence or that of any agent, employee or contractor of Sinclair, all risks of use, including, without limitation, the risks of any and all defects and hazards whether they be patent or latent, being hereby assumed by Marketer. Marketer agrees to reimburse Sinclair for any and all cost, expense or damage to Sinclair arising from, or directly or indirectly connected with, the exercise by Marketer of the right of use hereby authorized, excepting only normal costs of maintenance, repairs, removals, replacements or additions. Marketer shall make no changes whatsoever in the physical condition of Sinclair's facilities without its prior written consent.

25. This agreement cannot be assigned in whole or in part by Marketer without the consent of Sinclair in writing first obtained. Marketer shall incur no indebtedness of any character whatsoever in the name of Sinclair, nor obligate Sinclair in any manner without first securing written authority so to do from an officer or manager of Sinclair. Sinclair shall not be responsible for any unauthorized debts or obligations incurred by Marketer. Either party may terminate this agreement at any time with or without cause; and upon the termination hereof, regardless of the state of the mutual accounts, Marketer shall forthwith deliver to Sinclair or its representatives all equipment, property, products, moneys, credits, books of account, and station records of whatsoever form, bailed to Marketer or coming under Marketer's control, Marketer hereby waiving any and all liens and the right to assert the same.

26. This agreement cancels and supersedes all previous agency and bailment agreements between the parties. The counterpart hereof held by Sinclair shall be considered the original, and shall be the binding agreement in the event of any variation between such counterpart and the one held by Marketer, and such counterpart held by Sinclair shall constitute the full and entire agreement between the parties hereto. This agreement constitutes a merger of all proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to the subject matter and provisions hereof and may be altered, amended or modified only in writing signed by Marketer and a representative of Sinclair authorized to sign this agreement. Marketer acknowledges notice that this instrument may be executed on Sinclair's behalf only by one of its officers, managers, or chief clerks, and that none other has authority to consent or agree to any alteration, amendment, modification or limitation whatsoever of the terms of this agreement.

4050 COMMISSION EXHIBIT NO. 473.

Equipment Rental Agreement.

This Agreement, made and entered into by and between Sinclair Refining Company, a Maine corporation, party of the first part, hereinafter referred to as 'Sinclair,'' and Party of the second part, hereinafter referred to as "Customer'' and by the singular neuter pronoun,

Witnesseth, That, in consideration of the sum of One ($1.00) Dollar in hand paid by Customer, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and in consideration of the mutuality hereof and of the rentals provided herein, it is agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. Sinclair hereby hires and rents to Customer, and agrees to deliver to Customer's place of business, such equipment as Sinclair may from time to time deem necessary for the economical and convenient handling, storing, dispensing, advertising or testing by Customer of petroleum products on the premises herein described, and Customer hereby agrees to pay Sinclair rental for such equipment the sum of One ($1.00) Dollar per annum, payable annually in advance, during the continuance of this agreement. Sinclair shall have the right to substitute for any equipment placed with Customer other equipment of like character and quantity and in the event of such substitution this agreement in all its terms shall apply to such substituted equipment.

2. Equipment delivered to Customer shall be used by Customer in its business upon only the following premises situated in the City of ....., State of ....., at No. ..... Street, or (if in the country) ....., ... miles ..... of the City of ..... on ..... Highway, State of ..... said premises also being known as .....
(in which direction)

and owned by ..... and such equipment shall at all times be treated considered as personal property and in no sense fixtures or a part of the real estate, regardless of the manner in which it may be installed or used on said premises.

3. Each delivery to and acceptance by Customer of any equipment that may from time to time be placed with Customer, including substitutions therefor, shall be evidenced by a receipt on Sinclair's Form 995, Equipment and Materials Receipt, which shall be signed by Customer at the time of receiving such equipment and which when so signed shall become a part of this agreement with the same force and effect as though embodied herein; provided, however, that any equipment heretofore or hereafter delivered by Sinclair to Customer, whether or not evidenced by said Receipt, shall be subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement. It is understood and agreed that Customer's acts of excepting such equipment and signing said receipt shall be construed to be an acknowledgment by Customer that the equipment described in said receipt was in good and serviceable condition at the time of its delivery to Customer.

4. Such equipment shall at all times be and remain the property of Sinclair, and shall be used by Customer only for the purpose of handling, storing, dispensing, advertising or testing petroleum products. Any authorized representative of Sinclair shall at any reasonable hour have the right to inspect such equipment.

5. Customer hereby agrees that it will, unless specifically exempted by Sinclair in writing from so doing, maintain such equipment in good condition and repair and pay all cost and expense in connection therewith; that it will not encumber or remove such equipment or permit anyone except Sinclair to remove or take possession thereof; that it will exercise care in the protection and preservation of such equipment and will not efface, deface, damage or destroy the same or suffer others so to do; that it will not do or suffer to be done anything whereby such equipment or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the title of Sinclair thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; and that it will pay or reimburse Sinclair for any loss or damage Sinclair may sustain in the event of the happening of any of the foregoing or other contingencies. If, upon demand, Customer shall for any reason fail or refuse to return to Sinclair any of such equipment, Customer, shall be liable to Sinclair for the value, set forth in Sinclair's said Form 995, Equipment and Materials Receipt, of such equipment not returned or, if no value is set forth in said Receipt, for the fair market value thereof. Customer hereby further agrees to comply with all applicable state laws and municipal ordinances, rules, and regulations in connection with the use, installation, erection, operation, maintenance and display of such equipment or of any part thereof.

6. In the event Customer should at any time use such equipment for any purpose other than the handling, storing, dispensing, advertising or testing of petroleum products, or should violate any of the obligations of this agreement, Sinclair shall have the right to declare this agreement terminated and, without notice to Customer, may with men, vehicles, and necessary tools enter the premises whereon such equipment or any part thereof may be located and remove the same therefrom, whether affixed to the premises or located in, on or under the same, or not, without recourse to any legal proceedings for that purpose, and without liability for damages resulting from so doing.

7. In the event this agreement is terminated within ..... year ..... from the date hereof, for any breach or default specified in paragraph numbered "5" or "6" hereof, the expenses of delivering and installing said equipment as such expenses as shown on Sinclair's books and records, shall be paid by Customer to Sinclair, unless such equipment shall have been installed at Customer's expense, and the expense incurred by Sinclair in removing such equipment shall also be paid by Customer to Sinclair.

8. This agreement shall continue so long as may be mutually agreeable to the parties hereto, it being further agreed that either party to this agreement may terminate the same at any time upon giving five (5) days' written notice to the other party (no previous notice being required in the event to breach or default); provided that in the event this agreement shall be terminated by Customer as provided in this paragraph within the period specified in paragraph numbered "7" hereof, Customer shall reimburse Sinclair for its expenses as provided in paragraph numbered "7" hereof in the same manner as though this agreement had been terminated by reason of Customer's breach or default.

9. Upon the termination of this agreement by notice or in any other manner, Sinclair shall have the right and privilege of removing such equipment or any part thereof from the above described premises.

10. Customer shall pay all taxes, license fees, permit fees, inspection fees, occupation taxes and any and all charges, fees or assessments of whatsoever nature that may be levied, assesed or charged on or against such equipment or any part thereof, or on the installation thereof or Customer's use or operation thereof; and in the event of Customer's failure or refusal so to do, Sinclair may, at its option, pay the same and, upon presentation of invoice therefor, Customer shall reimburse Sinclair for payments thus made.

4051 11. If any of such equipment shall consist of signs or other advertising devices arranged for artificial illumination, or if electric current is used in connection with the operation or maintenance of any of the equipment covered hereby, Customer agrees to pay for all charges for the electric current used in such illumination, operation, or maintenance.

12. Customer, for itself, its heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns, hereby release, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Sinclair, its successor and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any injury to, including death of, persons (whether they be third persons, Customer, or employees of either of the parties hereto) and any loss of or damage to property (whether it be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons) by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any such equipment or any part thereof, or any gasoline, oils, or other petroleum products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defects in the contruction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use or operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling, or dislocation of such equipment or any part thereof, or by reason of any like or difference casualty, neither due to the negligence of Sinclair or otherwise.

13. Sinclair hereby authorizes, Customer to use the trade-marks and brand names of Sinclair solely on and in connection with the products purchased from and so identified by Sinclair, the same to be used during such time only as this agreement shall be in effect. If Sinclair shall lend to Customer or permit Customer to use any sign or device of any kind bearing Sinclair's name or any trade-mark, brand name, symbol or slogan, to be used for the purpose of identifying or advertising Sinclair's products, Customer agrees upon demand to return such sign or device to Sinclair and to discontinue the use of any word, names, phrase or thing which Customer is hereby authorized to use. Customer is permitted to use Sinclair's said name, trade-marks, brand names, signs, devices and slogans only upon the following conditions: (a) that they will be used in such way only as Sinclair may authorize; (b) that they will not be used in the identifying or advertising of any products except those supplied by Sinclair; (c) that Customer will not permit anyone else to exercise or use any of the rights, privileges or things granted or lent to Customer; (d) that Customer will not claim any right, title or interest in or to Sinclair's name, trade-marks, brand names, signs, devices and slogans; and (e) that Customer will never directly or indirectly deny or assail or assist in denying or assailing the sole and exclusive ownership of Sinclair in and to the same. Failure or refusal by Customer to comply with the terms and conditions set forth herein shall entitle Sinclair to terminate forthwith the within agreement; but such termination shall not in anywise perjudice Sinclair's claim for damages.

14. This agreement is personal to Customer and shall not be assigned in whole or in part by Customer without the consent of Sinclair in writing first obtained.

15. This agreement is executed in duplicate, and the counterpart thereof held by Sinclair is to be considered the original and shall be the binding agreement in case of a variance in any particular between it and any other signed copy. This agreement constitutes a merger of all proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to the subject matter and provisions hereof, and many be altered, amended or modified only in writing signed by Customer and a representative of Sinclair authorized to sign this agreement. Customer acknowledges notice that this instrument may be executed on Sinclair's behalf only by one of its officers or managers and that none other has authority to consent or agree to any alteration, amendment, modification or limitation whatsoever of the terms of this agreement.

Station Lease.

This Indenture of Lease, made and entered into in duplicate this ..... day of ....., A. D. 19 .., by and between Sinclair Refining Company, a Maine corporation, authorized to transact business in the State of ....., having an office at ...., party of the first part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessor"), and .....; of ....., part ..... of the second part (hereinafter referred to as "Lessee," whether one or more, and when referred to by pronoun the masculine gender will be used);

Witnesseth:

1. Whereas, Lessor, in order to promote the sale of products manufactured and marketed by it, establishes uniform and attractive service stations combining characteristic exterior design, distinctive color scheme and unique advertising so as to be easily recognized by the motoring public as service stations where such products may be purchased; and

2. Whereas, said service stations are specifically constructed, equipped and advantageously located for the retail sale of gasoline, other petroleum products, tires, batteries, automobile accesesories and merchandise customarily sold to motorists, and contain sanitary rest rooms for the use and convenience of the motoring public; and

3. Whereas, for the purposes aforesaid and upon the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth, Lessee desires to lease from Lessor the service station hereinafter described;

4. Now, Therefore, in consideration of the premises, the rents herein reserved, and the covenants, conditions and agreements herein set forth, on the part of Lessee to be paid, maintained, kept and performed, Lessor does hereby demise and lease unto Lessee the following described premises, including other structures and facilities, if any, used for and constituting an oil and gasoline service station (hereinafter referred to collectively as "station"), located at ....., and situate in the City of ....., County of ....., State of ....., to wit:

together with the buildings, structures, improvements, pumps, tanks, appliances, furniture, tools, and other personal property located thereon, as set forth in an inventory taken and signed by the parties hereto, marked "Exhibit A" and attached to and made a part of this lease to the same effect as though written out in full herein, including any additions thereto or substitutions thereof which may be made by Lessor from time to time; receipt of any substituted or added equipment shall be evidenced by Lessor's Receipt Form 995 "Equipment and Materials Receipt," and said receipt when signed by Lessee shall become a part of this lease with the same force and effect as though embodied herein; provided, however, that any equipment heretofore or hereafter delivered by Lessor to Lessee, whether or not evidenced by said receipt, shall be subject to the terms and conditions of this lease. It is understood and agreed that Lessee's act of accepting such equipment and signing said receipt shall be construed to be an acknowledgment by Lessee that the equipment described in said receipt was in good and serviceable condition at the time of its delivery to Lessee.

5. To Have And To Hold the above demised and leased station, and all rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, unto Lessee for and during the following term:

If Lessor holds the station by virtue of an underlying lease, it is agreed that under no circumstances shall this instrument be deemed a transfer to Lessee of the entire unexpired term of such underlying lease so as to constitute an assignment thereof, and accordingly, in such event, a portion of the term of such underlying lease is hereby reserved to Lessor and the above stated term of this lease is hereby qualified to the extent that the term hereof shall in no event extend beyond the day preceding the last day of the term of such underlying lease or of any extension or renewal thereof, if same shall be extended or renewed by Lessor; provided, however, that Lessor shall not be obligated to extend or renew such underlying lease or the term thereof, pursuant to any right contained therein or otherwise, in order that this lease may continue in effect. No previous notice or refund of rentals shall be required in the event of termination or cancellation of this lease for breach or default as hereinafter provided.

4052B 6. Lessee shall yield and pay to Lessor as rental for said station for and during said term the following sums:

All rentals shall be payable in lawful money of the United States at the office of Lessor hereinabove stated, or at such other place as Lessor may designate from time to time.

7. If the amount of rental payable hereunder is dependent upon or is to be computed on the volume of business conducted at said station, Lessee covenants and agrees to promote diligently the sale of gasoline, other petroleum products, tires, batteries, accessories and merchandise, and to keep the station open for business and properly illuminated during at least those hours per day and days per month when competing service stations in the same general community as said station are open for business.

8. Lessee agrees that he will assert and maintain his right of entry and possession hereunder as against third persons and excuses Lessor from all duty and liability with respect thereto. Lessee covenants and agrees to use and occupy the station in a careful, safe and proper manner; not to permit or suffer any waste thereon or thereof or any nuisance thereon or thereabout; and Lessee further agrees that without Lessor's prior written consent no part of said station shall be used for the major repair, maintenance or painting of automobiles, the overhauling of motors, body or fender repairing or refinishing, tire recapping or welding, or for any activity which cannot be conducted safely in the presence of petroleum vapors or volatile petroleum products.

9. Lessee covenants and agrees at his own cost to keep the driveways, approaches and sidewalks adjacent to the station free from snow and ice; to maintain in good condition and repair the station, driveway, approaches and sidewalks adjacent thereto, rest rooms, structures, equipment, appliances, plumbing and other facilities, as well as any personal property hereby leased to Lessee; and not to encumber or remove the same, or do or suffer to be done anything whereby the same or any part thereof may be seized, taken on execution, attached, destroyed or injured, or by which the right of Lessor therein or the title thereto may in any way be altered, impaired or prejudiced; it being expressly agreed that Lessee acquires hereunder no interest in any buildings, structures, equipment, appliances or other property now on said station or which may hereafter be placed thereon by Lessor, except the right to use the same as in this lease provided. Lessee further agrees that without Lessor's prior consent, no sign, fixture or device shall be affixed permanently or in such manner as to cause damage to the station. Lessee agrees not to use said station, or any part thereof, whether or not adapted therefor, as living quarters or for dwelling purposes unless Lessor shall consent thereto by a separate written instrument setting forth the terms for such use.

10. The health, safety and expectation of the motoring public demand that the rest rooms and toilets at the station shall be kept at all times in a clean, neat and sanitary condition, and Lessee covenants and agrees that the minimum standard therefor shall be such as shall comply with all applicable public health ordinances, laws, rules and regulations governing such facilities; and if there be no such public ordinances, then nevertheless the rest rooms and toilets shall at all times be kept in such clean and sanitary condition that the same shall be safe for use from a public hygiene standpoint as determined from time to time or at any time by an inspection thereof conducted by any appropriate public health board, officer, inspector, doctor of medicine, registered nurse or other hygienic expert.

11. Lessee shall be liable for and agrees to pay when due all license, permit, and inspection fees and occupation and license taxes assessed or charged on or against the station or Lessee's use or occupancy thereof; also all compensation, fees, rents, and charges assessed and imposed by municipalities for the installation, use or maintenance of approaches or driveways serving the station, and all water, sewage and waste disposal, rubbish and garbage disposal, gas, telephone, and electric light and power charges assessed or charged on or against the station or Lessee's use or occupancy thereof, including all taxes levied and assessed on Lessee's property located thereon during the term hereof.

12. Lessee shall comply with and obey all laws, ordinances, rules, regulations, orders, directives and requirements, whether regarded as valid or invalid, of the Federal, State, City, Village, or other governmental subdivision in which said station is located and of any and all of their agencies, bureaus and departments, to the extent that the same affect Lessee's use, occupancy or operation of the station.

13. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any injury to, including death of, persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee, or employees of either of the parties hereto) and any loss of or damage to property (whether the same be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons) caused by, growing out of, or happening in connection with, Lessee's use and occupancy of the station or any equipment or appliances located or to be located thereon, or by reason of any like or different casualty. In like manner and to the same extent set forth in the preceding sentence Lessee agrees to exonerate and save harmless Lessor even though the claim, loss or casualty is attributable to the negligence of Lessor.

14. Lessee, for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns, hereby releases, relinquishes and discharges, and agrees to indemnify, protect and save harmless, Lessor, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all claims, demands and liability for any injury to, including death of, persons (whether they be third persons, Lessee, or employees of either of the parties hereto) and any loss of or damage to property (whether the same be that of either of the parties hereto or of third persons) by reason of any leakage, fire or explosion of or from any leased equipment or any part thereof, or of any gasoline, oils, or other petroleum products in or about or contained in the same, or by reason of any defects in the construction or installation of such equipment, or by reason of the use or operation of such equipment, or by reason of the placing, erection, falling, or dislocation of such equipment or any part thereof, or by reason of any like or different casualty. In like manner and to the same extent set forth in the preceding sentence Lessee agrees to exonerate and save harmless Lessor even though the claim, loss or casualty is attributable to the negligence of Lessor.

15. Lessee shall furnish, install and display continuously on the exterior of the station at a point visible and accessible to the public, a legible sign showing that Lessee is occupying said station under a lease and is the sole owner of the business.

4053 16. If Lessee shall default in the performance of any covenant contained in this lease, or if Lessee shall violate any agreements, covenants, conditions and obligations of this lease upon him imposed, or if Lessee shall fail to comply with and obey any of the laws, ordinances, rules, regulations, orders, directives and requirements, whether regarded as valid or invalid, of the Federal, State, City, Village, or other governmental subdivision in which said station is located or of any and all of their agencies, bureaus and departments, as by this lease required, or if Lessee shall become bankrupt, or become insolvent in the opinion of Lessor, or shall make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, Lessor in any event shall have the right to declare this lease terminated, and shall have the further right, without notice and without recourse to any legal proceeding to enter upon the station and repossess the same, including all property embraced within this lease, and Lessor shall have a first lien upon all merchandise and other property of Lessee located upon the station to secure the payment of rent and all charges hereunder and the full performance by Lessee of all obligations to Lessor; and Lessor shall further have all the rights and remedies provided by law for the recovery of rent and possession. It is understood that the failure or omission of Lessor to enforce any term, covenant or condition of this lease or the acceptance of rent by Lessor after default or the happening of any of the above contingencies shall not be construed as a waiver of the rights of Lessor herein specified. If Lessee is an individual and if he shall die during the term of this lease or any extension thereof, this lease shall automatically terminate.

17. Upon the termination of this lease by lapse of time or otherwise, Lessee agrees to return to Lessor the station, together with all other property embraced within this lease, and any other property of Lessor located thereat, in their condition when received by Lessee, reasonable wear and tear incident to proper use thereof excepted. In the event Lessee shall for any reason be unable to return any of said property, he agrees to replace the same with similar property of like value, or to pay Lessor the market price therefor.

18. If there is a safe or chest included in the equipment leased hereunder, Lessee agrees to maintain said safe or chest in good and usable condition throughout the term hereof, and to bear the expense of any repairs thereon or replacement thereof; it being understood and agreed that Lessee shall assume any losses from robbery, burglary or larceny of the contents thereof, and of any property embraced within this lease.

19. Lessor reserves the right of entry of its representatives, agents, and employees for the purpose of examination and inspection of the station and any property of Lessor located thereon.

20. Lessee shall make no alterations or changes in or additions to any buildings, structures or improvements at the station without first procuring the written consent of Lessor so to do. Any work so authorized by Lessor shall be at the sole cost and expense of Lessee, and any such alterations, changes or additions so made by Lessee shall forthwith become the property of Lessor, and Lessee shall have no claim of any kind or character therefor.

21. This lease is personal to Lessee and shall not be assigned in whole or in part, and the station or any part thereof shall not be sublet, nor shall any rights or privileges herein granted Lessee be sold, transferred or assigned without the written consent of Lessor first obtained.

22. If during the term of this lease proceedings are instituted for the condemnation of the station or any part thereof, or if Lessor shall dispose of said station or any part thereof or its interest therein, either voluntarily or involuntarily, in order that the station may be devoted wholly or partially to any public use, this lease shall, at the option of Lessor and upon written notice to Lessee, forthwith finally cease and terminate, and Lessee shall not be entitled to any damage award or purchase price, or any part of either, which may be paid on account of such condemnation or sale.

23. Any prior agreement under which the Lessor leased the above described station or equipment to the Lessee is hereby terminated on and as of the day preceding the commencement of the term hereof, except as to any liability which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said agreement prior to such effective cancellation date.

24. If the above described station is held by Lessor under lease, Lessor shall have the right to exercise any and all termination rights reserved to it under such underlying lease, and if such underlying lease shall be terminated for any cause or in any manner at any time prior to the expiration of the term herein provided, this lease, at the same time, shall expire and terminate without previous notice to Lessee, and Lessor shall not be liable to Lessee in damages or otherwise on account of such prior termination. This lease shall be subject to all conditions and restrictions affecting the station, including those which may be of record or in the underlying lease, if any, and also including building, building line, and zoning restrictions. If Lessee shall abandon, desert or vacate the station during the term of this lease, or during any extension or renewal period, for a period of more than two (2) calendar days, Lessor may terminate this lease and repossess the station. If the operation of a service station on said premises shall be prohibited or restricted during the term hereof by statute, ordinance, order of court or other governmental authority, and not because of any fault or neglect of Lessee, this lease shall be subject to termination at the option of either party.

25. All notices given under this instrument shall be in writing, and may be given either in the statutory method, if any, in the State where the station is located or by depositing the notice in the United States registered mail, postage prepaid, enclosed in an envelope addressed to the party to be notified at such party's address as shown in this instrument or at any other known address of Lessee, and the date upon which such notice is so mailed shall be treated as the date of service. If there be more than one Lessee, notice to one shall constitute notice to all. In addition, any notice given by Lessor to Lessee shall be valid if served upon Lessee in person or delivered to or left at the station. Lessee agrees to give to Lessor written notice within fifteen (15) days after the end of each quarter-annual period during the existence of this lease of each and every claim or demand that Lessee has against Lessor at the end of such period; and it is expressly agreed that Lessee's failure so to notify Lessor of any such claims or demands (if any there be) shall constitute and be a waiver and release by Lessee of such claims or demands, other than claims and demands enforceable by penal action, that Lessee has against Lessor up to and at the end of such period.

26. This lease constitutes a merger of all proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to the subject matter and provisions hereof, and may be altered, amended or modified only in writing signed by a representative of Lessor authorized to sign this instrument and by Lessee. Lessee acknowledges notice that this instrument may be executed on Lessor's behalf only by one of its officers or managers and that none other has authority to authorize any action for which Lessor's consent is required hereunder, or to consent or agree to any alteration, amendment, modification or limitation whatsoever of the terms of this lease. This lease shall not be binding upon Lessor until executed on its behalf notwithstanding any delivery of possession to, or the acceptance of rent from, Lessee.

Sinclair Refining Company

Refined Oil Sales Agreement—Dealer
(Tank Wagon)

This Agreement, made and entered into this ..... day of ....., 19....., by and between Sinclair Refining Company (a Maine corporation), having an office at the address hereinafter specified, as Seller, and of ....., as Dealer;

Witnesseth, That, for the considerations herein contained, Seller hereby agrees to, and hereby does, sell to Dealer, and Dealer hereby agrees to, and hereby does, buy from Seller, during each yearly period this agreement is in effect, not less than ..... gallons nor more than ..... gallons, in the aggregate, of

Prices: For each delivery of any above product Dealer shall pay Seller's official established tank wagon price per gallon to dealers (without any discount or deduction therefrom) for deliveries of such product prevailing at the time and for the place of each such delivery, as scheduled at the bulk plant from which delivery is made. Dealer agrees that Seller shall have the right to change said price from time to time without notice to Dealer except as scheduled at said bulk plant or as shown in Seller's invoices.

Place and Method of Delivery: The gasoline purchased hereunder shall be delivered in fairly even monthly quantities by tank wagons or transport trucks to Dealer's place or places of business at Duration of Agreement: This agreement shall continue in effect for one year beginning the ..... day of ...., 19....., Unless terminated as hereinafter provided, before or at the expiration of such initial period, this agreement shall continue in full force and effect as to all its terms, provisions and conditions from year to year, subject to cancellation by either party as herein specified.

Terms: Net Cash (without discount) on delivery. If Seller shall extend credit to Dealer, the right to withdraw credit at any time is reserved by the Seller. Payments shall be made by Dealer in lawful money of the United States, or its equivalent, and shall be made to Seller's branch manager or marketer at ..... or to Seller's office at .....

ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS.

1. In addition to the prices herein provided, Dealer shall pay Seller amounts equivalent to any and all taxes, excises, duties, charges and inspection and other fees, and any and all increases therein, which are now or may hereafter be imposed, directly or indirectly, by any domestic or foreign governmental authority or agency on, against, in respect of or measured by the products covered by this agreement, or any material contained in such products, or the importation, exportation, production, manufacture, sale, transportation, delivery or other handling of such products or material or any feature thereof or of this agreement. The amounts of any such taxes, excises, duties, charges or inspection and other fees shall be added to th prices herein provided when Seller either pays or becomes liable for the payment of any such taxes, excises, duties, charges or inspection and other fees.

4056 2. Failure or refusal by Dealer to comply with requirements, which Seller may impose hereunder as to payments, shall entitle Seller to suspend deliveries pending such failure or refusal, or to terminate this agreement forthwith. The suspension of deliveries or termination of this agreement under any of the conditions herein set forth shall not in any wise prepudice Seller's claim for damages.

3. It is expressly understood and agreed that Seller shall not be obliged hereunder to sell or deliver Sinclair Power-X Gasoline or Sinclair U. S. Motor Specifications Gasoline or Sinclair Pennant Gasoline unless specificially included above and until Seller has a sufficient supply thereof at the bulk plant from which deliveries are made to the Dealer.

4. In the event that Sinclair U. S. Motor Specifications Gasoline or Sinclair Pennant Gasoline is covered by this agreement, Seller shall have the right and privilege of discontinuing deliveries thereof at any time and from time to time without notice to Dealer; and in the event of any such discontinuance, Seller shall have the right and privilege of delivering hereunder, in lieu of the product so discontinued, any other Sinclair branded gasoline of approximately the same specifications as the one discontinued, and in such event the applicable terms and conditions relating to the product discontinued, including the price, shall apply with equal force and effect to the Sinclair branded gasoline so substituted, it being expressly agreed that Seller shall not be required to substitute any other branded gasoline.

5. In the event that Sinclair Power-X Gasoline is covered by this agreement and if Seller should at any time during the life of this agreement discontinue the marketing of Sinclair Power-X Gasoline in Dealer's territory and should market in such territory some other premium gasoline in place thereof, Seller shall have the right and privilege thereafter of delivering such other premium gasoline instead of Sinclair Power-X Gasoline.

6. This agreement may be cancelled and terminated by either party at the expiration of the initial period herein specified, or at the end of any yearly period thereafter, upon thirty (30) days' previous written notice to the other party.

7. Dealer shall not change or alter by any means whatsoever the nature, quality, or appearance of any of the products purchased and sold hereunder. Any violation of this provision by Dealer shall give Seller the right to suspend immediately further deliveries hereunder of such products or to terminate this agreement. Seller shall have the right from time to time during the life of this agreement to change, alter, or amend any of the trade names or brands under which products covered by this agreement are now or may hereafter be marketed. Seller agrees that the commodity sold hereunder shall be uniform in quality and at all times up to its standards.

8. All orders hereunder will be filled with reasonable promptness, and it is agreed that Seller shall not be obliged to furnish any products hereunder nor be liable for loss or damage for failure or delay in making deliveries when such failure or delay arises from (a) any failure of Seller's supply of containers therefor at any point from which Seller customarily would make deliveries; or (b) interruption of any means of transportation; or (c) acts of God, strikes, lockouts, differences among or with its workmen, fires, accidents, civil commotion, war conditions in this or any foreign country, mechanical breakdowns in its manufactories or of its supplying pipe lines, acts of foreign or domestic Governmental authority, including, but not limited to, any system of priority controls, allocations or requisitions; or (d) any seizure or appropriation of any of Seller's property or of the management or operation thereof; or (e) any other cause reasonably beyond Seller's control, whether or not such cause shall be similar to any of the specifications of excuse hereinbefore stated.

9. The sale of any motor fuel which may contain either an "Ethyl" or any other anti-knock compound under this agreement is subject to (a) all the provisions contained in the agreements under which Seller is licensed to manufacture and sell motor fuel containing said compounds and (b) compliance by Dealer with all such provisions, rules, regulations and orders now in existence or which may hereafter be issued by the licensor or any governmental authority having jurisdiction insofar as the same apply to motor fuel purchased by Dealer from Seller. If Dealer shall fail or refuse to comply therewith, Seller may either suspend deliveries of such motor fuel or terminate this agreement in respect to such motor fuel. It is expressly agreed that such gasoline containing an "Ethyl" or other anti-knock compound is sold for use as a motor fuel only and is not to be used or resold for cleaning purposes under any circumstances.

10. Any notice to be given hereunder shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been duly given if and when deposited in the United States mail, properly stamped and addressed to the party for whom intended at the address of such party herein specified, or when delivered personally to such party at such address. Dealer agrees to give to Seller written notice within fifteen days after the end of each quarter-annual period during the existence of this agreement of each and every claim or demand that Dealer has against Seller at the end of such period; and it is expressly agreed that Dealers' failure so to notify Seller of any such claims or demands (if any there be) shall constitute and be a waiver and release by Dealer of such claims or demands, other than claims and demands enforceable by penal action, that Dealer has against Seller up to and at the end of such period.

11. Any sales contract or agreement, covering tank wagon or transport truck deliveries of gasoline to the Dealer's place or places of business above specified, heretofore entered into between the parties hereto is hereby cancelled and terminated on and as of the effective date hereof, except as to any liability or obligations which may or shall have accrued under and by virtue of any said contract prior to such effective cancellation date.

12. Seller hereby authorizes Dealer to use the trademarks and the brand names of Seller solely on and in connection with the products purchased from and so identified by Seller, the same to be used during such time only as this agreement shall be in effect. If Seller shall lend to Dealer or permit Dealer to use any sign or device of any kind bearing Seller's name or any trade-mark, brand name, symbol or slogan, to be used for the purpose of identifying or advertising Seller's products, Dealer agrees upon demand to return such sign or device to Seller and to discontinue the use of any word, name, phrase or thing which Dealer is hereby authorized to use. Dealer is permitted to use Seller's said name, trade-marks, brand names, signs devices, symbols and slogans only upon the following conditions: (a) that they will be used in such way only as Seller may authorized; (b) that they will not be used in the identifying or advertising of any products except those supplied by Seller; (c) that Dealer will not permit anyone else to exercise or use any of the rights, privileges or things granted or lent to Dealer; (d) that Dealer will not claim any right, title or interest in or to Seller's name, trade-marks, brand names, signs, devices, symbols and slogans; and (e) that Dealer will never directly or indirectly deny or assail or assist in denying or assailing the sole and exclusive ownership of Seller in and to the same. Failure or refusal by Dealer to comply with the terms and conditions set forth herein shall entitle Seller to terminate forthwith the within agreement; but such termination shall not in anywise prejudice Seller's claim for damages.

13. This agreement shall not be assigned by Dealer in whole or in part; constitutes a merger of all proposals, negotiations and representations with reference to the subject matter and provisions hereof; and may be altered, amended or modified only in writing signed by Dealer and by a representative of Seller authorized to sign this agreement. Dealer acknowledges notice that this agreement may be executed on Seller's behalf only by one of its officers, managers, or chief clerks, and that none other has authority to consent or agree to any alteration, amendment, modification or limitation whatsoever of the terms of this agreement.

We have delivered Credit Identification Cards to certain motorists, to be used by them for credit identification purposes. Such motorists may wish to use such cards in connection with their purchases on credit at service stations of the following:

(1) Sinclair Petroleum Products and service jobs (which involve the sale or use of Sinclair Petroleum Products) performed at the ordinary service station, including chassis lubrication (in whole or in part) and car washing; and

(2) New Goodyear passenger car size tires, batteries and other automotive accessories (except radios and heaters), Provided tires are mounted and batteries and other accessories are attached to the motor vehicle at the time of purchase.

Credit Identification Cards are serially numbered and bear an expiration date. Specimens of these cards have been or will be furnished to you from time to time.

We understand that you desire to make credit sales of the above mentioned petroleum products, service and accessories to those holding such Credit Identification Cards who may apply to your station for the same. We are willing to accept assignment of the accounts arising from such credit sales under the following terms and conditions:

All sales of the above products, services and accessories shall be made for your own account. In making such sales you shall use such forms of delivery tickets, invoices, reports and other forms as we may supply you for use. Credit Delivery Tickets covering sales to holders of Credit Identification Cards must, in each case, describe the services performed for which a charge is made and show the Kinds of Merchandise Sold, the Quantities Sold, the Prices At Which Sold and the Total Value of Each Purchase. Credit Delivery Tickets not prepared in conformity with the foregoing will be rejected by the Company. We do not assume any liability and shall not be liable for any tax for which you are liable to any governmental authority. If any applicable tax is not included in or added to the price, you will be in the position of absorbing such tax. In any event, you will have to account to the proper governmental authority for any applicable tax. You shall assume and pay, and hold us free of, any and all taxes that are now or may hereafter be imposed on the products or services, or upon the sale of furnishing thereof.

Subject to the terms and conditions established by the Company from time to time, we will accept assignment by you of the accounts arising from such credit sales, and in consideration for the assignment of each such account, we will allow you credit for the amount thereof on your purchases from us.

As to such accounts you shall keep such records and make such reports to us as we may from time to time specify and require with the privilege to us to examine or have examined such records when we may wish to do so.

This proposal is submitted in duplicate, and if the terms and provisions thereof are acceptable to you, you will please so indicate by signing the same at the place indicated hereon, and when executed on our part it will constitute a contract between us, with the understanding that either of us may terminate it at any time with or without cause. A copy of the executed contract will be forwarded to you. Any contract or agreement now in effect with you covering credit sales by you to the holders of Credit Identification Cards is hereby cancelled and terminated on and as of the date hereof, except as to any liability that may have accrued prior to such date.

Agreement of Merger.

This Agreement of Merger, dated as of the 7th day of December, 1955, made by and between Sinclair Refining Company, a Maine corporation, having its principal business office at 600 Fifth Avenue, New York 20, New Work, hereinafter referred to as "Sinclair" and Sherwood Brothers Incorporated, a Maryland corporation, having its principal office at 10 Light Street, Baltimore 3, Maryland, hereinafter referred to as "Sherwood", witnesseth that:

Whereas, Sinclair and Sherwood desire to merge Sherwood into Sinclair;

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the covenants herein contained, Sinclair and Sherwood agree as follows:

1. Sherwood, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maryland and being a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sinclair, shall be merged into Sinclair, the parent corporation, effective at the close of business on December 31, 1955, in accordance with the laws of the State of Maine and of the State of Maryland and pursuant to the terms and conditions of this Agreement of Merger.

2. Sinclair, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Maine, shall be the corporation to survive the merger and shall continue to bear the name "Sinclair Refining Company".

3. Sinclair was originally incorporated under the general laws of the State of Maine on October 19, 1908 under the name of "The Cudahy Refining Company", said name having been changed to Sinclair Refining Company by a certificate of amendment filed in the office of the Secretary of State of said state on January 25, 1917. Sinclair qualified to do business in the State of Maryland on January 3, 1920 and is so qualified now.

Sherwood was incorporated under the laws of the State of Maryland on December 27, 1921.

4. No amendments to the certificate of organization, as heretofore amended, of Sinclair, the surviving corporation, are to be effected as a part of or by reason of the merger accomplished pursuant to this agreement.

5. The total number of shares of stock of all classes which Sinclair has authority to issue is 700,000, all being of the same class, having a par value of $100 each and an aggregate par value of $70,000,000.

The total number of shares of stock of all classes which Sherwood has authority to issue is 10,000. Such stock is divided into two classes, Class A common stock and Class B common stock.

4061 The number and par value of the shares of each class is 5,000 and $100 each. The aggregate par value of all such shares of all classes is $1,000,000.

6. On December 31, 1955, the effective date of the merger accomplished pursuant to this agreement, all of the shares of stock of all classes of Sherwood shall be cancelled and none of such shares shall be converted into shares of stick of Sinclair.

7. The principal offices in the State of Maryland of Sinclair and Sherwood are each located in the City of Baltimore.

Sherwood owns property within the State of Maryland, the title to which could be affected by the recording of an instrument among the Land Records of Baltimore City and the following counties:

Allegany	Cecil	Montgomery
Anne Arundel	Dorchester	Prince Georges
Baltimore	Frederick	Queen Annes
Calvert	Garrett	St. Marys
Caroline	Harford	Talbot
Carroll	Howard	Washington
Charles	Kent	Wicomico
		Worcester.

8. The location of the principal office of Sinclair, the surviving corporation, in the State of Maine is 57 Exchange Street, Portland, Maine.

The Corporation Trust Incorporated, 10 Light Street, Baltimore, Maryland, is the resident agent of Sinclair in the State of Maryland, service of process upon which shall bind Sinclair in any action, suit or proceeding pending or thereafter instituted or filed against Sinclair under the provisions of the Subtitle designated "Consolidation, Merger and other Transfers of Property" of Article 23 of the Annotated Code of Maryland.

9. This agreement was duly advised and approved by the Board of Directors of Sherwood in the manner and by the vote required by the above Subtitle designated "Consolidation, Merger and other Transfers of Property."

10. This merger, which is to be effected in accordance with the laws of the State of Maine and of the State of Maryland, was duly advised, authorized and approved by the Board of Directors and stockholders of Sinclair in the manner and by the vote required by the certificate of organization, as heretofore amended, of Sinclair and by the laws of the State of Maine.

11. Upon the merger of Sherwood into Sinclair as provided by this agreement, the separate existence of Sherwood shall cease; all property, rights, privileges and franchises of whatsoever nature and description of Sherwood, including the name of Sherwood, shall be transferred to, vested in and devolved upon Sinclair without further act or deed; Sinclair shall be liable for all the debts and obligations of Sherwood and any claim existing or action 4062 or proceeding pending by or against Sherwood may be prosecuted to judgment or decree as if the merger had not taken place, or Sinclair upon its motion or the motion of any party to such action or proceeding, may be substituted as a party in place of Sherwood.

In Witness Whereof, Sinclair and Sherwood have caused this Agreement of Merger to be signed and acknowledged in their respective names and on behalf of their respective corporations by their respective presidents or vice presidents, and the respective corporate seals to be affixed and attested by their respective secretaries or assistant secretaries, all as of the day and year first above written.

4138 RESPONDENT'S EXHIBIT NO. A1.

Atlantic

This Lease, entered into as of the 1st day of Oct., 1954, by and between The Atlantic Refining Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, hereinafter called "Lessor" and John Chambers hereinafter called "Lessee":

Witnesseth:

1—In consideration of Lessee's payment of rental and performance of the obligations herein set forth, Lessor hereby leases to Lessee that certain parcel of land at Chester Pike and Clifton Avenue in Sharon Hill, County of Delaware, State of Pennsylvania, more particularly described as follows:

All That Certain piece or parcel of land Situate in the Borough of Sharon Hill, County of Delaware, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of the Northwesterly side of Chester Pike and the Southwesterly side of Clifton Avenue; thence (1) Southwestwardly along said Chester Pike 156 feet more or less to a point; thence (2) Northwestwardly along Florence Avenue 106 feet more or less to a point; thence (3) Northeastwardly 160 feet more or less to a point; thence (4) Southeastwardly along Clifton Avenue 107 feet more or less to the point and place of beginning.

Together with all buildings, improvements and appurtenances situated thereon, as well as all Lessor owned equipment and apparatus installed or to be installed thereon, all hereinafter called "leased premises".

2—The term of this lease shall begin on the 1st day of October, 1954, and end on the 31st day of December, 1954, subject, however, in the event such term is longer than one year, to termination by Lessee at any annual anniversary date by giving at least sixty days advance written notice to Lessor.

3—The sole purpose and use of the leased premises shall be the lawful, diligent and businesslike operation of a first-class automotive service station retailing petroleum products and TBA merchandise normally handled at competitive service station outlets. Recognizing that compliance with such authorized purpose and use is essential for the accomplishment of Lessor's desire to obtain a fair rental consistent with the reasonable value of the service station business potential of the leased premises, Lessee agrees that he will use the leased premises only for the purpose and in the manner above designated.

4—Lessee shall pay rental at the rate of one and one-half cents (1½¢) per gallon on each gallon of gasoline or motor fuel delivered to the leased premises during the continuance of this lease; provided, however, that the minimum rental payable during each calendar month shall be Two Hundred Seventy-Five Dollars ($275.00), such minimum rental to be payable on a pro rata basis for any portion of a calendar month during which this lease is in effect; and provided further, that the maximum rental payable for each complete calendar quarter during which this lease remains in effect and ending on the last days of March, June, September and December shall be respectively $....., $....., $..... and $1200.00. Rental shall become due at the time gasoline or motor fuel is delivered to the leased premises and shall be paid not later than twelve (12) hours thereafter. The minimum monthly rental, when applicable, shall be payable on or before the last day of each calendar month. Lessee shall maintain on a current basis accurate records of all gasoline or motor fuel delivered to the leased premises, and Lessor shall have the right to audit such records at all reasonable times to verify rentals payable hereunder.

5—Lessee shall pay, when due, all charges for telephone, water, gas, electricity, heating, sewage disposal and cesspool cleaning resulting from Lessee's occupancy of the leased premises, as well as all privilege, license, and other governmental charge levied against Lessee or against the leased premises by reason of the conduct of Lessee's business thereon. Lessor shall pay all other taxes, assessments, and governmental charges levied or assessed upon the leased premises.

6—Should Lessee abandon the leased premises, Lessor shall have the right to terminate this lease. Closing of the leased premises for business for a period of seventy-two (72) successive hours shall be considered as abandonment.

7—Lessee shall use the leased premises with due and reasonable care and shall maintain the same, as well as the adjacent sidewalks, in a clean, orderly, sanitary and safe condition. On termination of the lease, Lessee shall deliver the leased premises to Lessor in the same condition in which Lessee is obligated to use and maintain the same hereunder, reasonable wear and tear and damage due to matters beyond the control of Lessee excepted.

Because of the special need for proper care of porcelain enamel, Lessee agrees that if the service station building is faced with porcelain enamel, Lessee will comply with such cleaning procedures and techniques applicable thereto as Lessor may establish from time to time.

Without Lessor's prior written consent, which will not be unreasonably withheld, Lessee shall not make any additions, alterations, or improvements to the leased premises nor place, alter, remove, deface, or obliterate any signs, trade marks or color arrangements appearing thereon.

8—Lessee shall make all repairs and replacements to the leased premises; provided however, that if Lessee gives prompt notice to Lessor of the need thereof, the responsibility shall then pass to the Lessor to make such necessary repairs and replacements as are specified, and provided further, that if in such event the specified repairs and replacements are necessitated by the wilful misconduct or negligence of Lessee, his agents or employees, the cost thereof shall be considered as additional rent payable on the last day of the calendar month next succeeding the month during which such cost is incurred.

9—Should a substantial portion of the leased premises be damaged by the negligence or wilful misconduct of Lessee, his agents or employees, or any cause beyond the reasonable control of Lessor, Lessor, without prejudice to any claim for damages it might have, shall have the right to terminate this lease without liability; provided, however, that such termination right can only be exercised during a period of not more than ten (10) days following the date Lessor acquired knowledge of such damages and the cause thereof.

10—Lessee shall exercise and be responsible for exclusive control of the leased premises.

11—Should Lessee fail to make payment of any rentals when due and fail to remedy such default within five (5) days thereafter, Lessor can terminate this lease.

Should Lessee at any time fail to comply with any of his other obligations hereunder, excepting those provisions wherein Lessor is already given an express right to terminate the lease, and fail to remedy such default within fifteen (15) days after receipt of notice from Lessor specifying the default, Lessor can terminate the lease.

Whenever this lease shall terminate, Lessee hereby waives all right to any notice or demand to quit possession as prescribed by any statute then in force relating to summary process, and Lessor shall have the right to retake possession of the leased premises, together with products and merchandise located thereon, such products and merchandise to be accounted for in accordance with law and the respective rights of the parties at such time.

12—If Lessee dies, the lease shall terminate automatically. If Lessee becomes involved in any insolvency or bankruptcy proceeding, or executes an assignment for the benefit of creditors, Lessor shall have the right to terminate this lease.

13—This lease is personal, does not permit absentee operation, shall not be assigned by Lessee either voluntarily or by operation of law, and Lessee shall not sublet the whole or any part of the leased premises.

14—Subject to the terms and conditions of Lessor's credit card program, outlined by Lessor from time to time, Lessor will (1) accept from Lessee assignment of accounts which result from retail credit sales made by Lessee to holders of valid Atlantic credit cards or those of other companies coming under Atlantic's credit privilege program and (2) pay or credit Lessee the amount thereof. Either party may terminate this credit card arrangement by giving to the other not less than 48 hours' advance written notice without termination or cancellation of any other provisions of this lease.

15—A waiver of any breach hereunder shall not be deemed a continuing waiver, or a waiver of any subsequent breach whether of the same or of a different provision of this lease.

16—Lessor reserves the right to enter the premises at all reasonable times for the purpose of ascertaining Lessee's compliance with the agreements herein contained and for making necessary repairs and replacements.

17—This lease is subject to the terms and conditions of any existing lease or contract governing Lessor's rights to the leased premises. Lessee, in no event, shall have or claim any right of possession or occupation of said leased premises at variance with the terms or beyond the period of Lessor's right thereto.

As of the beginning of the term hereof any prior lease between the parties hereto affecting the leased premises shall be terminated.

18—Any notice from one party to the other shall be in writing and shall be deemed to have been given if sent by registered mail addressed to Lessor at 260 S. Broad Street, Philadelphia 1, Pennsylvania and to Lessee at the leased premises.

19—This lease contains the entire agreement between the parties and its execution has not been induced by any representation, understanding, or agreement of any kind other than those herein expressed. This lease cannot be amended except by written instrument duly executed by both parties.

In Witness Whereof, the parties have executed this lease as of the day and year first hereinabove written.

4212 Introduction

This afternoon we want to talk with you about one of the most important features of your Atlantic Franchise—the Tire, Battery and Accessory business. We in the business call it TBA. It's a term you'll want to know more about because TBA merchandise plays a vital part in your business success.

Two Dealer Operations

Probably the best way to show you the importance of TBA's effect on your station's profit is to examine some facts about Two Typical Dealer operations. We'll discuss the significance of these facts as we go along.

Let's call our dealers John and Bill. Remember that these names are fictional—but the facts and figures involved are typical of hundreds of real dealers whose records we've studied.

15,000 a Month

John and Bill both have modern service stations in similar neighborhoods and they both sell about 15,000 gallons of gasoline a month. Let's write this on the pad.

Pad

	John	Bill
Gallons Per Month	15,000	15,000

(See Pad Diagram)

Pad Work

Of course, these dealers sell many other things beside gasoline. We're not going to discuss them here be-4213 cause later your instructors will cover the sale of all products and services. But for our purpose here, let's put everything else these dealers sold in October in one pile. When we do, we see from our records that John enjoyed a gross profit on all business of $1157.00—and Bill's gross profit went to $1802.00.

(Pad Work Sample Attached)

Why the Difference?

The question is—Why? When two dealers having the same type facilities in similar neighborhoods sell the same amount of gasoline—why does one gross $645.00 more than the other?

Service Station Needs More Than Gasoline Sales

The answer lies in the sale of Other products and services in addition to gasoline. The Bible says "Man does not live by bread alone"—and believe me, a service station doesn't exist on the sale of gasoline alone. We have to have a balanced diet—in our business we call it "Balanced Selling."

Balanced Selling

Your instructor will cover the entire subject later, but here we're interested in how TBA helped earn $645.00 more profit for our dealer Bill. Let's put these figures down. In October, John sold $246.00 of TBA while Bill's gross sales were $740.00. Here's the profit story.

4214 Pad

(TBA Gross Profit)

TBA Gross

There's the picture—through aggressive selling Bill piled up $645.00 more gross profit in October than John—even though they both sold 15,000 gallons of gasoline! And TBA provided $121.00 of that increase—better than 18%!

TBA More Than 18% of Difference
Is TBA Worth Selling?

Is TBA worth selling?

(Get agreement from group)

Well, how did all this come about? Some of you no doubt remember the time when you couldn't even get a tire repaired in a service station—and stations selling batteries were unheard of.

Evolution in Marketing TBA

During the last two decades an evolution in the marketing of TBA products has taken place. As late as 1930 Gasoline and Motor Oil were about the only commodities carried by service stations. Motorists purchased their gasoline and oil from the service station and then shopped around for their other needs. Tires were purchased and repaired in tire shops; battery shops, hardware and electric stores filled other wants.

As the number of service stations increased, dealers began to realize that in order to stay in the business they must provide for additional motoring needs and offer one-stop service to their customers. Through the years the motorist came to rely more 4215 and more on the service station for all his motoring needs until today the motorist will not take the time to make more than one stop to get his car completely serviced down to the last detail. For this reason and to improve profit possibility, service stations must handle a complete T.B.A. line.

Gasoline and oil are still the fundamental products —they are to the service station what bread and sugar are to the grocer. However, neither the service station or the grocer will ever get very wealthy selling just staples. It is only after a substantial volume of TBA has been built up that the dealer begins to realize his full sales expectancy and makes the most of his opportunity in a highly profitable enterprise.

So, while gasoline and oil are the foundation of a service station business, the products that draw customers into the station, dealers cannot keep these customers coming back until they can fill all their other driving needs.

A service station today can realize all its potential profit only through balanced merchandising. That means, briefly, balancing all the motorist's needs against gasoline sales—and then selling those needs through complete service.

4216 (Note to Instructor Use more up-to-date figure—if available)

The trend in consumer buying of automobile tires and tubes is very definitely to oil company outlets. In 1929, 6/10 of 1% of the motorist's tire purchases were handled through service stations. In 1956, the figure has risen to 35%. It's expected that this replacement figure will reach over 40%.

TBA Is Big Business

3 Billion TBA

(To Instructor) Use more up-to-date figure—if available

Those figures mean business—big business—for you as a service station TBA dealer. In dollars and cents, the industry estimates that service stations will sell over 3 billion dollars worth of TBA this year. Think of it—250 million monthly—over 8 million daily—over $90.00 every time the clock ticks. While we're talking here this afternoon dealers like yourselves will sell over 1¼ million dollars worth of somebody's TBA!

TBA Your Business

Any wonder why we say TBA is big business? And it's Your business. Now your next question should be "How can I cut a slice of that melon for My Station?" Well, Atlantic is ready to answer that one—with one of the most complete and profitable TBA programs the industry has to offer.

Atlantic's TBA Associate

In order to provide the best possible TBA program, Atlantic is associated with the best TBA marketer, the (Name) Tire and Rubber Company.

4217 Advertising

Everybody knows (Name) because of its powerful, nation-wide advertising drives in newspapers, magazines, radio and TV. You probably couldn't find a community in the country where (Name)'s name isn't known and respected.

Public Confidence in Familiar Brand

Thousands of dealers all over the country display the (Name) sign in their windows and driveways. They're cashing in on the natural desire of the buying public to do business at a familiar place and to buy familiar merchandise. A customer has to have confidence in you and in your product before you can sell him anything. You get a lot of that confidence ready made when you carry (Name).

Public Acceptance

The buying public accepts Atlantic as a leader in the petroleum field and (Name) as a leader in TBA. That is a powerful combination which is one of the most valuable aspects of your Atlantic Franchise.

J. Q. Public and Rumors

But before we go any further, let's take a minute to clear up one important point. Most people—Mr. average John Public—know very little about the oil business and they're inclined to believe any of the rumors or stories that are circulated about it. One of those "tall tales" is the claim that service station dealers are forced by threat of lease cancellation to buy their TBA merchandise from whomever the supplying oil company specifies.

4218

You Are Free to Buy TBA of Any Kind
We Think the .....
the Best for You

Here are the facts: Atlantic offers you the (Name) TBA franchise because after exhaustive study and years of our own experience in the TBA business we sincerely believe it to be the best for you and the best for your customers.

Let me quote from a letter addressed to all Atlantic dealers in August, 1952 by Mr. D. T. Colley, Vice President and General Manager in Charge of Marketing of Atlantic.

Letter from Vice-President

"In the Spring of 1951, The Atlantic Refining Company presented to its dealers for their free acceptance or rejection a TBA sales program which long and intensive research had indicated would yield the greatest profit to you and would best serve the interest of the motoring public.

"I consider it our duty to recommend to you, those services and products which experience and honest research have proven best for you and your customers. However, when we originally adopted this program, I wrote to you and to our sales force stating that this was an elective program. I now re-4219 iterate—that this is Your program, instituted for Your benefit—Yours to accept or reject."

Why Best?

We've said the ..... Franchise is best for you. Why? We've already mentioned a few reasons briefly but let's take a closer look at some of the features that make the Fra. nise valuable.

Probably the best way to start is to find out what you men think. We realize that this matter of TBA still is rather strange to you but no doubt you have some opinion of your own on just what you'd expect to find in a good TBA program. Suppose you tell me some of these features you'd want and I'll write them on the pad.

What Would You Want

What features would you want in any TBA program you bought?

Tremendous research and development program.

Quality testing labs approve all products.

Road-test fleets check tire quality.

Most important—your customers believe in ..... quality.

Competitive Price

Competitive Price Structure
(Discuss)

Huge volume permits attractive dealer margins.

Tire and battery lines meet all ranges of price demand —from premium lines to mail-order house competition. You need not fear competition.

Volume discount policy lowers your cost as your sales increase.

4221 Complete Coverage

Complete Market Coverage
(Discuss)

A tire for every type of service. Passenger car—truck—farm—industrial—aircraft. Every size and design.

Distribute Illustrations of Tire & Battery Line (Available from Supplier)

Batteries—every size and price range passenger car, truck and industrial.

Accessories—one of the broadest lines in the business (Hold up and leaf through Accessory Catalog. Stress coverage of major items—oil filter cartridges, spark plugs, etc.)

Best of all, products are grouped in size and price ranges which enable you to obtain broadest popular coverage at minimum inventory investment.

Convenient

Convenient Supply

Wherever you go in U. S. you're Near a _____ supply point. One near Your station.

Convenient delivery service.

Stocks at nearby supply point enable you to invest in only fast-moving merchandise. Rely on supply point for less popular items. This speeds up turnover and increases net profit to you. We're going to visit one of these supply points this afternoon.

4222 Advertising

(Show sample Magazine or Newspaper Ad)

Advertising Support
(Discuss)

Nation-wide coverage—radio—TV—magazines—newspapers.

Millions of motorists are pre-sold on your TBA line before they enter your station. Makes job easier. More sales.

Even distant transient customers know and accept your TBA—through advertising. More transient sales.

Promotion

Stress the advantages of Atlantic 30-60-90 day terms and the 6 month plan.

Does ..... Fill the Bill?

Now let's go back to our original list of desirable features that you helped make up. Don't you agree that the ..... Franchise fulfills every requirement?

(Review list briefly)

That's why we've said ..... is the best for you and best for your customers.

Stock

But just having an excellent Franchise available isn't enough. Before the profits start to jingle in your cash register you must first get the stocks of merchandise into your station and then sell TBA to your customers. These are two mighty important steps so let's see how we can handle them. First, the problem of stocks. You might start asking yourselves

"How many tires should I carry?"

"What sizes?"

"What price range?"

"What kind of accessories—how many of each?"

4224 Complete Line Huge
Avoid Dead Merchandise
Rely on Advice from Experience
Talk Stock Over

As you can see by now, the complete TBA line includes literally thousands of different items—and it takes years of experience to learn how to buy wisely. You probably can imagine the dangers of making ill-advised purchases. A dealer who stocks his station with slow moving or "dead" merchandise soon finds his profits suffering. Don't let that happen to you. And it won't if you just take advantage of Atlantic's and ..... 's years of experience in TBA and the assistance they're ready to give. Each one of you will want to talk over your own TBA stock situation with the Atlantic and ..... representatives who will call on you. We can't solve individual problems here but we do want to give you some sound and basic principles of profitable TBA purchasing that will apply to all of you.

No Empty Wagon
(Write on Pad) (Discuss)

1. You can't do business from an empty wagon, must have sufficient stocks.
   —customers won't wait while you run to supplier for some popular item.

Diversify (Distribute and Discuss Bal. Stock Recommendations—from Supplier) (Discuss)

2. Keep stocks balanced—(diversify your capital to get broadest coverage of popular items).
   —The ..... Co. has planned assortments to fit your station—use them.

4225 Get "Deals" (Discuss)

3. Take advantage of "Deals"—("Dating Plans"—"Season Specials" when available. Special prices on these programs cut your costs and increase profits).

Buy "Packages" (Discuss)

4. Buy "Packages" or Assortments when recommended. Usually these carry a special price or incentive offer and are made up of popular, fast moving merchandise.

Avoid Unknown Brands (Discuss)

5. Beware of unknown brands—fly-by-night salesmen—dead stock doesn't earn money—it costs money.

Get Competent Advice (Discuss)

6. Seek competent advice—your Atlantic salesman—your ..... representative.

If You Don't Know Jewels—
Know Your Jeweler

Probably this last one is the most important. There's an advertising slogan somewhere that says "If you don't know jewels—know your jeweler." That's awfully sound advice and it's true of the TBA business. Atlantic and ..... are ready to help you build a profitable TBA business and the best step you can take is to let them work with you.

Let's Sell It

As we move along with our TBA program let's assume now that we have a well balanced stock of fast moving merchandise in our station and now we're ready for the pay-off. Let's sell it!

4226 Other Subjects

Later in your school other instructors will go into detail on the subjects of Display—Solicitation and Retail selling that are so important to your TBA program so we won't attempt a detailed discussion here. But again we'll help you lay down several fundamental rules that are essential to any successful retail TBA sales program.

Take Advantage of Identification
(Write on Pad) (Discuss)

1. Identification
   Use approved signs and decals.
   Customers recognize you as one-stop ..... dealer.
   Makes ..... acceptance work for you.
   Identify billheads, ads, stationery, service truck.

Display (Discuss)

2. Display
   Follow principles you'll learn in display course.
   Use TBA supplier's display aids where practicable but don't make your station look like a bargain basement.

Train (Discuss)

3. Train
   Your course includes "Training in a Service Station."
   Use what you learn. Train your men to know their products and to sell!

4227 Solicit (Distribute Spotting Cards, Door-openers, etc.) (Discuss)

4. Solicit
   Use prospect lists—direct mail—neighborhood calls and tire spotting.

Use TBA supplier's solicitation materials.
Use what you learn in your "Solicitation" course.

Advertise (Discuss)

5. Advertise
Course coming on "Dealer Advertising."
Use ..... 's free mat service.
Ask Atlantic salesman's aid in planning advertising.

Sell (Discuss)

6. Sell!
This is the one that counts—
Tomorrow you'll begin your work in Retail Selling—make the most of it!
Without sales know-how you just can't have a successful TBA program.

Follow-Up (Discuss)

7. Follow-Up
To insure customer satisfaction.
Be ready for repeat sales.
Look for sale of other items to the same customer.
Course coming in "Follow-Up System"—it's a powerful TBA selling tool.

4228 All Fits Together to Make

Successful Dealership

We probably could talk for the rest of the day about How to Sell TBA and get a lot out of it. But as I've pointed out nearly all the other subjects in this course are important to TBA sales—and you'll deal with each one individually during the program. I'd like you to notice particularly how each part of this program dovetails into all the other parts. And they all build a successful dealership. If you'll apply what you learn in these other subjects to TBA you just can't help being an outstanding TBA merchant. And that's where you'll find those Extra profits we talked about in the beginning.

TBA Movie

Now we're going to look at a TBA movie. You'll like it I'm sure and you'll find many of the points we've discussed are emphasized in the picture.

(Point out particular things to look for) (Show Firestone "TBA is Big Business" or Goodyear "We the Customer")

Review

That picture pretty well proves the points we've established ourselves. Before we move on let's briefly go over them again.

(Review 7 Selling Fundamentals briefly)—discuss in terms of movie.

4229 Catalog

How to Use

One of the most important tools we have to help us sell TBA is the dealer catalog. No one could possibly remember all the thousands of prices and specifications we have to deal with but we must know how to find the answers quickly in the catalog. These catalogs will be available to keep in your own station and you'll find them easy and simple to use after you've tried it a few times. Let's go through it briefly right now. (Distribute Dealer Catalogs)

Instruction

Proceed to instruct in each of the following:

a—use of index

b—how to find particular items

c—how to find prices
d—any important data peculiar to your supplier's catalog

Examples

Example—Premium tire for 1950 Plymouth—Original equipment replacement battery for 1948 Buick Series 60, etc.

Problems

(Give trainees several problems similar to those mentioned and have them continue to search the catalog until they use it properly)—collect catalogs.

4230 Tour

Now we're going to take you right into the TBA business so you'll get a first hand look at some of the things we've talked about this afternoon. We've arranged a visit to one of ..... 's nearby supply points and we think you'll enjoy seeing how the business operates.

Suggestion

(Take trainees to supply point). Introduce them to manager and if possible have manager accompany you on tour of store. Point out and briefly discuss the following:

New Tires (different types)
Recaps
Batteries
Major Accessories
Displays
Point of Sale Advertising
Any current campaign or promotion.

Long Term Dealer Lease

1. Upon the expiration of his current lease term, any Dealer who has operated his station during the preceding two years in conformance with the standard established by the "purpose and use" clause of Atlantic's revised lease form (Clause 3), shall be eligible for a three year lease. The three year lease shall provide an exclusive option on the Dealer's part to cancel on any annual anniversary date thereof by giving Atlantic at least sixty days advance written notice. The original specified rental shall remain the same during the entire three year period.
2. Any Dealer not eligible for a long term lease in accordance with the above may be eligible for a one year lease only if upon the expiration of any subsequent lease he shall have a record of having operated his station for two consecutive years without receiving any written warnings specifying a default in compliance with the "purpose and use" clause under the revised lease form and failing to remedy such default within fifteen days following receipt of the corresponding warning.

In those cases where it seems desirable from a business viewpoint to afford a dealer a longer period than the usual fifteen days, the longer period should be specified in the warning letter.

3. Any Dealer whose record of operation during a three year lease shall not involve any unremedied defaults of the type specified in the preceding paragraph shall be eligible for another three year lease.

4. The above shall not be construed as meaning that Dealers will, upon termination of current or future leases, become automatically entitled to a new lease of either one year or three years duration. The policy is intended to mean that if Atlantic in its own discretion decides to enter into another lease arrangement with the Dealer upon the expiration of current or future leases, then, in such event, the Dealer's new lease will be either a one year lease or a three year lease in accordance with the policy described above.

5. This Policy is subject to change at Atlantic's sole discretion. Any change will not, however, affect leases outstanding at such time.

Long Term Dealer Lease

....., 1953

Dear Sir:

Atlantic's basic policy with Atlantic Dealers can be summarized in four words—Completely Fair, Businesslike Treatment.

You know without being told that each Atlantic station which is well run helps all your fellow Dealers operating Atlantic stations. And we also know what the "dogs" do for us.

Atlantic is adopting a new lease policy which is intended to reward Dealers who have demonstrated their capacity to operate superior service stations with the security that goes with the possession of a longer lease.

The attached page summarizes the new policy, and an Atlantic representative will be available to discuss both it and our new Service Station Lease form with you prior to the expiration of the current annual term of your particular lease.

The object of the new plan is simply to encourage superior Dealer performance by rewarding it.

(Suggested form letter to be discussed with Dealers and sent contemporaneously with execution of each revised lease form)

....., 195....

(Same date as lease execution)

Atlantic welcomes you as the Lessee of one of its service stations.

We have leased to you a modern, functional physical plant at a location carefully selected to produce profitable business in volume.

You have agreed to undertake the lawful, diligent and business-like operation of a first-class service station.

How can you do it?

First, let us emphasize that it is your business. We can't do your thinking nor your work. Your success or failure will depend upon your own business judgment, skill, imagination and initiative.

Secondly, we want to summarize some of the well-established standards which have been proved by experience to be necessary for the businesslike operation of a first-class service station. They are:

1. Housekeeping — Clean, sanitary premises — inside and out.
2. Use and Upkeep—Careful use and upkeep of building and equipment in safe, good operating condition.

3. Display—Neat, orderly arrangement of merchandise and advertising in a manner reasonably calculated to attract and solicit the attention of the motoring public.
4. Illumination—Safe and adequate to attract customers during night operations.
5. Personnel—Sufficient manpower to give prompt service and allocated to handle peak operating hours. Clean uniforms, courteous, trained to sell, adequate knowledge of services to be rendered.

6. Hours of Operation—Uniform daily operating schedule based on buying habits of potential trade in the area.
7. Services—At least on a par with competition as to kinds of services rendered and efficiency of performance.
8. Adequate Inventory—Quality products and merchandise on hand to serve normal customer needs without delay.
9. Sales Promotion—Regular program for expanding sales, involving direct mail campaigns, personal solicitation, and advertising.
10. Prices—Competitive, quality and service considered.
11. Accounting—Maintenance on current basis of records adequate to reflect financial status and return from various phases of your business.

We wish you success. And remember that each station which is well run helps all your fellow dealers operating Atlantic service stations.

Long Term Dealer Lease

Proposed Reporting Procedure

A. General—In every case where a service station lease is terminated, or where upon expiration of the lease we do not execute a new lease with the same dealer, the District will make a written report to the Region of the principal reason or reasons for termination or failure to continue the lease relationship. Data supporting the reasons can be kept at the District Office.

B. Mutual Cancellations—Most of our lease relationships are terminated via the mutual cancellation route. It is proposed that our present mutual cancellation form be amended to include a space for statement of reasons for cancellation. Such statement will represent the mutually agreed upon reasons for cancellation. In such cases, the requirements of the suggested Reporting Procedure will be met by the Regional Office merely retaining an executed copy of the mutual cancellation form.

The amendment to the present form will be handled by adding at the end of the part which describes the lease, the following words:

"'. . . shall by mutual consent expire as of ....., 19..., because ....."

Examples of how the "because" blank in the revised form might be filled in, dependent, of course, on the facts involved in each case, are:

(1) Because the parties are not in agreement as to whether Joe Smith has maintained clean, sanitary restrooms.

(2) Because the parties are not in agreement as to whether Joe Smith has taken proper care of the station equipment.

(3) Because of disagreement as to the standard of cleanliness that ought to be maintained at the station.

(4) Because of disagreement as to whether Joe Smith has had adequate manpower at the station.

(5) Because of disagreement as to whether Joe Smith has maintained competitive business hours of operation.

(6) Because construction work is scheduled for the station.

(7) Because street repairs have reduced station revenue.

(8) Because of Joe Smith's poor financial position.

(9) Because of personal reasons of Joe Smith.

4303 (10) Because of disagreement as to whether Joe Smith has maintained an adequate inventory of merchandise to serve customers without delay.

C. Termination because of breach—Normally there will be a formal written notice to the lessee. A copy of such notice and any preceding warning letters specifying a default will satisfy the Reporting Procedure.

Example: You are hereby notified that our service station lease dated ....., 19.... is terminated effective today. Although there may be other grounds justifying this termination in accordance with the lease provisions, we are specifying particularly your failure to:

(1) Pay rent when due, or
(2) Maintain a safe station, or
(3) Maintain continuous operations, or
(4) Maintain a clean station, or
(5) Maintain adequate, competent manpower, or
(6) Maintain adequate bookkeeping records, or
(7) Etc.

In cases of abandonment we should have a short, concise written report setting forth the facts.

D. Expiration of lease and we don't execute a new one with outgoing dealer—A short written report somewhat along the following lines:

We did not continue our lease relationship with Joe Smith after expiration of the lease dated ....., 19.... because:

(1) Joe expressed a desire to get in some other kind of business, or
(2) Joe's performance has been below average. With the right kind of lessee, this station should sell a considerably increased gallonage, or
(3) Joe consistently ran a dirty station, or
(4) Joe was always in financial trouble, had difficulty paying his bills, or
(5) Joe never did take proper care of our equipment, or
(6) Joe could never maintain pleasant relations with his customers and this hurt his sales performance, or
(7) Etc.

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT

Nos. 13339 and 13340

September Term, 1963 January Session, 1964

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, Petitioner,

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, Respondent.

THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY, Petitioner,

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, Respondent.

Petitions to Review and Set Aside Order of the Federal Trade Commission.

OPINION—April 24, 1964

Before Schnackenberg, Castle, and Swygert, Circuit Judges.

SWYGERT, Circuit Judge. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and the Atlantic Refining Company request a review of the Federal Trade Commission order based upon a complaint charging a violation of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act[1] and which challenged the legality of distribution of tires, batteries, and automobile accessories (TBA) to service stations under a sales commission agreement between petitioners.

[fol. 3681] Goodyear is an Ohio corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of rubber products,

[1] Federal Trade Commission Act § 5(a)(1), 66 Stat. 632 (1952), 15 U.S.C. § 45(a)(1) (1958), reads as follows:

"Unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce are declared unlawful.

including tires and inner tubes. It is the largest manufacturer of these products in the United States.

Atlantic, a Pennsylvania corporation, is a major producer, refiner, and distributor of gasoline and other petroleum products. It markets its products in seventeen states along the eastern seaboard.

The complaint issued by the Commission alleged that Atlantic produces and sells petroleum in commerce to wholesale distributors, automobile service stations, and others; that the distributors and retailers, ostensibly independent, nevertheless, are under the domination and control of Atlantic; that Goodyear and Atlantic entered into a sales commission contract whereby Atlantic agreed to promote the sale of Goodyear products, that is, tires, batteries, and accessories (TBA), to Atlantic's distributors and service station dealers located in a part of Atlantic's sales territory; that Atlantic had a similar contract with Firestone Tire & Rubber Company for the balance of Atlantic's territory; and that Goodyear had similar contracts with a number of other oil companies which, like Atlantic, dominate and control their distributors and service station dealers. The complaint further alleged that Atlantic is paid a sales commission by Goodyear and Firestone on their products which are sold by Atlantic's distributors and service station dealers. The complaint charged that by the use of the sales commission agreement and the practices of the two companies thereunder, Atlantic and Goodyear have restrained competition in the sale of TBA, and committed unfair acts and practices proscribed by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The hearing examiner dismissed the complaint against Goodyear, upholding the legality of the sales commission contract, but found that Atlantic had violated section 5 of the act by forcing a substantial number of its dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA. The examiner's order against Atlantic prohibited future actions of coercion.

Both Atlantic and general counsel for the Commission appealed from the examiner's ruling. The Commission sustained the examiner's finding that Atlantic had coerced its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA but held that the coercion was symptomatic of a more fundamental restraint of trade, inherent in the sales commission plan itself. The [fol. 3682] Commission said that the principal issue raised by the complaint was the legality of the Goodyear-Atlantic contract. It noted, however, that Atlantic had a similar agreement with Firestone and that Goodyear had like agreements with a number of oil companies other than Atlantic.

The Commission determined that the sales commission method of marketing TBA is "a classic example of the use of economic power in one market (here, gasoline distribution) to destroy competition in another market (TBA distribution)." It found that Atlantic, which sells gasoline, has used its economic power over its dealers to cause them to carry substantial amounts of a different product, TBA; also, that the effects of the sales commission system are anticompetitive at the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail levels. It found that Goodyear's manufacturing competitors have been substantially precluded from selling TBA to the Atlantic service stations assigned to Goodyear; that wholesalers of TBA have also been substantially precluded from selling to Atlantic's service stations; that Goodyear wholesalers who are not supply points have been similarly restricted; and that Atlantic service station dealers have been restrained in marketing nonsponsored TBA. Finally, the Commission found that the public has suffered because lack of competition among the service stations' suppliers of TBA has precluded the possibility of price reductions to the consumer.

The Commission based these conclusions on the components of the sales commission system which include advance notice to Goodyear and Firestone of the selection of new dealers by Atlantic, training schools for Atlantic dealers in which Goodyear and Firestone TBA are used in demonstrations, sales solicitation by Atlantic salesmen of sponsored TBA from dealers, double teaming, use of a reporting technique whereby the tire company reports to Atlantic the TBA purchases of each dealer, Atlantic's recommendation to each dealer of a minimum Goodyear or Firestone TBA inventory, and Atlantic's assistance in advertising, and providing credit card facilities for the sale of sponsored TBA.

Upon finding the sales commission system an unfair method of competition, the Commission revised and expanded the examiner's order. The order of the Commission not only prohibits Atlantic from coercing its distributors and dealers to purchase a particular brand of TBA [fol. 3683] but also forbids its participation in any sales commission arrangement for the distribution of TBA. Further, the order prohibits Goodyear's participation in any sales commission arrangement with Atlantic or any other oil company for marketing its TBA.

Upon a consideration of the record as a whole, we conclude there was substantial evidence to support the Commission's ultimate findings and conclusions and that its order should be affirmed in all respects.

To narrate all relevant facts would extend our discussion unduly; we undertake a summary.

Atlantic's Operations.

Atlantic has three major kinds of customers: wholesale distributors, retailers, and commercial accounts; the last class was not involved in the administrative proceeding.

Wholesale distributors maintain their own storage facilities and resell Atlantic's products under its brand names to their retail customers, including service stations. In 1956 there were 236 Atlantic distributors selling to 2,897 service stations.

Retail dealers who purchase directly from Atlantic are of two classes: lessee-dealers, that is, service station operators who do not own their stations; and contract dealers, station operators who own their stations or lease from parties other than Atlantic, or operate garages, grocery stores, and similar establishments. The company had 5,537 direct retail dealers in 1956. Lessee-dealers accounted for approximately thirty-nine per cent of Atlantic's total gasoline sales in 1955 and the contract dealers eighteen per cent.

The usual lease between Atlantic and its lessee-dealers provides for a one year term with automatic renewal from year to year unless written notice is given before the expiration of any term. When the lease is executed the dealer is required to sign an "Eleven Point Lease Letter" which prescribes operational standards for the service station. These include housekeeping, use and upkeep, display, illumination, personnel, hours of operation, services, adequate inventory, sales promotion, prices, and accounting. The standards are enforced by Atlantic through the surveillance of its sales personnel and so-called "phantom customer inspectors."

The Commission found that the eleven point letter is an [fol. 3684] integral part of the lease; that Atlantic at its option may terminate the lease in the event of its breach; and further, if a dealer violates any of the requirements of the letter, he is warned that the lease will be cancelled unless the noncompliance is remedied within fifteen days.

Atlantic adopted a policy in 1953 providing that any lessee-dealer who establishes a two year record of satisfactory operation is eligible for a three year lease. Moreover, Atlantic after 1953 no longer required its dealers to purchase Atlantic products except lubricants. The record shows, however, Atlantic's dealers handle its products exclusively.

In 1956 fifty per cent of the 3,044 Atlantic contract dealers operated service stations; the others operated grocery stores, garages, and similar outlets (outlets other than service stations ordinarily do not handle TBA).

Although contract dealers do not lease their stations from Atlantic, they usually enter into two kinds of agreements with the company, one providing for loans of station equipment and the other for the purchase of a minimum amount of gasoline. The loan agreements for equipment provide that Atlantic will install but the dealer must maintain the equipment (gasoline pumps, storage tanks, signs, compressors, etc.). The agreements ordinarily are for a one year term but may be terminated by notice of either party at the end of the original or any subsequent term. Atlantic may repossess its equipment upon termination of the contract; however, if the agreement is cancelled because of a breach by the dealer, Atlantic requires him to pay both the cost of installation and removal of the equipment or Atlantic has the option to leave the equipment and require him to pay for it.

Atlantic makes the same type of contract with its wholesale distributors for the purchase of gasoline as required of its contract dealers. The company, moreover, reserves the right to change the service stations' source of supply from Atlantic itself to its distributors.

Goodyear's Operations.

Goodyear has tire factories in five states. It also has fifty-seven warehouses from which its tires and the accessories it markets are distributed to wholesale and retail outlets. The batteries which Goodyear sells are distributed directly by the companies manufacturing them.
[fol. 3685] Goodyear operates approximately 500 company owned wholesale-retail stores throughout the United States. It also has more than 12,000 independent franchised dealers as well as a number of unfranchised dealers; both sell at wholesale and retail.

TBA.

TBA is an integral part of service station operations. Dealers must carry it in order to give complete service to motorists and to operate their stations at a profit. There are a large number of TBA items available to dealers, and there are constant changes and production developments in TBA of which the dealers must be trained and kept informed. Every major oil company offers some kind of TBA program to give training and advice to its service station dealers.

Atlantic's Purchase-Resale Plan.

For a number of years before Atlantic entered into sales commission contracts with Goodyear and Firestone, it merchandised TBA under a plan known as "purchase-resale."

Under this plan the oil company sells to its dealers at wholesale TBA products which it has purchased and warehoused. The products are merchandised either under the labels of various manufacturers or under the oil company's own labels. Atlantic under its purchase-resale plan bought Lee tires from the Lee Tire and Rubber Corporation, Exide batteries from the Electric Storage Battery Company, and various accessories from other suppliers, and sold these products to its wholesale distributors and retail dealers. Between 1948 and 1950 Atlantic's sales of TBA to its distributors and dealers amounted to $22,000,000.

Atlantic became increasingly dissatisfied with the purchase-resale plan. It asserts that outside of the Philadelphia area the ready availability of Lee tires diminished and it could not give good delivery on batteries or keep them properly charged. It asserts further, that its warehouses were unsuited for handling accessories, and it was difficult to maintain an adequate supply of TBA to meet the demands of its dealers.

In 1948 and 1949 Atlantic conducted a survey of its dealers to determine their preferences of brands, sources of supply, and other aspects of TBA marketing. Sixty-[fol. 3686] seven per cent of the dealers interviewed preferred Lee tires and seventy-nine per cent preferred Exide batteries over competing brands. Only eleven per cent preferred carrying Goodyear tires and four per cent Firestone. A majority preferred to purchase their TBA from more than one source because of price advantage and variety of brands. Nevertheless, Atlantic, after conducting experiments under sales commission arrangements with both Firestone and Goodyear, entered into sales commission contracts with these companies, effective March 1, 1951, covering its entire marketing area and assigning a portion of its sales territory to each company.

While negotiating the Goodyear and Firestone contracts, Atlantic asked certain battery manufacturers whether they would offer a program similar to that of Goodyear or Firestone. Several manufacturers indicated an interest. However, both Goodyear and Firestone said they would refuse to sell only tires under the sales commission plan and insisted that they be allowed to handle batteries and accessories as well as their own products.

In order to effect the transition to the new plan, Atlantic held numerous meetings with its dealers at which its own representatives and those of Goodyear or Firestone explained the new program. The dealers were told that the plan was a change in company policy; that Atlantic wanted them to carry Goodyear or Firestone TBA rather than

Lee tires and Exide batteries and that the switch would be to the dealers' benefit. Letters were also sent to the dealers advising them of the availability of the new TBA program and urging them to take advantage of it. A Goodyear representative commented on the arrangement with Atlantic, "After years of courtship Atlantic and Goodyear have wed," and "We welcome wholeheartedly this merger."

To commence the plan, Atlantic gave Goodyear and Firestone the names of its dealers in their respective territories so that their advertising could be installed at the service stations. Under Atlantic's policy this meant that only Goodyear or Firestone identifications were to be displayed at Atlantic stations. Atlantic salesmen accompanied either by Goodyear or Firestone salesmen contacted the dealers concerning the change-over to sponsored TBA, and Atlantic received progress reports from Goodyear and Firestone. [fol. 3687] The reports included the names of dealers who refused to permit the installation of Goodyear or Firestone signs.

Within nine months after the sales commission system was inaugurated, Lee and Exide lost seventy-five per cent of their Atlantic sales notwithstanding the dealers' previous indication of a preference for these products. By October, 1951 ninety-seven per cent of Atlantic's New England region dealers and ninety-six per cent of its New York region dealers had signed with Goodyear. Firestone also signed virtually all the Atlantic dealers in its territory.

The Sales Commission System.

The sales commission contract between Goodyear and Atlantic and the contract between Firestone and Atlantic are similar. Under the contracts, Atlantic assigned to Goodyear its New England, New York, and Philadelphia-New Jersey marketing regions and to Firestone its eastern Pennsylvania, western Pennsylvania, and southern regions.

By the terms of the Goodyear contract, Atlantic receives a commission on all Goodyear TBA sold to Atlantic dealers in the territory assigned to Goodyear in return for Atlantic's efforts and cooperation in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA to those dealers. Atlantic's contractual assistance to Goodyear includes continuous efforts, suggestions, and counseling its dealers that they maintain adequate Goodyear stock, joint calls with Goodyear salesmen upon the dealers, and the institution of a dealer TBA training program.

An important part of the Goodyear contract is the assignment of each Atlantic dealer to a specific supply point designated by the tire company. The supply point is a TBA wholesaler who may be a Goodyear company operated store, a franchised Goodyear dealer, or an Atlantic service station dealer or distributor who at the same time is a franchised Goodyear wholesaler. Atlantic receives ten per cent commission[2] on all purchases of Goodyear TBA made by its retail dealers from the tire company's supply points and seven and one-half per cent on purchases by Atlantic's wholesale distributors.

When Atlantic selects a new retail dealer, at least three [fol. 3688] separate interviews are held with the applicant at which the sales commission program with Goodyear is explained. The dealer is told that most Atlantic stations in the Goodyear territory are identified "Goodyear" and that it would be to his advantage to carry that company's products. When an applicant is selected but before he is given a lease, he attends an Atlantic training school where extensive discussions and demonstrations of Goodyear TBA are conducted. Atlantic's sponsorship of Goodyear TBA is explained. The prospective dealer is told what Goodyear inventory he should carry and that he should use approved Goodyear signs, decals, and advertising mats. Goodyear is advised of the opening of the applicant's station, and the new dealer is informed of the Goodyear supply point to which he has been assigned.

Atlantic establishes TBA quotas for its dealers which are considered "an agreed upon obtainable objective." Goodyear reports to Atlantic the monthly purchases of its products by each Atlantic dealer. This procedure enables the oil company to check on the dealers' progress in selling sponsored TBA and also serves as an accounting method for ascertaining the sales upon which Goodyear pays Atlantic its commission.

Atlantic salesmen police the dealers' contractual obligations with the oil company by contacting the dealers regularly. It is the salesman who makes the initial recommendation whether a dealer's lease or contract is to be renewed. Atlantic salesmen not only promote the sale of their own company's products but also Goodyear TBA; they help plan sponsored TBA promotions, they write up TBA orders, and they check the dealer's books to ascertain whether nonsponsored TBA has been purchased.

Under the sales commission system, the dealers are visited regularly by a Goodyear salesman accompanied by an Atlantic salesman. Goodyear considers "double teaming" an effective means of selling its TBA. This duality of sales effort is continued at dealer meetings by the presence of representatives of the tire company and the oil company.

Atlantic reserves control over the advertising and identification that may be displayed at its service stations. Its policy is that only sponsored TBA identification should be displayed. Moreover, Atlantic credit cards include TBA. From 1951 to 1953 the credit card facility was limited in Goodyear territory to Goodyear TBA.

I.

[fol. 3689] The Supreme Court in F.T.C. v. Cement Institute, 333 U. S. 683, 693 (1948), indicated that the Federal Trade Commission Act grants "the Commission and the courts . . . adequate powers to hit at every trade practice then existing or thereafter contained, which restrained competition or might lead to such restraint if not stopped in its incipient stages." The Commission has a latitude of flexibility within which it can restrain any new unfair method of competition "which the ingenuity of competitors may devise."[3]

Unfair methods of competition proscribed by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act cannot be classified rigidly into categories of business methods that stifle competition. Labeling at times is more harmful than helpful in formulating conceptions that correspond with reality.

Although petitioners contest the view of the general counsel that the Commission grounded its order on the existence of an illegal tying arrangment the Commission found that the sales commission system is, in effect, such an arrangement. It went on to explain, however, that because of the peculiar features of the system, it did not rest its decision on a "mechanical application of the rule of the Northern Pacific and Osborn cases."[4] The Commission said:

> The issue here is the legality of respondents' use of a particular method of distributing TBA products. Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic. Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from the sales commission method of distributing TBA used by these respondents.

The heart of this case is the economic power Atlantic possesses over its service station dealers. Ostensibly, they [fol. 3690] are independent businessmen; but behind the legalistic facade of independence, there exists a servitude caused by the coercive pressures which Atlantic exerts upon its dealers. The keystone of the actual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers is the lease and the equipment loan contract with their short term and cancellation provisions. Without repeating all the components of the relationship, it is evident that the service station dealer is more of an economic serf than a businessman free to purchase the TBA of his choice. We believe the Commission, in evaluating the evidence, correctly found that if a dealer wishes to continue in good standing with the company and retain his lease or contract, it is advantageous that he carry sponsored TBA.

On the issue of coercion the examiner said:

> It is clear from the record in this proceeding that the Atlantic dealers did not consider the nonforcing letter as giving to them free and unhampered authority and the blessing of Atlantic to handle whatever TBA they might see fit. Both the dealers and the Atlantic salesmen accepted this letter for what it said; namely, that the dealer at the time of the change-over and prospective dealers thereafter had the right to select or reject the TBA sales program offered by Atlantic. The prospective dealer making application for an Atlantic station would not likely reject offhand the program submitted by Atlantic, and such rejection could very well affect his selection as an Atlantic dealer. After a dealer selected a TBA program, the Atlantic salesmen insisted, and saw to it, that the dealer hewed to the line, insofar as the more important items of TBA were concerned. The salesman would be expected to insist upon the purchase of sponsored TBA, as such purchases were reflected in the commission which the salesman received.

He concluded that "coercion and pressure were used [by Atlantic] on a substantial number of dealers to induce them to purchase sponsored TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of nonsponsored items."

The Commission affirmed the examiner's finding of coercion. It said that although the proclaimed policy of Atlantic has been to permit its dealers to carry whatever TBA they choose, the policy in practice is ignored and the [fol. 3691] dealers "have been orally advised by sales officials of the oil company that their continued status as Atlantic dealers and lessees will be in jeopardy if they do not purchase sufficient quantities of sponsored TBA."

The Commission referred in particular to witnesses representing suppliers competing with Goodyear and Firestone who testified that the dealers responded negatively to their sales efforts because the dealers felt they were required to purchase sponsored TBA. There was evidence that if the dealers purchased nonsponsored TBA, they were told by Atlantic to return it or, in any event, not to display it. There was also testimony that leases had been cancelled or allowed to terminate because dealers had purchased nonsponsored TBA.

Atlantic contends that the finding of coercion is not supported by substantial evidence. It says that the finding rests on the testimony of only thirteen dealers out of more than five thousand; that these isolated instances of "unauthorized" coercion are insufficient to establish a violation of Atlantic's "free choice policy." We disagree. The evidence relating to overt coercive tactics, although not extensive, must be considered with the testimony of the witnesses representing competing suppliers to the effect that the dealers felt that if they did not carry sponsored TBA they risked reprisal. Also to be considered are the policing tactics of Atlantic's salesmen and the surveillance by the so-called phantom customer inspectors. Moreover, it should be noted that the examiner, in considering the testimony of the dealers who testified for Atlantic, recognized that these witnesses "were under considerable pressure because they were naturally interested in not jeopardizing the renewal of their leases."

Atlantic's contention that sporadic reprisals against dealers are an insufficient basis for finding coercion is answered in United States v. Loew's Inc., 371 U. S. 38, 50 (1962). There, the Court said:

> Appellants . . . make the . . . argument that each of them was found to have entered into such a small number of illegal contracts as to make it improper to enter injunctive relief. . We disagree. Illegality having been properly found, appellants cannot now complain that its incidence was too scattered to warrant injunctive relief.

[fol. 3692] . Atlantic's power to cause its dealers to carry either Goodyear or Firestone TBA does not depend upon overt coercive methods. The totality of facts surrounding the relationship between the oil company and the dealers points to one conclusion: the oil company is able to exert sufficient economic power over its dealers so that for all practical purposes they are required to carry sponsored TBA.

Atlantic says that its influence over its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA short of force, threat, or intimidation is lawful; that it may recommend high quality TBA to its dealers; and that such action serves a legitimate business purpose in the promotion of the sale of gasoline. This would be a persuasive argument except for the dealers' economic dependency upon the oil company. In that setting, recommendation is tantamount to command. Covert practices are as efficient as overt action. Sophisticated methods of pressuring the dealers into carrying sponsored TBA are as effectual as express covenants and open threats.

Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), although a private suit under the antitrust laws, dealt with a sales commission contract similar to the one before us. Osborn, a dealer, charged that his lease was cancelled because he had not purchased sufficient quantities of Goodyear TBA. The court of appeals held that an illegal "arrangement or condition," a tie-in, existed between the oil company and its dealers which permitted the plaintiff to recover. Although the court was not specifically concerned with the legality of the Goodyear-Sinclair sales commission contract, it held that, "the Goodyear TBA was tied to the lease and the sale of the gasoline." Chief Judge Sobeloff characterized the arrangement thus:

> The perniciousness of the imposed tie-in is aggravated by the fact that the defendant [Sinclair] is not even in the business of selling the tied products, but is employing its economic power in the gasoline industry to force his dealers to do business with a supplier in another industry under an arrangement that yields the defendant an extraneous revenue. The defendant in this case goes a step further than the supplier in the usual tie-in case, for here the tied product is not even handled or sold by the defendant, but it farms out to another, for a price, its coercive economic power.

[fol. 3693] We think this an apt characterization of the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system.

It is true that Goodyear's contract with Atlantic in itself has no tying features. Only when the contract is considered contextually with the oil company-dealer relationship and the economic power that Atlantic has over its dealers does its tying feature emerge. Manifestly, the system was designed to exploit Atlantic's created and controlled service station market. The Commission properly, we think, decided that the system integrates Atlantic's economic power over its service station market into the Goodyear TBA distribution system, thus giving Goodyear, for a price, a captive market.

As pointed out in McElhenney Co. v. Western Auto Supply Co., 269 F. 2d 332 (4th Cir. 1959), an illegal understanding (such as a tying arrangement) may be implied from a course of dealing between the parties. Here, the tying arrangement is the sales commission system operated by Goodyear and Atlantic. In its narrower aspects the system is a tying arrangement because it requires the buyer of one product, the service station dealer who purchases Atlantic gasoline, to buy another line of merchandise, Goodyear TBA. Surrender by the dealer of his freedom to choose between brands of TBA is per se illegal if a "not insubstantial" amount of interstate commerce is affected. Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (1958); International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U. S. 392 (1947).

Appraising the broader aspects of the system as a tying arrangement, we think the Commission correctly determined that the system injures competition in the distribution of TBA at the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail levels. Interbrand competition for the Atlantic service station TBA market is foreclosed to Firestone in Goodyear's territory and Goodyear is foreclosed from selling to the service stations in Firestone's territory. Moreover, the record substantiates the Commission's finding that suppliers of TBA competing with Goodyear and Firestone are substantially foreclosed from selling their products to Atlantic dealers. Atlantic's service station market is fenced off so as to make it unavailable to both manufacturers and wholesalers of competing brands.

Intrabrand competition is perniciously affected. Restraint results inevitably from the designation of a single [fol. 3694] supply point for TBA sales to the Atlantic dealer. Other Goodyear wholesalers cannot compete with the supply point dealer for the business of the Atlantic service stations in his territory.[5]

We are convinced that the Commission correctly analyzed the sales commission system and found, in effect, a tying arrangement inherently anticompetitive. It is anticompetitive largely because competition for the business of the individual service station is replaced by competition for the oil company's domination of its dealers.

The Commission found that service stations constitute a large and necessary market for TBA and evaluated the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system in relation to Atlantic's seventeen-state service station TBA market. Atlantic has nearly seven thousand service stations in this territory. As of 1955 Goodyear had signed TBA contracts with 2,183 of the 2,248 Atlantic service stations in the eight-state territory assigned it. As of 1955 Firestone had signed virtually all the 4,698 Atlantic stations in the ten-state area assigned it. Goodyear's TBA sales to Atlantic dealers rose from approximately two and one-half million dollars in 1951 to more than five and one-half million dollars in 1955. Firestone's sales to Atlantic dealers increased from $3,243,350 in 1951 to $5,562,936 in 1955. Total Goodyear and Firestone sales under the Atlantic contracts from June, 1950 to June, 1956 was more than $52,000,000. Atlantic's stations constitute 3.4 per cent of the total number of service stations in the United States and it sells 2.5 per cent of the gasoline sold in the nation.

We believe the foregoing facts adequately demonstrate that a substantial amount of commerce has been affected by Atlantic's contracts with Goodyear and Firestone. These facts also demonstrate that Atlantic has sufficient economic power in the gasoline market to restrain a substantial amount of commerce in the service station TBA market within the territory serviced by Atlantic. Therefore, the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system is within the "substantiality of economic effect on commerce" test defined in Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, supra, and Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 337 U. S. 293 (1949). Cf. Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., supra.

[fol. 3695] II.

Goodyear contends that the provision in the Commission's order prohibiting it from entering into sales commission contracts with any oil company is not supported by substantial evidence. Atlantic makes a similar contention that the order is too broad because it prohibits the oil company's participation in a sales commission arrangement with any TBA supplier.

We think the Supreme Court answered petitioners' contentions in F.T.C. v. Ruberoid Co., 343 U. S. 470, 473 (1952), when it said:

> Orders of the Federal Trade Commission are not intended to impose criminal punishment or exact compensatory damages for past acts, but to prevent illegal practices in the future. In carrying out this function the Commission is not limited to prohibiting the illegal practice in the precise form in which it is found to have existed in the past. If the Commission is to attain the objectives Congress envisioned, it cannot be required to confine its road block to the narrow lane the transgressor has traveled; it must be allowed effectively to close all roads to the prohibited goal, so that its order may not be by-passed with impunity.

Petitioners' contention that the Commission's findings are inadequate and do not meet the requirements of section 8 of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 1007(b), is without merit.

Moreover, we are not persuaded by Atlantic's contention that the hearing examiner, in making his decision, considered evidence outside the record since he heard a similar complaint filed against Firestone and Shell Oil Company; nor are we persuaded by Goodyear's contention that the finding of the violation against it is based on evidence admitted against Atlantic but struck as to Goodyear. While the examiner received evidence concerning both the Firestone-Atlantic and the Firestone-Shell sales commission contracts, we are satisfied that the findings of both the examiner and the Commission were based on proper and sufficient evidence and that there was no denial of procedural due process.

The Commission's order is affirmed and will be enforced.

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY,
Petitioner,

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Respondent.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

Petitioner, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company (hereinafter "Goodyear"), prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review a judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in the above-entitled case. The opinion and order of the Court of Appeals were rendered on April 24, 1964 and a final decree was entered on May 20, 1964.

Opinions Below.

The court below affirmed an order to cease and desist entered by the Federal Trade Commission (hereinafter the "Commission") because of an alleged violation of Section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 719 (1914), as amended, 15 U. S. C. §45(a)(1) (1953).

The Initial Decision of the Hearing Examiner (R. 94),* which recommends dismissal of the complaint against Goodyear, is reported at 58 F. T. C. 309 (1961) and is printed as Appendix A hereto. The Commission's order (R. 114) and its opinion reversing the Examiner (R. 118) are reported at 58 F. T. C. 309 beginning at page 323 and are printed as Appendix B hereto.

The opinion of the Court of Appeals affirming the Commission is reported at 331 F. 2d 394 and printed as Appendix C hereto.

Jurisdiction.

The order (Appendix D) and the final decree (Appendix E) of the Court of Appeals were entered on April 24, 1964 and May 20, 1964, respectively. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U. S. C. §1254(1) (1958).

Questions Presented.

Goodyear has sales commission agreements with The Atlantic Refining Company ("Atlantic"), its co-respondent in the instant proceedings before the Commission, and with some twelve other non-respondent petroleum companies. Pursuant to these agreements Goodyear pays commissions to an oil company in return for the latter's assistance in promoting the sale through its dealers of Goodyear tires, batteries, and accessories ("TBA" or "TBA products").

No conspiracy between Atlantic and Goodyear was alleged or found. It is undisputed that Atlantic entered into its sales commission agreement with Goodyear because

* "R." refers to the Joint Appendix (in five volumes) filed in the Court of Appeals.

 The Appendix to this petition is voluminous and is therefore separately bound and presented.

it had already used the only feasible alternative method of TBA distribution and had encountered serious distribution and cost problems. Nevertheless, the Commission found that Atlantic's "power" with respect to its dealers made the sales commission agreement with Goodyear an "unfair method of competition" within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act §5(a)(1).

As to the non-respondent oil companies, there is no significant evidence of record concerning their dealer relationships or the presence or absence of oil company "power" to influence TBA sales. Nevertheless, the Commission entered an order barring Goodyear from any further participation in any sales commission agreement, not only with Atlantic but with any marketing petroleum company.

The Court below approved the Commission's action. There are thereby raised the following significant questions concerning the proper administration of the Act:

(1) Is the sales commission agreement with Atlantic totally unlawful merely because Atlantic has the ability, without the exercise of coercion or use of tying agreements, to influence the purchase of a substantial volume of TBA products?

(2) Is a sales commission agreement totally unlawful merely because a sponsoring party (in this case any petroleum company) may be able, without the exercise of coercion or use of tying agreements, to influence the purchase of a substantial volume of the sponsored product (here TBA)?

(3) May the Commission dispense with any attempt at market analysis and establish a conclusive presumption that any oil company which has leases with, or lends equipment to, its franchised dealers has the ability, deemed unlawful, to influence the requisite "substantial" volume of sales of the sponsored product?

(4) May the Commission altogether outlaw a time-tested method of distribution which offers undisputed benefits to the public and to all parties concerned without considering the possibility of more limited alternative remedies?

Statute Involved.

The statute involved in this case is Section 5(a) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 719 (1914), as amended, 15 U. S. C. §45(a) (1958), which in pertinent part provides that:

> "(a) (1) Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are declared unlawful.
>
> * * *
> "(6) The Commission is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations . . . from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce."

Statement.

A. The Litigation Context.

This is a far-reaching case and the first of its kind to come to this Court. It involves an attempt by the Commission to prohibit totally a traditional and widely used method of distributing TBA products. This method is known as "sales commission" distribution.

The amended complaint, issued on May 22, 1956 (R. 5), joins as respondents Goodyear, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.,* and Atlantic. Goodyear is a large manufacturer of rubber products (R. 157, App. B 38). Atlantic is a medium-sized producer, refiner, and distributor of petroleum products. It markets its "Atlantic" brand of automotive gasoline and related petroleum products through retail outlets and wholesale distributors in 17 eastern states and in the District of Columbia (R. 28; R. 96, App. A 3).

The complaint attacks the legality of a contract entered into by Goodyear and Atlantic in 1951 whereby Goodyear pays sales commissions to Atlantic for assistance in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA products through Atlantic outlets. The complaint also attacks other sales commission arrangements between Goodyear and some 12 other marketing oil companies in the United States. Of these latter companies, only one—the Shell Oil Company—is a national concern. Most are a good deal smaller than Atlantic. The complaint also questions a substantially similar contract between Atlantic and The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company ("Firestone"), but does not name Firestone as a respondent.

At the time that the Commission initiated the present proceeding it also issued two other complaints—one

* The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc. was a wholly-owned marketing subsidiary of Goodyear which was merged with Goodyear in 1956 (R. 1). This fact is not significant to this litigation, and both Goodyear respondents are hereinafter collectively referred to as "Goodyear".

 The petroleum companies which the record shows as having sales commission arrangements with Goodyear were: Anderson-Prichard Oil Corporation, Ashland Oil & Refining Co. Inc (and certain subsidiaries of Ashland), Atlantic Refining Company, Carter Oil Company, D-X Sunray Oil Company, Frontier Oil Refining Company, Quaker State Refining Corporation, Richfield Oil Company, Shamrock Oil and Gas Corporation, Shell-American Petroleum Company, Shell Oil Company, Sinclair Refining Company and Sherwood Brothers Inc. (R. 119, App. B 2; R. 2493, 2503) against Firestone and the Shell Oil Company ("Shell") and the other against the B. F. Goodrich Company ("Goodrich") and the Texas Company ("Texaco"). These latter complaints attacked sales commission agreements which the respective respondents had with each other and which each of the respondents had with other companies for the sale of TBA products.

The three complaints were tried before the same Hearing Examiner,* who conducted hearings over a two-year period from October, 1956 to February, 1959. The Examiner thereafter devoted many months to briefings, to his review of voluminous transcripts (3,887 pages in the instant case) and exhibits, and to the preparation of his opinions. In October, 1959 he filed his Initial Decisions which, in each of the three dockets, recommended dismissal of the complaints against the rubber companies.

The Commission reversed in all three cases. It entered orders which altogether bar the rubber company respondents, including Goodyear, from participating in any sales commission plan with any petroleum company and which bar the oil company respondents from participating in any sales commission plan for the sale of TBA.

Petitions to review and to set aside the Commission's orders followed in all three cases. Goodyear and Atlantic each filed a petition to review with the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. That court rejected the petitions and affirmed the Commission (App. C). The instant peti-

---

* Earl J. Kolb, later appointed the Commission's chief of hearing examiners.

 In the Goodrich-Texas case, the Commission initially remanded the case to the Hearing Examiner for further hearings as to the competitive effects of the sales commission agreements of the two companies. After such hearings, the proceeding returned to the Commission which then entered an order explicitly based on the original record. See Matter of The B. F. Goodrich Co., 58 F. T. C. 1176 (1961), and CCH Trade Reg. Rep. 1961-63 Transfer Binder ¶16,378 (1963).

tion for a writ of certiorari, and a separate petition for such writ being filed by Atlantic, ask this Court to review the aforesaid determinations of the Seventh Circuit.

Meanwhile, petitions to review and to set aside the Commission's orders in the two other proceedings are before two other Courts of Appeals. The Firestone-Shell appeals were argued before the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit on January 16, 1964. Goodrich and Texaco sought review from the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, which heard argument on April 10, 1964. These courts presumably will render their decisions in the near future.

B. The Commercial Context.

The sales commission method of distribution has been widely used, for more than two decades, to facilitate the marketing of TBA through automobile service stations. Motorists prefer "one-stop" service stations capable of supplying, not only gasoline and oil, but also the full range of products required for the operation of the modern automobile (R. 1505, 1846, 2267-68). As a result, the nation's neighborhood "gas stations" have become, in response to motorists' demands, one of the major sources of supply for replacement TBA products (R. 122, App. B 5).

To meet this consumer demand under contemporary conditions is a complex task. The service station must have access to a wide variety of tires—for example, Goodyear manufactures and markets approximately 130 different popular-sized tire models (R. 2221). In addition, the service station must carry various sizes and types of batteries and a host of accessories such as spark plugs, radiator chemicals, lamps and bulbs, windshield wipers and blades, polishes, waxes, etc. (R. 99-100, App. A 6; R. 517-19).

The efficient provision at point of sale of such a range of products requires knowledge, skill and organization. The service station operator must be trained in several areas: the products available, installation and repair of such products, sound inventory practices and modern sales techniques (R. 1507, 2221-24, 2268). Behind the station operator must stand a well-developed warehousing and distribution system.

Over the years, two methods have developed in the petroleum industry for meeting these marketing needs. One of these is the so-called "purchase-resale" method, which the Commission's opinion approves (R. 183-85, App. B 62-63). Under this method, the petroleum company purchases TBA products and resells them, along with gasoline and oil, to its service station dealers.

"Purchase-resale" has a particular vogue today among the largest petroleum companies, such as Standard of New Jersey (Esso, Humble), Standard of California (Chevron), Standard of Indiana, Socony-Mobil, and Phillips Petroleum. (Matter of The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, 58 F. T. C. 371, 388 (1961)). They have the resources to provide, and a sufficient number of service station outlets to warrant, the necessary investment in warehousing and distribution facilities for TBA. Atlantic made use of the purchase-resale method in earlier days, but gave it up in 1951 when it found that its sales of TBA were insufficient to warrant the costs of training, warehousing and overhead (R. 100-101, App. A 6-7; R. 2357-62, 2859-64).

The second principal method of TBA distribution through service stations is the "sales commission" method involved in this case. It was pioneered a generation ago by rubber companies and oil companies as an alternative to purchase-resale. Goodyear, which manufactures tires and tubes in its own factories and distributes batteries and accessories acquired from outside sources, entered such a sales commission plan with Atlantic in 1951.

In return for Atlantic's sales assistance, Goodyear agreed to pay to Atlantic a 10% commission on its sales of TBA to Atlantic retailers in seven northeastern states and the Philadelphia area of Pennsylvania and to pay a 7½% commission on TBA sales to Atlantic wholesale distributors in the same area. The Commission did not challenge either the rates of these commissions or the evidence that Atlantic made expenditures approximately equal to them. Moreover, there is no claim that Atlantic wholesalers and retailers who bought Goodyear TBA under this plan did so on different terms from other wholesale and retail customers of Goodyear or that they were required to absorb the commissions paid by Goodyear to Atlantic.

The services which Atlantic supplied to Goodyear in return for its commissions are described in the Hearing Examiner's Initial Decision and are not disputed by the Commission. Atlantic operated training schools for dealers and prospective dealers which included promotional and merchandising aspects of TBA sales; conducted tire clinics jointly with Goodyear personnel to familiarize Atlantic dealers in the care and repair of Goodyear tires; advised prospective new dealers of the importance of TBA and recommended Goodyear TBA products; assisted dealers in arranging for Goodyear TBA inventory; conducted dealer meetings which discussed TBA sales; arranged for advertising and promotion of Goodyear TBA products; suggested methods of TBA merchandising in its dealer magazines; and made Goodyear TBA products available to credit card holders (R. 101-102, App. A 8-9).

The sales commission plan is not an independent source of revenue to Atlantic, but rather aids Atlantic in its competitive efforts to sell gasoline and other petroleum products. Atlantic's commission receipts under its two agreements with Goodyear and Firestone have averaged about ¼ of 1% of its petroleum revenues, and the costs to Atlantic of its participation in the TBA program are approximately equal to its receipts from it (R. 2364).

The Hearing Examiner made clear—and the Commission did not deny—that an oil company TBA program benefits motorists and dealers, as well as oil companies and rubber companies:

> "Tires, batteries and accessories have become a necessary and integral part of the business operation of the Atlantic dealer. He cannot profitably and successfully operate his business without the added revenue from that portion of his business which also enables the dealer to give complete service to his customers. The service station is important to TBA manufacturers as an outlet for distributing to customers. It is to the interest of The Atlantic Refining Company to have its dealers engaged in the sale of TBA as this builds a stronger dealer organization and increases the sale of gasoline." (R. 99-100, App. A 6)*

The Commission's order would altogether outlaw sales commission distribution by condemning it, in every case and regardless of its manner of implementation, as an "unfair method of competition" within the meaning of FTC Act § 5(a)(1). The order bars Goodyear's participation in any sales commission agreement with any oil company of whatever size and regardless of the nature of that company's relationship with its dealers.

---

* The court below found that TBA products were essential to efficient service-station operations, that dealers must be trained and kept informed of TBA product changes and that every major oil company offers some type of TBA training program to its dealers (331 F. 2d 394, 397, App. C 6-7).

C. Operation of Goodyear's Sales Commission Plans.

Although the Commission has wholly condemned all of Goodyear's sales commission agreements, the evidence relates almost entirely to the operation and effect of the agreement with a single oil company, Atlantic.

The record, which describes the situation obtaining in 1955-56, shows that Atlantic distributes its gasoline and other automotive petroleum products to some 5,500 retail dealers, of whom some 2,400 are in the area covered by the Atlantic-Goodyear sales commission agreement (R. 140, App. B 22). In that area, in addition, Atlantic sells its petroleum products to some 47 wholesale distributors who service about 390 retail outlets (R. 146, App. B 27). Most of these gasoline retailers operate service stations which are likely to offer TBA (as contrasted to the country store or roadside restaurant which may have a gas pump, without more, in the yard).

The retailers serviced directly by Atlantic are of two types—lessee dealers and contract dealers. The former lease their stations from Atlantic, mostly for a term of one year, but often for longer periods (R. 140, App. B 22). The latter own their stations or rent them from lessors other than Atlantic; their contracts with Atlantic frequently provide for the loan by Atlantic of items of station equipment and generally call for the purchase by the dealer of a specified minimum amount of gasoline during the course of a year (R. 144, App. B 25-26).

Goodyear operates tire and tube factories in five states and 57 warehouses in all parts of the country. It markets its automotive products through 500 company-owned and operated stores and about 12,000 independent franchised dealers. Many of these outlets sell at both wholesale and retail (R. 157-58, App. B 38).

Atlantic advised all of its dealers in writing, both at the time of the plan's inception in 1951 and on several occasions thereafter, that they were under no obligation to buy Goodyear TBA despite its sponsorship by Atlantic.* Counsel supporting the complaint offered the testimony of eight former Atlantic dealers, all from the Philadelphia area, and of eight former dealers from areas not encompassed by the Goodyear-Atlantic agreement. Some of them testified that, despite the letters from Atlantic, certain of the latter's salesmen overtly or impliedly threatened them with sanctions if they failed to purchase sufficient amounts of Atlantic-sponsored TBA (R. 104, App. A 10).

Atlantic, in rebuttal, introduced the testimony of 38 dealers and ex-dealers who testified to selling non-sponsored TBA without objection from Atlantic (R. 108-09, App. A 14). It also was shown that petroleum companies compete aggressively for the services of qualified dealers, who often are local businessmen with established "followings" in their neighborhoods (R. 1493-1497, 2353). Thus, Atlantic would have scant incentive to jeopardize its basic business—the sale of petroleum products—by making demands on a dealer with respect to TBA, on which Atlantic makes no profit.

* Atlantic stated: "However, your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice." (R. 2892); "[U]nder no circumstances are our dealers to be made to feel that they must buy this new program just because they are Atlantic dealers" (R. 2891) and "If any of our people at any time insist on your buying any certain product or merchandise against what you feel is to your best interest, I want you to call the matter directly to my attention" (R. 3038). The last-cited letter is contained in Atlantic's franchise manual (which is reviewed with all prospective dealers) and is furnished to all new Atlantic dealers (R. 1438-40, 1780, 1920-21, 2025-26).

 The undisputed evidence is that there is "considerable expense" in replacing a dealer (R. 1496-97).

The Examiner found that no Atlantic dealer had confined his purchases of TBA to Goodyear or Firestone TBA and that all dealers "carried some non-sponsored TBA to satisfy demands of their customers . . ." (R. 109, App. A 15). He also concluded that Atlantic had induced a substantial number of its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of non-sponsored TBA by pressure and coercion (R. 110, App. A 16); at the same time he found Atlantic's contractual relationships with its dealers to be not unreasonable, and his proposed order sought only to prohibit acts of coercion by Atlantic (R. 111-13, App. A 16-19). As to Goodyear, the Examiner found:

> "There is no evidence that The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, or The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., engaged in, or participated in, any of acts or practices designed to force dealers and distributors of The Atlantic Refining Company to purchase Goodyear TBA products." (R. 110, App. A 16)

With respect to the actual operations of Goodyear's sales commission agreements with other oil companies, the evidence is virtually non-existent. The Hearing Examiner makes no mention whatever of these agreements and the opinion of the Commission does little more than note the existence of such agreements.* There is certainly no finding by the Examiner or the Commission that each one of such other oil companies coerced or pressured (or had

---

*Although the Hearing Examiner made no such finding, the Commission found that Goodyear's agreements with non-respondent oil companies "are in all material respects identical with the Goodyear-Atlantic contract" (R. 162, App. B 42). Neither the Commission nor the Court below, however, specifically found either that Goodyear's various arrangements with non-respondent oil companies were similar in operation to the Goodyear-Atlantic arrangement or that such non-respondent oil companies' relations with their dealers were similar to those between Atlantic and its dealers.

the power to coerce or pressure) its dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA.

As in the case of the Atlantic agreement, the outlets of such other oil companies are served by "supply points" comprised of some, but not all, of Goodyear's dealers. The Commission's decision attaches great adverse significance to this fact (R. 172, App. B 52). Nevertheless, there is no supporting finding, and, indeed, no evidence, that any competent Goodyear dealer was denied an opportunity to become a "supply point" or that any such dealer who was not a "supply point" was interested in becoming one.*

D. Rulings Below.

The Hearing Examiner found no fault with Goodyear's conduct and nothing wrong with the concept of its sales commission agreement with Atlantic (or with any other oil company).

Specifically, the Initial Decision concludes that > —there was neither charge of nor proof of a conspiracy between Goodyear and Atlantic or anyone else to restrict competition in the sale of TBA (R. 110, App. A 16);

>
> —neither Goodyear's sales commission agreement with Atlantic nor the latter's agreements with its dealers required said dealers to purchase only Goodyear TBA (R. 110-11, App. A 16);

* The record does show that the majority of the 128 "supply points" servicing the outlets covered by the Atlantic-Goodyear sales commission agreement are independent franchised dealers, not Goodyear-owned outlets (R. 525). They must maintain the facilities and staffs required to keep contact with and to effect deliveries to the service stations. These often include special delivery trucks and driver salesmen. The supplying dealers also make to Goodyear the sales reports on which commissions to Atlantic are based. They receive no extra compensation for their participation in the sales commission plan (R. 525).

> —"The consideration for the payment of commission to Atlantic under the sales commission contract is based upon substantial services rendered by Atlantic in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA to Atlantic dealers and distributors" (R. 111, App. A 17);

and that

> —the terms of the contracts and leases between Atlantic and its dealers were not unreasonable and did not themselves confer upon Atlantic control sufficient to require its dealers to carry only sponsored TBA (R. 111, App. A 17).

The proposed order directed Atlantic to cease and desist from coercing or attempting to coerce its dealers to carry sponsored TBA, but dismissed the complaint against Goodyear (R. 112-13, App. A 18-19).

Goodyear believes the finding that Atlantic pressured or coerced its dealers to carry sponsored TBA to be unjustified; however, this point is not raised as an issue in this petition, since the finding is not fundamental to Goodyear's position here. As the Examiner recognized, the finding about Atlantic's conduct, if valid, should properly affect only the relief ordered against Atlantic. The Commission, however, has gone far beyond the finding to strike down all then-existing sales commission agreements between Goodyear and other petroleum companies as to which no similar finding has been made or is possible.*

The Commission attempted to achieve this latter result by asserting that "these overt acts of coercion [by Atlantic] are mere symptoms of a more fundamental restraint of trade inherent in the sales commission system itself."

* Struck down, in addition, are a number of sales commission agreements between Goodyear and small petroleum companies entered into after 1956, the last year of the record.

(R. 156-57, App. B 37). The issue, in the Commission's view, was not the parties' conduct, but "the legality of respondents' use of a particular method of distributing TBA products." (R. 181, App. B 60; emphasis in original).

The Commission found that

> "Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic." (R. 181, App. B 60-61)

The Commission cited Northern Pacific Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (1958), but stated it would "not rest its decision on a mechanical application of the rule" of that case. Rather:

> "Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from the sales commission method of distributing TBA used by these respondents." (R. 181, App. B 61)

The Commission, after purportedly evaluating these effects, concluded that Goodyear's sale commission agreement effectively closed a market, which it defined as one consisting of Atlantic dealers in the area covered by the plan, to the TBA of other manufacturers. Without any specific evidence, the Commission also seems to have concluded that Goodyear's sales commission agreements with other oil companies resulted in a foreclosure of other markets similarly defined in terms of a particular oil company's retail outlets.

The Commission further concluded, again without specific evidence, that Goodyear's use of "supply points" to handle sales to its service-station customers restricted competition among Goodyear's retail and wholesale dealers.

On the basis of these conclusions, the Commission rejected the Examiner's recommended order and entered an order which outlaws, not only the agreement between Goodyear and Atlantic, but any sales commission agreement between Goodyear and any oil company.

The Seventh Circuit affirmed, its opinion finding that there was substantial evidence to warrant the Commission's conclusions.

The Court justified the Commission's sweeping order against Goodyear by treating it solely as a matter of proper remedy. The opinion is content to deal with the issue by a bare quotation of one paragraph of this Court's opinion in Federal Trade Commission v. Ruberoid Co., 343 U. S. 470, 473 (1952), which states that the Commission's remedial power is not limited to prohibition of illegality "in the precise form in which it is found to have existed in the past" (331 F. 2d at 403, App. C 18).

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT.

I.

The case involves an issue of fundamental importance to the American economy.

The Commission seeks to abolish a system of TBA distribution which is of such significance to the national economy that this Court should review the propriety of the Commission's action.

The decisions of the Commission and Court below do not actually rely upon any detailed evaluation of facts peculiar to this case. Rather, the Commission's decision and order, upheld by the Court below, are based on what may fairly be described as a legislative judgment that all forms of sales commission merchandising in any industry where franchised-dealers are lessees or borrowers of equipment are, in all circumstances, "unfair methods of competition".

Although the Commission's views are entitled to weight, the question of what constitutes an "unfair method of competition" within the meaning of Section 5(a)(1) of the Act is ultimately a question of law to be decided by the courts. See Federal Trade Commission v. R. F. Keppel & Bro., Inc., 291 U. S. 304, 314 (1934); Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 253 U. S. 421, 427 (1920). The question of whether the sales commission method of marketing is per se an "unfair method of competition" is ripe for review by this Court. The issue is as clearly framed by the present record as it ever will be.

The number and scope of the interests which the Commission's decision affects are great. The Commission's opinion in the companion Firestone-Shell proceeding indicates that, in the petroleum industry alone, at least 28 different petroleum companies have sales commission agreements which are outlawed by the Commission's order in this case and in the two companion proceedings. (Matter of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 58 F. T. C. 371, 383-84 and fn. 1-3 (1961)). These agreements were applicable, at the time of the record, to over 50,000 service stations and involved annual TBA sales in excess of $150,000,000 (58 F. T. C. at 352, 401, 1181; R. 3406).

These agreements confer important benefits, not only on the rubber companies such as Goodyear, but also on the petroleum companies, the service station operator, and the American motorist. As noted, the Hearing Examiner found this to be true of TBA product distribution (R. 99-100, App. A 6) and the Commission has not denied it.

The Commission has not only ignored the benefits provided by the sales commission method. It also nowhere discusses the fundamental economic setting of these proceedings. Its decision approves the purchase-resale system of distribution without considering the fact that Atlantic, a medium-sized company, abandoned purchase-resale as uneconomic for its size of operation. The Commission is mute as to the basic facts of economic life—namely, that medium and small-size petroleum companies are engaged in fierce competition with the largest petroleum companies —and that the sales commission system is particularly well adapted to the needs of smaller oil companies (and consequently their dealers) who, like Atlantic, may not be able economically to sustain the warehousing and distribution expenses of a purchase-resale system.

The sales commission system has been a natural and widespread response by smaller petroleum companies to the imperatives of TBA merchandising. It is a system, as well, which has a potential application in almost any of the growing marketing fields which are served by franchised dealers. Whether the benefits of the sales commission method are sufficiently outweighed by adverse effects to warrant its per se condemnation as an "unfair method of competition" is surely a question which should be reviewed by this Court.

II.

The Commission's treatment of sales commission plans violates controlling law.

The Commission, by its sweeping order barring Goodyear from participation with any petroleum company in any TBA sales commission program, has defined in this proceeding a new "unfair method of competition".

The Commission's decision so characterizes any sales commission plan involving sponsorship of a product by a franchisor (in this case an oil company) which "has sufficient economic power with respect to its [dealers] to cause them to purchase substantial quantities" of the sponsored product. In addition, the Commission's decision establishes, at the very least, a presumption (requiring no proof on the part of the Commission) that any franchise system in which leases or equipment loans play a part endows the franchisor with such power.

The doctrine thus enunciated conflicts with principles which this Court has recognized in applying the competitive policies at the base of the Federal Trade Commission Act and of the antitrust laws. It is submitted that if the doctrine is not erased by this Court, its application by the Commission in this and in other administrative proceedings will have pernicious effects on the national economy.

Goodyear has sales commission agreements with numerous non-respondent oil companies as to whom no finding of dealer-coercion is made or is possible.* It is patently unsound reasoning which has led the Commission to condemn all of these agreements without reference to facts concerning their operation or effect.

"The issue" in this proceeding, as the Commission's opinion plainly states, "is the legality of . . . a particular method of distributing TBA products", viz., the sales commission method (R. 181, App. B60) (emphasis in original). The reasoning through which the Commission condemns every use of this method by Goodyear involves two

* The Commission devotes seven pages of its opinion to a review of the evidence bearing on coercion by Atlantic and concludes "that the record contains ample evidence to support the hearing examiner's finding that Atlantic has coerced a substantial number of its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA." (R. 156-57, App. B 37). The opinion's only other reference to dealer coercion concerns two incidents involving Sinclair in 1948 (R. 162-64, App. B 42-44).

steps, each of which brings the Commission into square conflict with pertinent decisions of this Court.

First, the Commission concluded that the petroleum company respondent before it, viz., Atlantic, had "sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements" and that this power had the effect of giving Goodyear an advantage in the competition for the business of Atlantic dealers (R. 181, App. B 60-61) (emphasis supplied). This, in the Commission's abstract view, defined an unfair method of competition warranting abolition of a sales commission agreement.

Second, with respect to Goodyear's agreements with the non-respondent oil companies, the Commission's opinion merely notes that "Goodyear has sales commission contracts with a number of other marketing oil companies, and the agreements are in all material respects identical with the Goodyear-Atlantic contract" (R. 162, App. B-42). To reach and condemn these agreements, the Commission has obviously presumed, from the mere existence of a franchise system between oil company and dealer, the possession by each oil company of the requisite power to cause what the Commission considers improper economic effects.*

* The Commission's opinion does not articulate this step of its analysis since it jumps, without explanation, from the fact of Goodyear's sales commission agreements with non-respondent oil companies to their condemnation. Two recent consent orders of the Commission indicate, however, that the Commission, again without articulation, is perfectly willing to contradict itself.

In Matter of Kaiser Jeep Corp., FTC Dkt. C-739 (Order of April 27, 1964), and Matter of O. K. Rubber Welders, Inc., FTC Dkt. 8571 (Order of June 19, 1964), the Commission agreed to Consent Orders which did not outlaw the franchisor's sales commission plan, but simply ordered the franchisor to cease and desist from coercing its dealers to carry the sponsored product.

A. Economic Influence as "Unfair" Competition.

According to the doctrine of the Commission in this case, a sales commission agreement must fall if there exists, without more, a possibility that the franchisor (e.g., a petroleum company) can influence a substantial volume of sales of a sponsored product (e.g., Goodyear TBA) to dealers who are free to respond to the influence or not as they see fit.

In adopting this view, the Commission has ignored its obligation, when appraising a competitive method not marked by deception or overt restraint, to weigh the advantages of and justifications for the method under attack before condemning it as unlawful per se.

This Court has insisted upon that much even when appraising arrangements which are overtly restrictive. Speaking in White Motor Co. v. United States, 372 U. S. 253 (1963), of White's vertical territorial limitations among its distributors and dealers, this Court noted that such a limitation "may or may not have that purpose or effect [viz., the stifling of competition]":

> "We do not know enough of the economic and business stuff out of which these arrangements emerge to be certain. They may be too dangerous to sanction or they may be allowable protections against aggressive competitors or the only practicable means a small company has for breaking into or staying in business (cf. Brown Shoe, supra, at 330 of 370 U. S.; United States v. Jerrold Electronics Corp., D. C., 187 F. Supp. 545, 560-561, aff'd, 365 U. S. 567) and within the 'rule of reason' " (372 U. S. at 263).

Moreover, the Commission's doctrine takes no account of the fact that petroleum companies and most other franchise operators make valuable trademarks available to their dealers. By paying no heed to this fact, the Commission casts doubt on the well established rule that the existence of a trademark legitimates forms of influence and "control" by its owner which might not be proper in other circumstances.

This has been recognized, for example, in the recent decision of the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Susser v. Carvel Corp., 1964 CCH Trade Cases ¶ 71,103 (2d Cir., May 8, 1964). In that private action under the antitrust laws, the Court held that Carvel, operator of a franchised chain of frozen custard stands in the Northeast, could require its dealers to handle only Carvel-approved products, saying,

> "The antitrust laws certainly do not require that the licensor of a trademark permit his licensees to associate with that trademark other products unrelated to those customarily sold under the mark. It is in the public interest that products sold under one particular trademark should be subject to the control of the trademark owner. See E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Celanese Corp. of America, supra; Arthur Murray, Inc. v. Horst, supra; Morse-Starrett Prod. Co. v. Steccone, supra. Carvel was not required to accede to the requests of one or another of the dealers that they be permitted to sell Christmas trees or hamburgers, for example, which would have thrust upon Carvel the obligation to acquaint itself with the production and sale of these items so as to establish reasonable quality controls.
> "Nor do the antitrust laws proscribe a trademark owner from establishing a chain of outlets uniform in appearance and operation. Trademark licensing agreements requiring the sole use of the trademarked item have withstood attack under the antitrust laws where deemed reasonably necessary to protect the goodwill interest of the trademark owner . . ." (p. 79,362).

Here, the Commission's resort to a simple quantitative test,—the dollar amount of sponsored TBA products sold to franchised dealers—to appraise a sales commission plan not only disregards, but precludes consideration of, such contextual justifications. In the present case the Commission has ignored in fact, as its formula ignores in theory, the competitive needs of the petroleum companies which entered sales commission agreements with Goodyear.

To compete effectively at the retail level a petroleum company must have a TBA program. The nub of the matter is simply stated. Petroleum companies must be concerned with and have a right to attempt to influence the kind and quality of TBA products which are sold in the service stations carrying their gasoline brand name. Companies such as Standard Oil of New Jersey and Socony-Mobil achieve this through purchase-resale. A sales commission agreement with Goodyear is a means through which companies such as D-X Sunray and Shamrock can match their giant rivals.

Moreover, the Commission's action is irrational. Its decision to make the mere possibility of sales influence by the petroleum company the touchstone for the validity of a TBA sales commission agreement lacks logic, since the Commission here has specifically approved petroleum companies' participation in the purchase-resale of TBA. As the Commission's opinion itself notes, a petroleum company's power vis-a-vis its retail dealers "is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsored TBA used . . ." (R. 181, App. B 61). The Commission offers no reason (and common sense suggests none) why a petroleum company would exert less pressure upon its dealers in promoting the sale of its own TBA than in promoting the TBA of a party to a sales commission agreement.

Given the possibility of petroleum company persuasion of its dealers, a sales commission plan has no significant difference from a purchase-resale program. The Commission opinion labors to suggest differences, but its efforts do not hold water.

Thus, the Commission argues that, under a sales commission plan, the supply points of the rubber company involved in a plan "are assured of a substantial chunk of the market before the competitive race at the wholesale level begins" (R. 184, App. B 63). But, under purchase-resale, the petroleum company would be assured of the same "substantial chunk" at the start of the race.

The Commission also suggests that, since smaller rubber companies lack the distribution facilities and full product lines of the larger ones, they cannot compete for sales commission business, while they can compete for the business of petroleum companies marketing TBA by purchase-resale (R. 185, App. B 64). This argument is too glib, however, since the Commission did not prove—nor could it—that small rubber companies do not have sales commission agreements with petroleum companies. In any case, a method of competition can scarcely be illegal because one company offers a broader range of products and service than another.

Finally, in focusing on the possibility of influence by, rather than the actual conduct of, the franchisor as the basis for its condemnation of TBA sales commission plans, the Commission conflicts with a clear expression of Congressional policy. In the mid-1950's, there was much concern over the power which automobile companies had to influence the purchase of cars and other products by their franchised dealers. In 1956, the Congress responded to this concern by enacting, as a declared "supplement" to the antitrust laws, the so-called Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act, 70 Stat. 1125, 15 U. S. C. §§1221-25 (1958).

Under that act an automobile dealer was given the right to sue in the district courts for damages if his manufacturer failed:

> "... to act in good faith in performing or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise, or in terminating, cancelling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer."

Good faith was defined in the act as follows:

> "The term 'good faith' shall mean the duty of each party to any franchise, and all officers, employees, or agents thereof to act in a fair and equitable manner toward each other so as to guarantee the one party freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats of coercion or intimidation from the other party: Provided, That recommendation, endorsement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument shall not be deemed to constitute a lack of good faith." (emphasis supplied)

The economic power of an automobile company vis-a-vis its dealers is no less than the power of an oil company vis-a-vis its service station operators. Yet, in the dealers' statute, the Congress plainly held that an automobile company might actively influence its dealers to buy, provided that that influence was employed in a non-coercive way.

The legislative history of that statute makes it clear that it was contemplated that it could serve as a precedent for use in other industries such as the petroleum industry. See H. Rep. Committee on the Judiciary, Antitrust Sub-COMMITTEE, Hearings on H. R. 11360 and S. 3879, 84th Cong., 2d Sess. (1956)*.

The Hearing Examiner applied that precedent to his view of the facts in this case. The Commission did not; it substituted instead a simple quantitative test of illegality which treats actual conduct as irrelevant and ignores all of the many justifications for the sales commissions method of TBA distribution. This doctrinal innovation should be reviewed and reversed by this Court.

B. Presumption of Sales Influence.

The Commission's decision does more than measure the legality of sales commission agreements by a naked and unadorned quantitative test of the amount of sponsored TBA products sold by oil company dealers. The decision also erects a presumption that the business operations of any sponsoring franchisor having lease or equipment loan arrangements with dealers meet this novel and unsound test.

It is solely on the basis of such a presumption that the Commission was able to reach and to condemn Goodyear's sales commission agreements with all non-respondent oil companies.

* In this connection it also is of interest to note that a bill identical in all material respects to the Automobile Dealers' Day In Court Act, but aimed at oil companies, was introduced in the House the following year. See H. R. 425, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957). Also at least two bills intended to outlaw the sales commission plan have been introduced. See H. R. 428, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957) and H. R. 9894, 86th Cong., 2d Sess. (1960). Similarly there have been bills aimed at purchase-resale, see H. R. 5926, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. (1961); S. 2480, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. (1961), and at exercise of control generally with respect to the reselling of gasoline or petroleum products as well as TBA, see H. R. 426, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957). Despite this activity, no such bills have ever been reported out of committee, and the Congress has refused to act.

To determine the influence of Atlantic over its retail outlets, the Commission reviews at length the contractual relationships which link that company and its dealers and notes the different positions vis-a-vis Atlantic of its lessee and contract dealers (R. 139-47, App. B 21-28). And to measure the effect of this influence, the Commission's opinion makes some effort (though hardly sufficient) to assess Atlantic's market position in the Northeast (R. 139, App. B 21).

But, in the case of the non-respondent oil companies, there are no findings and, more importantly, no evidence which would permit such findings had the Commission thought it pertinent to make them.* The Commission's opinion does no more than note the aggregate volume of Goodyear's sales under its sales commission agreements with these other companies (R. 162, App. B 42).

The Commission's presumption that all sales commission agreements violate its new standard of legality for such agreements runs roughshod over controlling authorities of this Court. Even if there were merit to the Commission's touchstone of oil company "power" for testing such agreements, it seems clear that proof of such "power" is necessary and that the burden of proof should be on the Commission.

The Commission's presumption evades the need for market analysis. It permits the Commission to speak of a sponsor's "power" to influence a "substantial" volume of sales, while at the same time sparing the Commission the burden of determining what, in a particular context, "power" or "substantial" means. Yet meaningful analysis has been required heretofore in appraising outright requirement contracts, tie-in sales, and mergers, let alone the milder arrangement here.*

* There is not even any evidence of the amount or value of gasoline sold by these companies individually or collectively.

The only market facts that the Commission conceivably can infer from the present record is that the amounts of gasoline sold by the non-respondent petroleum companies and the amounts of TBA sold by Goodyear to the retail outlets of these companies are not, in some absolute dollar sense, de minimis. But neither such fact has been sufficient heretofore to establish an actionable restraint.

Size alone, unrelated to countervailing competitive forces, provides no reasonable foundation for an inference, let alone a conclusive presumption, that a seller is in a position to pressure its customers into taking a product they would rather purchase elsewhere. This Court made this clear in at least two recent decisions considering tying arrangements under the antitrust laws. See Northern Pacific Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1, 6-7 (1958); Times-Picayune Publishing Co. v. United States, 345 U. S. 594 (1953).

In addition, it seems clear that the substantiality of alleged foreclosure represented by Goodyear's sales of TBA to stations covered by sales commission agreements cannot be determined without a comparative reference. What portion of the TBA market is involved? To proceed without such a comparative reference conflicts with the approach of

* The non-respondent petroleum companies with which Goodyear has or had sales commission agreements present a variety of different situations which the Commission has simply swept under the rug. The companies are of different sizes, operate in different areas, face different competitors, have different positions in their respective markets, provide markets for differing amounts of TBA, operate with different types of dealer outlets, etc.

 One market figure is clear from the record. In 1955 Goodyear TBA sales under its agreement with Atlantic were less than $6,000,000 (R. 133, App. B 14). These sales were approximately 15/100 of 1% of the annual national replacement TBA market in the mid-1950's, estimated in the record to be 4 billion dollars (R. 3103).

this Court's recent decision in Tampa Elec. Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U. S. 320 (1961).

There a requirements contract was upheld under Section 3 of the Clayton Act even though it foreclosed $128,000,000 worth of business over a 20-year term. For when viewed in its market setting, this undeniably large sum of money represented an insignificant portion of the total market.

> "To determine substantiality in a given case, it is necessary to weigh the probable effect of the contract on the relevant area of effective competition, taking into account the relative strength of the parties, the proportionate volume of commerce involved in relation to the total volume of commerce in the relevant market area, and the probable immediate and future effects which pre-emption of that share of the market might have on effective competition therein. It follows that a mere showing that the contract itself involves a substantial number of dollars is ordinarily of little consequence" (365 U. S. at 329).*

This Court's decision in Tampa Electric has a deeper significance, as well. It teaches that market definition and analysis must become increasingly sophisticated if the antitrust laws are, indeed, to serve as a charter of economic liberty in our complex society. The Commission's contrasting superficiality in a matter of this importance warrants review by this Court. The Commission's uninformed action, if tolerated here, will have obviously far-reaching and obviously undesirable implications for the whole field of antitrust enforcement.

* This Court has also made clear that the relevant market setting is the key to legality of mergers. See Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U. S. 294, 343 (1962) and United States v. Continental Can Co., ... U. S. ....., 32 U. S. LAW WEEK 4642, 4646 (June 22, 1964).

The Commission may seek, perhaps, to justify its presumption by characterizing it as a rebuttable one. But, as this Court pointed out in Automatic Canteen Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 346 U. S. 61 (1953), the burden of proof in a matter of this sort properly rests with the Commission.

In that case, brought under Section 2(f) of the Robinson-Patman Act, 49 Stat. 1526 (1936), 15 U. S. C. §13(f) (1958), this Court held that even after the Commission had shown that respondent buyer knew he had obtained a price differential from his vendor, the Commission had the burden of coming forward with evidence to show that cost savings did not justify the differential. The reasoning which prompted that ruling would condemn, as well, any suggestion that the Commission not bear the burden of proof here.

In Automatic Canteen, as here, the Commission, with its broad subpoena power, is better equipped than any respondent to develop the facts. Moreover, here as in Automatic Canteen, an attempt by the respondent to develop facts pertinent to its defense "would almost inevitably require a degree of cooperation [with the petroleum companies] . . . that may offend other antitrust policies . . ." (346 U. S. at 69). As this Court there concluded:

> "[W]e think the fact that the [respondent] does not have the required information, and for good reason should not be required to obtain it, has controlling importance in striking the balance in this case" (346 U. S. at 78).

The Commission has piled novelty on novelty to reach its result in this case. Its actions deserve review by this Court.

III.

The Commission failed to perform its required functions.

In any case—and quite apart from the substantive issues discussed in the preceding Point—the process by which the Commission reached its conclusions violated controlling law.

From the finding against Atlantic the Commission vaulted to a condemnation against any Goodyear sales commission agreement with any petroleum company. The Commission did not consider whether measures short of complete abolition would satisfy its remedial function. It thereby failed to provide a stated basis for judicial judgment of the reasonableness of its sweeping remedy. The failure is compounded by the opinion of the Court below, which, as noted, did not discuss the issue beyond quotation of a paragraph from this Court's opinion in Ruberoid.

Such perfunctory treatment does an injustice to the dimensions of the issues to be decided and the character of the Commission's duties. The Commission acted as if it were unaware of Jacob Siegel Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 327 U. S. 608 (1946).* This Court there held that the Commission erred in ordering an outright prohibition of the use of a trade name which it had found deceptive; the Commission should have first considered whether measures short of such a drastic remedy would eliminate the deception. As the Court stated:

* This Court recently applied the doctrine of the Siegel case in Gilbertville Trucking Co. v. United States, 371 U. S. 115, 130-31 (1962), and Burlington Truck Lines v. United States, 371 U. S. 156, 165-67 (1962). See also Korber Hats, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 311 F. 2d 358, 363 (1st Cir. 1962).

> "For the Commission seems not to have considered whether in that way the ends of the Act could be satisfied and the trade name at the same time saved. We find no indication that the Commission considered the possibility of such an accommodation. It indicated that prohibition of the use of the name was in the public interest since the cease and desist order prohibited the use of the name. But we are left in the dark whether some change of name short of excision would in the judgment of the Commission be adequate" (327 U. S. at 613).

The basis of the holding was put as follows:

> "[The Commission's] expert opinion is entitled to great weight in the reviewing courts. But the courts are not ready to pass on the question whether the limits of discretion have been exceeded in the choice of remedy until the administrative determination is first made" (327 U. S. at 614).

The facts here are even stronger than in Siegel. The value of a trade name is more than matched by the worth of a traditional marketing practice whose varied benefits were not denied by the Commission. Moreover, the breadth of possible remedies is wider here than in Siegel. There, the Commission's function was to adopt a proper remedy with respect to a specific trade name. Here, there is involved a prevalent and important distribution system—and, unlike the Siegel situation, there are a variety of remedies as to both petroleum and rubber companies which were open to the Commission's consideration.

Nor would the Commission have been breaking new ground in fashioning a remedy involving petroleum products and TBA which stopped short of total abolition. In Richfield Oil Corp. v. United States, 99 F. Supp. 280 (S. D. Cal. 1951), aff'd per curiam, 343 U. S. 922 (1952), total requirements and tying arrangements were voided, but the decree left intact a sales commission plan for automobile accessories. Moreover, in two other litigated cases and a consent decree, the right of the oil company to "sponsor" TBA products was preserved. United States v. Standard Oil Co. of California, 78 F. Supp. 850, 891 (S. D. Cal. 1948) aff'd, 337 U. S. 293 (1949); United States v. Sun Oil Co., 176 F. Supp. 715 (E. D. Pa. 1959) (decree unreported); United States v. Standard Oil Co. of California, 1959 CCH Trade Cases ¶69,399 (S. D. Cal. 1959).*

Thus, the Commission should have at least considered a number of possible remedies to the factors of which its opinion complains. Among them are the following:

1. An injunction against the exertion of undue pressure upon oil company dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA, making clear that dealers were free to purchase TBA products from anyone at any time. This might include requirements that:

(a) All oil company dealers be furnished a copy of the Commission's order;

(b) All oil company dealers be reminded periodically that they have freedom of choice;

(c) All oil company dealer complaints received by the oil company or the rubber company be passed on by the recipient to the Commission with an explanation as to the facts and any corrective measures taken.

* It was obviously the judicial judgment that the oil company "power" which concerns the Commission could be properly handled by careful circumscription. Among other remedies available if such "power" were to result in undue pressure against a dealer is a treble damage action. See Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U. S. 963 (1961).

2. An injunction circumscribing oil company "power" by modifying one or more of such elements of the oil company-dealer relationship as:

(a) Lease terms;

(b) Equipment loans;

(c) Credit card coverage;

(d) Cooperative advertising; and

(e) Joint merchandising.

3. An injunction against an oil company's limitation of a particular sales commission agreement to a geographical portion of its total sales commission arrangements.

4. An injunction assuring that an oil company in its sales commission arrangements affords its dealers an alternative choice of sponsored brands of TBA.

5. An injunction against any limitation of the number of Goodyear "supply points", coupled with requirements that:

(a) The "supply point" function be assigned to anyone who meets objective standards and is willing to assume the responsibilities; and

(b) unless completely impracticable in a particular case, an oil company dealer have more than one supply point available to him.

Instead of considering these or other possible remedies, the Commission issued a naked ukase. Yet, here the alleged violation is not a practice conceived and devoted to illegality. The undisputed evidence is that the sales commission plan performs a variety of beneficial economic functions at every step of the economy. Given such benefits and a finding that Goodyear had not itself pressured Atlantic's dealers, there is no reasonable basis for broad-scale banishment.*

The instant sweeping and punitive order reflects the Commission's failure to make use of its expertise; the Commission was certainly capable of devising a remedy which preserved the positive benefits of sales commission distribution while putting an end to that which the Commission considered improper. The Congress created it to perform that very function; no legislative purpose is fulfilled by inexpert obliteration of an entire marketing institution.

It is submitted that the Commission's process of decision so clearly violates the Siegel doctrine in dealing with a matter of substantial importance that review by this Court is required.

* It is clear that the Commission's remedy must bear some reasonable relation to the alleged violation. See e.g., National Labor Relations Board v. Crompton-Highland Mills, Inc., 337 U. S. 217, 226 (1949); Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., 288 U. S. 212, 217-18 (1933); Swanee Paper Corp. v. Federal Trade Commission, 291 F. 2d 833, 837-38 (2d Cir. 1961), cert. denied, 368 U. S. 987 (1962); Audivox, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 275 F. 2d 685 (1st Cir. 1960); Elliot Knitwear, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission, 266 F. 2d 787, 790-91 (2d Cir. 1959).

Conclusion.

The writ of certiorari should issue.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

IN THE MATTER of THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, and THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY, CORPORATIONS.	Docket No. 6486

INITIAL DECISION

By EARL J. KOLB, Hearing Examiner.

[Appearances omitted]

This proceeding is based upon an amended complaint brought under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, charging as unlawful certain contracts entered into between respondents The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of respondent The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and the Atlantic Refining Company, whereby The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., agreed to pay The Atlantic Refining Company a sales commission on all tires, batteries and accessories sold by said The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., to service stations and other outlets of The Atlantic Refining Company. The amended complaint further charged that respondent The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., had entered into similar contracts with certain oil companies other than The Atlantic Refining Company, and that The Atlantic Refining Company had entered into a similar contract with The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company.

This proceeding is now before the hearing examiner for final consideration upon the amended complaint, answers thereto, testimony and other evidence, proposed findings of fact and conclusions filed by all parties and briefs in support thereof, and reply briefs. The hearing examiner has given consideration to the proposed findings of fact and conclusions submitted by the parties, and their briefs in support thereof, and all findings of fact and conclusions of law proposed by the parties, respectively, not hereinafter specifically found or concluded are herewith rejected, and the hearing examiner having considered the record herein, and being now duly advised in the premises, makes the following findings of fact, conclusions drawn therefrom and order:

1. Respondent The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Ohio with its principal office and place of business located at 1144 East Market Street, Akron, Ohio. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company is engaged in the manufacture and in the sale and distribution of rubber products including tires and inner tubes, directly and through several wholly owned and controlled subsidiaries, including The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., which is primarily a marketing subsidiary.

2. Respondent The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "Goodyear") is a wholly owned subsidiary corporation of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, organized under the laws of the State of Delaware with its office and principal place of business located at 1144 East Market Street, Akron, Ohio. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., is engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of tires, inner tubes, batteries, automotive parts and accessories which are known to the trade as TBA products and will be hereinafter so referred to.

3. Respondent The Atlantic Refining Company (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "Atlantic") is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with its principal office and place of business located at 260 South Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Said respondent is engaged in the production and in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of petroleum products, including gasoline and lubricants sold to petroleum wholesalers (hereinafter referred to as "distributors") and to service stations.

4. Respondent Atlantic markets its petroleum products in the Middle Atlantic States (including parts of Ohio and West Virginia), New England (not including Maine) and the Southern Atlantic States. This marketing territory is divided into six marketing regions which are, in turn, subdivided into twenty-nine districts, consisting of a city or other marketing center and the surrounding territory. The marketing regions and districts are as follows:

Region	District
New England	Providence, R. I.
	Springfield, Mass.
	Hartford, Conn.
	Boston, Mass.
	New Haven, Conn.
New York	Syracuse, N. Y.
	Southern Tier, N. Y.
	Albany, N. Y.
	Rochester, N. Y.
	Watertown, N. Y.
	Buffalo, N. Y.
Philadelphia-New Jersey	Philadelphia-Suburban, Pa.
	South Jersey
	Newark (or North Jersey)
Eastern Pennsylvania	Reading, Pa.
	Allentown, Pa.
	Wilkes-Barre, Pa.
	Harrisburg, Pa.
	Williamsport, Pa.
	Wilmington, Del.

Region	District
Western Pennsylvania	Pittsburgh, Pa. Altoona, Pa. Greensburg, Pa. Erie, Pa.
Southern	Charlotte, N. C. Baltimore, Md. Richmond, Va. Jacksonville, Fla. Miami, Fla.

5. As of April 30, 1956, there were approximately 394 salesmen calling on dealers and distributors of gasoline and lubricants, including service stations. These salesmen are divided into various classifications, dependent upon the functions which they perform as follows:

Type	Approximate Number	Function
Promotable dealer salesman	133	Sells Atlantic products and promotes recommended TBA to "promotable dealers", which term includes lessee dealers and contract dealers interested in complete service station operation.
Dealer salesman	25	Sells Atlantic products and promotes recommended TBA to dealers not covered by promotable dealer salesmen (usually in areas of sparse distribution) or to special groups such as car dealers in other areas.
General salesman	54	Sells Atlantic products and promotes recommended TBA to dealers not covered by promotable dealer salesmen or dealer salesmen, and also sells Atlantic products to smaller Commercial accounts.
Service salesman	147	Teaches dealers and their employees merchandising techniques and how to perform the services normally performed by first class service station operators. This teaching involves both petroleum products and TBA. For teaching purposes the salesman uses the TBA on hand at the station.

Wholesale salesman	35	Sells Atlantic products and promotes recommended TBA to distributors and wholesale dealers.

6. All of respondent Atlantic's salesmen are paid on a salary basis. Promotable dealer salesmen also receive extra compensation based upon percentage gains in purchases of gasoline, motor oil and recommended TBA (and also for over-all gains) by those of their assigned dealers who have been in operation for a minimum of twelve months.

7. Respondent Atlantic sells its petroleum products to more than 5,500 retail dealers, a substantial number of whom operate service stations (as distinguished from grocery stores, garages, and other like outlets), and to more than 200 distributors who, in turn, sell said products to more than 2,800 retail outlets, a substantial number of whom operate service stations. These retail dealers and distributors are divided into the following classifications:

Present Designation	Percentage of Total Regional Gasoline Sales by Each Customer Class 1951 Percent	1955 Percent
1. Company-operated Station	1	0.1
2. Lessee Dealer	32	39.1
3. Contract Dealer	23	18.1
4. Commercial Account	15	16.6
5. Wholesale Dealer	3	1.1
6. Distributor	24	24.0
7. Jobber	2	1.0
TOTAL	100	100.0

8. The usual form of lease entered into by respondent Atlantic and its lessee dealers was for a term of one year, with automatic renewal from year to year unless written notice was given prior to the expiration of any term. Rental provided by any lease was usually a flat rental plus a cents-per-gallon charge, dependent upon location of station, financial condition of lessee and potential income. Such lease contained provisions relating to the use, maintenance and general appearance of the station. In the event of breach of any of the terms, conditions or covenants of the lease by the lessee, it was provided that Atlantic may, at its option, terminate the lease.

9. On April 1, 1953, respondent Atlantic adopted a long-term dealer lease policy under which any lessee dealer who has established a record of two years of satisfactory operation became eligible for a three-year lease with rental remaining the same during the entire period.

10. Tires, batteries and accessories have become a necessary and integral part of the business operation of the Atlantic dealer. He cannot profitably and successfully operate his business without the added revenue from that portion of his business which also enables the dealer to give complete service to his customers. The service station is important to TBA manufacturers as an outlet for distributing to customers. It is to the interest of The Atlantic Refining Company to have its dealers engaged in the sale of TBA as this builds a stronger dealer organization and increases the sale of gasoline.

11. Prior to March 1951 (except as to three districts in which the Sales Commission Plan was tested beginning in 1950) respondent Atlantic purchased TBA for resale either directly or indirectly to Atlantic dealers. This purchase for resale arrangement was first begun in 1932 when respondent Atlantic began the sale and distribution of tires manufactured by the Lee Rubber & Tire Corporation. In 1937 a contract was executed with the Electric Storage Battery Company for the purchase and resale of Exide batteries in the Philadelphia region which was expanded to all marketing regions in 1945. Accessory items were added from time to time, including DuPont polishes, Thermoid fan belts, American Chain and Cable Company's weed chains and Fram oil filters. Distribution of such products to Atlantic dealers and distributors was made by respondent Atlantic either directly or through about forty-five warehouses located throughout its marketing area or through Atlantic supply dealers who distributed such products to other Atlantic dealers.

12. During the period that respondent Atlantic continued on the purchase and resale plan, Atlantic service stations were identified as sellers of such sponsored TBA products as Lee tires and Exide batteries, and to some extent of other TBA handled.

13. In 1951 after a test of the Sales Commission Plan of Goodyear and Firestone in three districts, Atlantic adopted the complete Sales Commission Plan of these companies in all six of its marketing regions. Atlantic assigned the entire marketing area by allocating the New York, New England and Philadelphia-New Jersey regions to Goodyear and the three remaining regions to Firestone.

14. The sales commission agreement entered into between The Atlantic Refining Company and The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, effective March 1, 1951, provided for the payment of commissions to Atlantic on the sales by Goodyear of its tires, batteries and accessories to Atlantic outlets, including service stations, distributors and consignees. The consideration of this agreement was the services to be rendered by the Atlantic sales organization in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA products as outlined in said agreement. This agreement provided, among other things, for the payment of a commission of 10 percent on all sales of TBA to Atlantic dealer outlets, and 7½ percent on all sales of TBA to Atlantic franchise petroleum distributors. The Atlantic Refining Company also entered into a similar sales commission agreement with The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, effective as of March 1, 1951.

15. The services which were performed by The Atlantic Refining Company pursuant to its contract with Goodyear and Firestone in promoting the sale of TBA products consisted principally of the following:

(a) Atlantic personnel, when interviewing prospective dealers for new or established service stations, advised them of the importance of TBA and recommended the TBA products of Goodyear or Firestone, and when dealers were selected would at times give advance notice of station openings or changes to Goodyear or Firestone and introduce the new dealers to the sales representative of Goodyear or Firestone, permitting such salesmen to complete any unfinished business with the outgoing dealer and enabling them to anticipate and to move promptly in handling the requirements of the new dealers.

(b) Atlantic gave assistance to dealers in arranging Goodyear or Firestone TBA supplies; took TBA orders from Atlantic dealers for either Goodyear or Firestone; and recommended the minimum Goodyear or Firestone inventory to be carried by the Atlantic dealer.

(c) Atlantic frequently conducted dealer meetings at which the sale of TBA was discussed, in some instances with the active participation of Goodyear or Firestone.

(d) Atlantic operated training schools for dealers and prospective dealers which included suggestions for displaying and merchandising TBA. In the discussion of TBA, Goodyear or Firestone products were used exclusively during the training school course.

(e) Atlantic incorporated suggestions on merchandising TBA in its dealer magazines and arranged for advertising and promotions, which included TBA products of Goodyear or Firestone, and participated in promotions instituted by either Goodyear or Firestone.

(f) Atlantic also conducted tire clinics jointly with the personnel of Goodyear or Firestone which were important in familiarizing dealers in the care and repair of Goodyear or Firestone tires.

(g) Atlantic made TBA products available to credit card holders, including merchandise sold on deferred payments without carrying charge, which served to augment the sale of Goodyear or Firestone TBA.

16. The sales of Goodyear TBA and commissions paid thereon under the Atlantic-Goodyear Sales Commission Plan were substantial as is shown by the following tabulation:

	Total Sales	Total Commissions
1951	$ 2,445,808	$ 239,250
1952	4,175,890	411,743
1953	5,067,565	500,437
1954	5,284,743	523,048
1955	5,700,121	557,599
1/56–6/56	3,133,905	296,988
TOTAL	$25,808,032	$2,529,065

17. The substantiality of the sales and commissions under the Atlantic-Firestone TBA Sales Commission Plan is shown by the following tabulation for the years 1951 to 1956:

	Total Sales	Total Commissions
1951	$ 3,243,350	$ 299,524
1952	4,349,616	404,948
1953	5,050,381	469,784
1954	4,867,689	452,083
1955	5,562,936	506,199
1/56–6/56	2,545,798	234,317

18. Under date of March 1, 1951, Atlantic sent a form letter to all Atlantic dealers entitled "A Statement of Atlantic's TBA Policy". This letter announced the adoption of the TBA Sales Commission Plan and included therein the statement that "Your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice". Under date of August 28, 1962, respondent Atlantic addressed a similar form letter to all its dealers entitled, "A Restatement of Atlantic's TBA Policy". Under date of June 24, 1955, a similar letter entitled "No Forcing" was sent to all Atlantic dealers, and since that time has been given to new Atlantic dealers.

19. It is the contention of counsel supporting the complaint that because of the relationship, contractual and otherwise, between Atlantic and its station operators, consignees and distributors, the adoption of the Sales Commission Plan of selling and promoting the sale of TBA entered into by Atlantic with Goodyear and Firestone has a tendency to lessen, restrain, prevent or eliminate competition in the sale of TBA, and has deprived other suppliers of TBA of a substantial portion of the TBA business of the Atlantic petroleum outlets.

20. In support of the charges of the complaint, sixteen former Atlantic dealers were called to testify in this proceeding. With the exception of three of these dealers, they testified to various forms of coercion, adopted by Atlantic salesmen in an effort to induce them to purchase sponsored TBA. Some of these witnesses testified that they had received the so-called non-forcing letter, but that they were told by Atlantic salesmen that these letters were not controlling insofar as purchases of non-sponsored TBA was concerned. The testimony of the witnesses called to support the complaint pertaining to coercion is as follows:

(a) John Chambers, an Atlantic lessee from November 1952 to November 1954, purchased the bulk of his TBA from the Goodyear supplier. Atlantic salesmen were always reminding him, that when his lease expired or was cancelled Atlantic would only accept sponsored merchandise, and that outside merchandise would not be accepted at all. This witness also testified that it was pointed out to him on a number of occasions that the acceptance or rejection of the Goodyear plan was up to the dealers.

(b) James Matthews, an Atlantic lessee from 1947 to 1957, was told at a meeting that dealers were free to buy wherever they saw fit, but whenever salesmen called they told him differently. At the time of the change-over from Lee to Goodyear, his Lee signs were removed from his station, and he was told to get rid of Lee tires and Auto-Lite batteries and handle Goodyear. Matthews testified that he discontinued the Lee tires because he did not want his lease cancelled because of non-sponsored TBA. He was requested by Atlantic salesmen in 1953 to sign a mutual cancellation, but he promised to follow the line and went 100 percent with Goodyear. He took ten Auto-Lite batteries in trade, to which objection was made. Atlantic also objected to his handling DuPont anti-freeze. Matthews left the station in May 1957 due to bad health. He recalled receiving non-forcing letter dated March 1, 1951.

(c) Aniello L. Iacono, an Atlantic lessee from 1952 to 1954, had difficulty with Parris, the authorized TBA supplier, and began buying non-sponsored tires and batteries. He was asked by Atlantic salesmen to get rid of the tires and batteries and when he refused, the salesman made an inspection of his place and claimed he was using untrained personnel, improper uniform, improper display, and maintaining a dirty station. His lease was not renewed.

(d) Isidore Jack Pollock, an Atlantic lessee from 1940 to 1953, testified that Atlantic salesmen objected to his purchase of a number of Lee tires at a special price, however, the sales supervisor stated that this would be satisfactory because of the number of years that Pollock had been with Atlantic, and he continued to purchase Lee tires thereafter. He purchased some Bowers batteries, and salesmen told him he was going to have his lease cancelled. Pollock left the station to take over a tavern.

(e) Francis J. Ballaron, an Atlantic lessee from 1953 to 1957, carried Goodyear tires and batteries purchased through Miller, an authorized distributor. He kept non-sponsored tires on oil rack where Atlantic would not see them. Ballaron testified that he left the station because of pressure every month for not buying TBA where he should.

(f) James M. Meyers, Jr., an Atlantic dealer from 1950 to 1951, testified that he discussed non-forcing letter with Atlantic salesmen who told him to try buying other merchandise and find out what the letter meant.

(g) Norris Stein, was an Atlantic lessee, beginning July 26, 1954. About six months later he discontinued exclusive purchase of Firestone and was told by Atlantic salesmen that he would not long be an Atlantic operator. He stated that he had received no-forcing letter of June 22, 1955. Terminated his lease for reasons not involving TBA.

(h) Thomas J. Sullivan, Jr., an Atlantic lessee from 1953 to 1954, was told that Atlantic would like him to obtain all his products from Firestone. He bought some Bowers batteries and also Exide and was told by Atlantic salesman not to sell the batteries as they were not as good as Firestone and that he didn't want them displayed in the station. He removed the batteries from display. Sullivan further testified that he returned the Exide batteries and discontinued the Bowers batteries as he felt that if he rubbed Atlantic the wrong way that he would be in their disfavor, and that his lease might not be renewed. He stated that the Atlantic representative made no direct threats, but always left the impression that if he did not operate the way Atlantic wanted him to, the chances were that his lease would not be renewed. The Atlantic salesman always questioned him when he bought non-sponsored items and gave him the impression that he was expected to buy Firestone products. The salesman would ask him from time to time why he did not buy Firestone, and he got to the point where he bought all items from Firestone because he was afraid of no lease renewal. It was put to him that he would not be forced to buy Firestone products, but Atlantic more or less expected him to do so. Sullivan sent in cancellation of lease because of price controversy.

(i) John Galle, an Atlantic lessee from 1954 to 1956, discussed with Atlantic salesman an offer of batteries and tires at prices lower than Firestone, and salesman informed him that he had signed an agreement to purchase TBA from Firestone and should not go against this agreement, and in addition Atlantic would not like to see competitive brands to Firestone in the station. He did not purchase these items, but continued to purchase Firestone tires and batteries. He received the non-forcing letter on June 22, 1955, but did not discuss it with the Atlantic salesman.

(j) Harry N. Hawes, an Atlantic lessee beginning in 1945, had three stations. In the first station he bought only Firestone TBA. In the second station carried Lee tires, and Atlantic salesman wanted to know what they were doing there, but he continued to handle them. In the third station he sold only Lee tires and some accessories from Firestone without much comment from Atlantic. Lease was not renewed on the second station, and the third station lease was cancelled at his request. Atlantic salesman refused to let the new dealer take over the Lee tires and batteries on hand.

(k) Richard Brown, Atlantic lessee from October 1955 to April 1957, because of dissatisfaction with Firestone, began to purchase Goodrich tires. Atlantic salesman told him that he did not like the purchase of non-sponsored items, as it was affecting his salary.

(l) James Parag, an Atlantic lessee from August 1, 1955, to March 1956, became dissatisfied with Firestone and began purchasing Goodyear tires and accessories from different sources. When Atlantic salesman saw the merchandise on his shelves he told him that he could not handle them, that if he did not handle what Atlantic handled he would

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.

Commissioners:

EARL W. KINTNER, Chairman,
ROBERT T. SECREST,
SIGURD ANDERSON,
WILLIAM C. KERN.

IN THE MATTER of THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, a corporation, and THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY, a corporation.	Docket 6486.

OPINION OF THE COMMISSION

By Kintner, Chairman:

This proceeding is based upon an amended complaint charging The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and its wholly owned selling subsidiary, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Goodyear") and The Atlantic Refining Company with acts, practices and agreements constituting a violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. 15 U. S. C. §45 (1958). Respondents answered admitting in part the allegations of the complaint but denying that Section 5 had been contravened.

The principal issue framed by the pleadings is the legality of a contract between these respondents calling for the lose his lease, and also because it also affected the salesman's commission.

(m) James R. Kelly, an Atlantic lessee from September 1952 to March 1953, began with Firestone TBA. Later sold whatever tires customers wanted. Atlantic salesman would not let him change window valances, he was told to leave them alone to keep the station uniform. Had some Goodyear and Goodrich tires which he kept in the back room. He felt he would get in trouble if he did not.

21. Certain representatives of suppliers of TBA, who were selling in competition with respondent Goodyear, were called as witnesses in this proceeding. This testimony was taken in three areas—Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Wilmington, Delaware, and Baltimore, Maryland. These parties testified generally that they had difficulty in selling TBA to Atlantic stations and testified specifically as to reasons given by certain Atlantic dealers for not buying or selling their TBA items. This testimony as to reasons given by Atlantic dealers for not purchasing competitive TBA was allowed under the authority of Lawlor vs. Loewe, 235 U. S. 522. This latter testimony was received not as proof of the truth of the facts recited, but for the purpose of showing the state of mind of the dealer. This testimony, however, is competent to show that dealers did not purchase a substantial amount of competitive non-sponsored TBA because of their feeling that they were required to purchase Goodyear or Firestone.

22. In the course of its defense in this proceeding, The Atlantic Refining Company introduced the testimony of thirty-six Atlantic dealers and two ex-dealers. Substantially all of these witnesses testified to selling non-sponsored TBA in varying amounts without objection by Atlantic. Most of them testified to having received the non-forcing letter issued by Atlantic similar to the letter of March 1, 1951, which this record shows was delivered to all its dealers and prospective dealers.

23. The hearing examiner recognized that present dealers appearing to testify were under considerable pressure because they were naturally interested in not jeopardizing the renewal of their leases. The record as a whole shows that there were no exclusive dealers in the sense that they confined themselevs entirely to sponsored TBA, as all dealers carried some non-sponsored TBA to satisfy demands of their customers either in varying amounts or on a pick-up basis. Many of the stations do not have the space or finances to stock a complete line of tires and batteries, but instead purchase non-sponsored as well as sponsored items on a pick-up basis to satisfy customer demand. There was also in some instances evidence of confusion as to the definition of accessories among the dealers, as some included as accessories items generally considered as repair parts, as distinguished from accessories, and some dealers testified to carrying non-sponsored items which were, in fact, not supplied by Firestone or Goodyear. Many of the dealers called maintained a high sales volume in gasoline gallonage and also oil, and Atlantic would not jeopardize this gallonage by pressure tactics sufficient to irritate or alienate such dealers.

24. It is clear from the record in this proceeding that the Atlantic dealers did not consider the non-forcing letter as giving to them free and unhampered authority and the blessing of Atlantic to handle whatever TBA they might see fit. Both the dealers and the Atlantic salesmen accepted this letter for what it said; namely, that the dealer at the time of the change-over and prospective dealers thereafter had the right to select or reject the TBA sales program offered by Atlantic. The prospective dealer making application for an Atlantic station would not likely reject offhand the program submitted by Atlantic, and such rejection could very well affect his selection as an Atlantic dealer. After a dealer selected a TBA program, the Atlantic salesmen insisted, and saw to it, that the dealer hewed to the line, insofar as the more important items of TBA were concerned. The salesman would be expected to insist upon the purchase of sponsored TBA, as such purchases were reflected in the commission which the salesman received.

25. After giving consideration to the testimony of the various witnesses appearing in this proceeding, and giving consideration to their demeanor and credibility, it is the opinion of the hearing examiner that the record in this proceeding as a whole indicates that coercion and pressure were used on a substantial number of dealers to induce them to purchase sponsored TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of non-sponsored items.

CONCLUSIONS

1. The complaint does not charge, nor does the evidence introduced in this proceeding prove, the existence of a conspiracy between Goodyear and Atlantic to restrict and restrain competition in the sale and distribution of TBA products.

2. There is no evidence that The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, or The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., engaged in, or participated in, any of acts or practices designed to force dealers and distributors of The Atlantic Refining Company to purchase Goodyear TBA products.

3. Neither the sales commission contract between Atlantic and Goodyear nor the contracts between Atlantic and its dealers and distributors contain any clause or provision requiring such dealers or distributors to purchase only Goodyear TBA.

4. In making a determination as to whether leases made by Atlantic with its dealers are used to suppress competition, the extent to which they are in conformity with reasonable requirements in the field of commerce in which they are used will have a direct bearing on their legality. The housekeeping provisions of the leases are not unreasonable or oppressive, and the renewal and cancellation provisions of the leases are in conformity with those which ordinarily appear in many leases of property.

5. The consideration for the payment of commission to Atlantic under the sales commission contract is based upon substantial services rendered by Atlantic in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA to Atlantic dealers and distributors.

6. No inference or implication can be drawn from the contractual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers, that the degree of control by Atlantic over its dealers is sufficient to force its dealers to purchase only sponsored TBA.

7. The evidence in this proceeding shows that leases have, on occasion, been cancelled because of TBA practices involving the purchase or display of non-sponsored TBA products.

8. It is further concluded that for the purpose of inducing the purchase of sponsored TBA by Atlantic dealers, Atlantic representatives did, in fact, coerce, and attempt to coerce, and force Atlantic dealers to purchase substantial quantities of Goodyear and Firestone TBA, and Atlantic accepted the benefits of such acts and practices. These acts of coercion consisted of demands that dealers discontinue the purchasing and displaying of non-sponsored TBA under threat of lease cancellation, non-renewal of lease or other corrective action. Such coercion need not be 100 percent effective in order to constitute an unfair method of competition or unfair act or practice in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

9. The charges of the complaint are sufficiently broad to sustain an order prohibiting overt acts of coercion even though it be found that the contracts entered into by the parties are not illegal.

10. The Federal Trade Commission has jurisdiction of the subject matter of this proceeding and of the respondents named herein.

11. The acts and practices of The Atlantic Refining Company, as herein found, which involve coercion of its dealers are all to the prejudice of the public and have a tendency and capacity to restrict, restrain or lessen competition in the sale of TBA products and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

ORDER

IT IS ORDERED that respondent The Atlantic Refining Company, a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the promotion, offering for sale, sale and distribution of tires, inner tubes, batteries and other automotive parts, accessories and supplies (hereinafter referred to as "TBA products"), in commerce, as commerce is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly

1. Inducing, or attempting to induce, the purchase of TBA products of a particular supplier by Atlantic dealers by threatening to cancel or to not renew lease of dealer or to take other retaliatory action if said products are not purchased.

2. Threatening the cancellation or non-renewal of any contract or lease if the dealer purchases or continues to purchase TBA products not sponsored, recommended or approved by the respondent, or the sale of which is not promoted by the respondent.

3. Threatening the cancellation or non-renewal of any contract or lease if the dealer displays or continues to display TBA products not sponsored, recommended or approved by the respondent, or the sale of which is not promoted by the respondent.

4. The performance of any acts of intimidation or coercion, either through statements, oral or written, made directly to dealers or by representatives of respondent, which are designed to, or have, the purpose or effect of intimidating or coercing respondent's dealers or other customers to purchase TBA products sold by any designated supplier sponsored, recommended or approved by respondent.

5. Compelling, or attempting to compel, dealers by any means or method to sell and distribute only products supplied by a designated supplier sponsored, recommended or approved by respondent.

6. Preventing, or attempting to prevent its dealers by means of threats, intimidation or coercion, from handling or displaying TBA or other similar products which the respondent does not sponsor, recommend or approve, or the sale of which is not promoted by the respondent.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint be, and it is hereby, dismissed as to respondents The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.

Hearing Examiner.

OPINION AND ORDER OF THE COMMISSION.

The Order begins at page B-67.

payment by Goodyear of a sales commission to Atlantic in return for sales assistance in promoting automotive tires, batteries, and accessories (hereinafter referred to as "TBA" or "TBA products") of Goodyear to retail and wholesale petroleum outlets of Atlantic. In addition, Atlantic is charged with having entered into a substantially identical agreement with The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, and Goodyear is charged with having entered into such agreements with a number of oil companies other than Atlantic, including Shell Oil Company.[1] Although Atlantic and Goodyear are the only respondents in the instant case, Shell and Firestone are joined as respondents in a companion case, Docket 6487, and in another companion case, Docket 6485, The Texas Company and The B. F. Goodrich Company are paired as respondents.

The complaint charges, in substance, that the success enjoyed by Goodyear and Firestone in selling to Atlantic outlets has been purchased at the expense of competing TBA suppliers at the manufacturing and wholesale levels. Counsel supporting the complaint contend that the Atlantic-Goodyear and Atlantic-Firestone sales commission contracts are unlawful because, in conjunction with Atlantic's economic power over its ostensibly independent wholesale and retail petroleum outlets, these contracts operate to stifle the free choice of Atlantic's retail and wholesale dealers insofar as their TBA purchases are concerned. Among the unlawful competitive effects stemming from Atlantic's sales commission contracts charged by the complaint are these: (1) That suppliers of TBA competing with Goodyear and Firestone at the wholesale level have been foreclosed from access to Atlantic's retail outlets on the same competitive terms as have been made available to Goodyear and Firestone; (2) That competing manufacturers of tires and other TBA items have been foreclosed from access to Atlantic's wholesale distributors on the same competitive terms as have been made available to Goodyear and Firestone; (3) That competition between Goodyear and Firestone in selling to wholesale and retail outlets of Atlantic has been destroyed; (4) That a substantial number of Atlantic's petroleum distributors and service station operators have been denied their right to act as independent businessmen in exercising freedom of choice as to TBA products which they may purchase and stock for resale; and (5) That the consuming public has been deprived of the benefits of free competition at the wholesale and retail levels insofar as TBA distribution through service station outlets under the sales commission plan is concerned.

Respondents deny these allegations and assert that their sales commission contract is a legitimate and competitive method of distributing TBA which benefits suppliers of TBA products, oil companies, dealers and distributors of petroleum products and the consuming public.

After hearings extending from the latter part of 1956 into November 1958, the hearing examiner filed his initial decision on October 23, 1959, dismissing the complaint as to Goodyear but holding that Atlantic, by forcing a substantial number of its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA through threats of lease cancellation or other retaliatory action, has engaged in unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices in commerce in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. He further held that the charges of the complaint are sufficiently broad to sustain an order prohibiting overt acts of coercion on the part of Atlantic even though the sales commission contracts themselves are not illegal. An order was entered against Atlantic prohibiting future acts of coercion or intimidation designed to force Atlantic dealers to purchase TBA products sponsored by Atlantic.

Both sides have appealed from the initial decision. Counsel supporting the complaint contend that, while the order entered by the hearing examiner is well supported by the evidence of record, it will not be an effective means of remedying the unlawful effects on competition caused by the sales commission plan. They seek an order restraining respondents from continuing with their present sales commission agreement and enjoining them from entering into similar agreements in the future. They also contend that Atlantic should be enjoined from purchasing TBA products from any manufacturer or other vendor of such products for resale to any wholesalers or retailers of Atlantic petroleum products, ". . . or for distribution in any other manner, directly or indirectly, to any of the aforesaid wholesalers or retailers of Atlantic petroleum products."

Reply briefs were filed by Atlantic and Goodyear to the appeal brief of counsel supporting the complaint, and by counsel supporting the complaint to the appeal brief of Atlantic. Oral argument was heard by the Commission on June 23, 1960, and the matter is now before the Commission for decision. We find that Atlantic has in fact coerced a substantial number of its dealers to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA through threats of lease cancellation or other retaliatory action. We further find that Atlantic has sufficient economic power over its wholesale and retail distributors to cause them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics. For reasons set forth hereinafter, we conclude that the exercise of this power by Atlantic through the use of the sales commission plan in favor of Goodyear constitutes an unfair method of competition and an unfair act or practice in commerce within the meaning of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Characteristics of the Sales Commission Plan

Motorists may purchase replacement TBA items from several major classes of distributors. Manufacturers of these items, for example, Goodyear and Firestone, maintain either company-owned or franchised wholesale and retail distribution outlets in all of the marketing areas for TBA products considered in the course of the hearings in this case. Gasoline service stations constitute a second major class of outlets for TBA products. According to a 1947 market survey relied upon by Goodyear in implementing its sales commission program with The Shamrock Oil and Gas Corporation of Amarillo, Texas, motorists purchase approximately 37 percent of their replacement tires and tubes, 44 percent of their replacement batteries, and 20 percent of their automotive accessories from gasoline service stations.[2]

The complaint in this case alleges that "service stations by the nature of their business, are particularly well adapted to be outlets for the sale of TBA products to the motorist consumer. They constitute a large and increasingly important market for TBA products." The truth of this allegation is conceded by both Goodyear and Atlantic, and Goodyear also admits that it ". . . sells TBA products directly and through wholesalers to many customers, including service stations who purchase for resale to consumers for replacement use in their automobiles."

Service station operators may purchase their requirements of TBA from two principal sources: (1) Local wholesale TBA dealers, representing Firestone, or Goodyear, or some other TBA manufacturer; or (2) Oil companies chiefly engaged in refining and distributing petroleum products which also purchase TBA products from manufacturers of these items, for resale along with the refinery products such oil companies distribute through their respective marketing organizations. TBA purchased by oil companies for resale may either be branded with a particular oil company's principal brand, for example, "Gulf," or with a private brand controlled by an oil company but used exclusively for TBA and not for refinery products, for example "Atlas," or with the supplying manufacturer's own brand, for example, "Lee" (tires) or "Exide" (batteries).

[2] Atlantic estimated in 1948 that approximately 21 percent of all replacement passenger tires are sold by service stations. Although Atlantic's estimate is considerably lower than Goodyear's, it is nevertheless clear that service stations account for a substantial percentage of total TBA replacement items sold to motorists.

No particular term is used in the industry to describe the marketing technique whereby service station operators purchase TBA from independent local wholesalers, but the term "purchase-resale" is customarily used to characterize the marketing technique whereby oil companies purchase and resell TBA to their respective service station dealers. The sales commission method of distributing TBA is a hybrid deriving certain of its attributes from the first and other attributes from the second of these marketing techniques. Both the purchase-resale plan and the sales commission plan make use of the marketing facilities of marketing oil companies, but in different ways and with differing competitive effects. This may be illustrated by contrasting the purchase-resale method of distributing TBA used by Atlantic prior to 1951 with the sales commission method adopted by Atlantic in 1951 and used by the company since that time.

Atlantic's Purchase and Resale Plan. Sometime in 1932, Atlantic commenced to purchase "Lee" tires from the Lee Rubber and Tire Corporation and to resell such tires to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors. Later, in 1937, Atlantic commenced to purchase "Exide" batteries from the Electric Storage Battery Company (hereinafter referred to as "Exide") and resell such batteries, along with "Lee" tires, to Atlantic dealers. Thereafter, Atlantic began to purchase and resell the following automotive accessories:

Products	Supplier
DuPont polishes and chemicals	E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company Wilmington, Delaware
Thermoid fan belts and radiator hose	Thermoid Corporation Trenton, New Jersey
Fram oil filters	Fram Corporation Providence, Rhode Island
Schrader valves	A. Schrader Sons Brooklyn, New York

Products	Supplier
Weed chains	American Chain and Cable Company York, Pennsylvania

Among the duties undertaken by Atlantic in connection with this program were the purchasing, financing, shipping, warehousing and selling of TBA items to its various classes of retail and wholesale petroleum dealers. Commenting on his company's TBA program in 1950, Mr. S. J. Heideman, TBA Manager for Atlantic, commented that "We receive a good gross margin in keeping with the duties left to us. . . ." Moreover, the overall satisfaction of Atlantic's dealers with the Lee-Exide arrangement was evidenced by the results of a TBA brand preference survey undertaken by Atlantic's Sales Research Section in 1948 and 1949. More than 1,000 service station dealers representing seven major oil companies, including Atlantic, located in 47 cities from Massachusetts to Florida were interviewed during the course of this survey. Of the Atlantic dealers interviewed, 67 percent preferred Lee tires and 79 percent preferred Exide batteries over competing brands of tires and batteries. Eleven percent of Atlantic's dealers stated a preference for Goodyear tires, 4 percent for Firestone tires, and the remainder announced a preference for various other tire brands. No preference for any particular brands of accessory items was found to exist, although "A definitely unsatisfactory supplier-dealer relationship" on accessories was observed. Sixty-seven percent of the Atlantic dealers contacted indicated that they would rather obtain their TBA requirements from several sources rather than a single source, the principal reasons given therefor being price advantages and the variety of brands. Of the remaining 33 percent of Atlantic dealers, who preferred a single source of supply for TBA products, less than 4 percent gave as a reason the fact that the single supplier could provide them with a complete line of TBA—better service was given as a reason by 35 percent of the Atlantic dealers.

preferring a single source of supply, and price was given as a reason by an additional 32 percent.

Atlantic's Changeover to the Sales Commission Plan

Contemporaneously with the TBA brand preference survey of service station dealers described above, Atlantic management was actively considering possible alternatives to their purchase-resale arrangement with Lee. On January 19, 1948, exploratory letters were sent to five major tire manufacturers, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, United States Rubber Company, The B. F. Goodrich Company, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, and General Tire & Rubber Company, inquiring ". . . what interest you may have in the sale of your tires and tubes through ATLANTIC outlets." The tire companies were informed of Atlantic's desire ". . . to consider your propositions on first line, second line, and private brand, or as many of these lines as you merchandise."

To assist the tire companies in preparing their quotations, Atlantic estimated it would require approximately 300,000 passenger tires and 40,000 truck tires annually, with tube requirements approximating 70 percent of tire requirements. Proposals were requested not only as to principal brands of the tire companies ("Goodyear," "Firestone," etc.) but also as to secondary brands controlled by these companies ("Kelly-Springfield," "Fisk," "Federal," "Miller" and "Hood") and as to private brands as well. Mansfield Tire and Rubber Company and Lee were also contacted and requested to submit proposals on a private brand tire.

A detailed analysis of responses received from the various tire companies was presented to Mr. D. T. Colley, Vice President in Charge of Domestic Sales of Atlantic, in a memorandum of June 22, 1948, from the company's TBA Manager, Mr. Heideman. This memorandum concluded with the statement:

> "This presentation and Atlantic's benefits with the several companies has been discussed at length with > the members of the T. B. A. Products Committee. It was their unanimous opinion that Lee appeared to be the best choice for our company. To their approval, I would like to add my own, since it is my opinion after careful analysis that the Lee franchise is the best available at the present time for Atlantic."

In a subsequent memorandum of August 24, 1948, Mr. Heideman set forth several reasons why a proposed experiment then under consideration involving the sale of Firestone tires in one sales district of Atlantic should not be adopted:

> "It is apparent . . . that it would be unreasonable to expect too great an expansion of our present sales by the addition of a better known tire. As a matter of fact, it is our opinion that there is a very real possibility of a smaller market with Firestone due to their presently established company stores and distributors. Volume purchase requirements would leave a great number of our dealers in a poor competitive position.
>
> ". . . neither Firestone batteries nor accessories have the national acceptance of the lines we presently handle . . . [T]here is certainly an indication that consumer acceptance of the Firestone brand in batteries is very limited."

Nevertheless, negotiations with the tire companies continued throughout the remainder of 1948, and in May 1949, Goodyear expressed its willingness to offer a TBA program to Atlantic. However, it was Firestone which was selected for Atlantic's first experiment with the sales commission plan. In a letter of January 10, 1950, to the Regional Manager of its New York Region, an Atlantic official explained:

> "As you know, for the past year we have been studying T. B. A. as to its profitability to the Company. Our most recent findings indicate that it is questionable whether this venture is paying us to the degree that the effort expended warrants.

"In our approaches to the subject, we have had discussions with various major tire manufacturers who, as you know, are interested in handling the entire T. B. A. line, paying us a commission.

* * * * * * *

"The proposition that seems most acceptable to us is one offered by Firestone. I will not attempt to go into detail covering this proposition, but when you come to Philadelphia for the Regional Manager's Meeting next week, Mr. Heidemann (sic) plans to sit down with you and go over the proposition with the thought in mind that you will elect to have your Region be the guinea-pig."

As it turned out, however, the Firestone plan was not introduced into the New York area. Instead, operations under the Firestone commission plan began in Atlantic's Erie, Pennsylvania, district on March 30, 1950, and in the Wilmington, Delaware, district on April 4, 1950. Operations under a sales commission plan with Goodyear commenced on an experimental basis in Atlantic's Newark, New Jersey, sales district on June 12, 1950. After these programs were instituted, Atlantic's Sales Research Section conducted a secret poll in July and August, 1950 among 600 of the 750 Atlantic dealers and distributors in the three TBA test districts. The purpose of this poll was to determine the preference of Atlantic dealers as between the Lee-Exide program and the sales commission program. Of the 123 dealers responding to the poll, 45 percent preferred the new sales commission plan, 40 percent preferred the former Lee-Exide arrangement, and 15 percent showed no preference for either plan.

In December, 1950, Atlantic contacted seven manufacturers of batteries, including Exide and Gould-National Batteries, Inc., "... in an attempt to discover whether they had at present or contemplated in the future a battery program for direct dealer merchandising similar to the commission plan offered by certain tire companies." This suggests that Atlantic was considering limiting the sales commission contracts with Firestone and Goodyear to tires and tubes only, or perhaps to tires, tubes and automotive accessories only, with a separate sales commission arrangement for batteries with a supplier who could furnish a more widely-known battery than the "Firestone" and "Goodyear" brands. (Actually, Goodyear does not manufacture batteries, but instead purchases batteries marked with the "Goodyear" label from Electric Auto-Lite Company and Gould-National Batteries, Inc.)

Favorable replies were received from several of the battery manufacturers, with Exide showing particular interest in such a program. This company's manager for automotive replacement sales responded to the Atlantic inquiry on December 22, 1950:

> "Currently all Exide automotive replacement battery sales to dealers are made through our Wholesale Distributors, thus affording prompt delivery through many warehouses.
> "Your letter of December 15 inquires as to our plans for a commission arrangement to be offered national oil accounts on direct sales to dealers. We believe that our experience with this type of operation in past years should be of great value to you. Therefore, I suggest that immediately after the first of January you arrange for a meeting with interested members of your organization for a complete discussion of the many phases of this subject."

Negotiations between Atlantic and Exide were never consummated, however, and on February 14, 1951 a sales official of Exide reported to his superior as follows:

> "Mr. S. J. Heidman (sic), T. B. A. manager of the Atlantic Refining Company called today to give me advance confidential information regarding a decision made this morning by top management of the Atlantic Refining Company regarding future handling of T. B. A. sales to Atlantic dealers.

"Effective as quickly as the changeover can be made, all T. B. A. sales to Atlantic dealers will be handled on a commission arrangement.

. . . . . .

"... Both Firestone and Goodyear had previously been approached regarding a plan whereby they would sell tires only to the Atlantic Refining Company accounts on a commission arrangement and had flatly refused such a plan insisting that either the complete program or none be sold by them."

TBA Manager Heideman submitted a memorandum entitled "T. B. A. Conversion to Firestone & Goodyear Programs" to Vice President Colley of Atlantic on March 21, 1951, summarizing the changeover to the sales commission program:

"On February 14th, the decision was made to swing over to the Commission Plan of T. B. A. marketing effective March 1st. It was arranged for three regions (Philadelphia-New Jersey, New England and New York) to market the program of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and the other three (Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania, and the South) were to market the program of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. The split was largely a matter of regional selection, decided upon by local advantages enjoyed by the respective rubber companies but influenced by staff determinations to have the two rubber companies competing in different localities for an equal share in the development of the Atlantic dealer's T. B. A. business. Although this move was sudden, events leading up to it were developed in an orderly fashion over a period of years.

"It will be interesting to review some of the advantages that we enjoy under the Commission Plan. We are relieved of the purchasing function . . . We do not warehouse or deliver any merchandise; we are not involved in the handling of accounts, such as invoicing or credit and collection work; we do not issue catalogs or price books nor do we have to provide point-of-sale promotional helps. All of these responsibilities as well as sales training help are assumed by the rubber manufacturers. We assist in the selling job as well as in the dealer training and merchandising task, and for this effort receive a commission which varies according to class account and type of merchandise, but has been averaging well over 9%.

". . . We are indeed fortunate in having these two companies competing against one another for a more secure or favorable position with Atlantic. We stand to gain from this arrangement whether we are in a buyer's or seller's market.

"We have tried to estimate how our 1950 actual experience on T. B. A. would have compared with the same volume of performance if it were accomplished under the Commission Plan. Our T. B. A. volume excluding the three test districts amounted to seven and a half million dollars. Our gross profit ranging from 20 to 30% on the different products amounted to approximately $1,664,000. Estimated expenses chargeable to this operation total $2,071,000. This would indicate a loss of about $407,000."[3] (emphasis added)

[3] Whether Atlantic's purchase-resale program was as unprofitable in reality as appeared from the accounting procedures used by the oil company was questioned in a memorandum from the sales manager of Exide to the vice-president of this company in February, 1951:

"The accounting procedure set up by the Atlantic Refining Company was such that expenses charged against T. B. A. sales appeared to make this operation unprofitable.

MAP I, below, shows the manner in which Atlantic's marketing area was finally divided between Goodyear and Firestone. Although the three regions assigned to Firestone constitute a much greater geographical area than do the regions assigned to Goodyear, the TBA sales volume by the two rubber companies to Atlantic dealers and distributors within their respective assigned areas has generally been very nearly the same in every year since 1951, as indicated by TABLE I, below. This table shows that during the first 6 years of Atlantic's operation under the sales commission plan, Firestone's sales volume to Atlantic accounts totalled $26,078,095 and exceeded the sales volume of Goodyear by only $105,000.

TABLE I

As a result of this and because the top management of the Atlantic Refining Company believed that their own men should participate only in the sales of petroleum products, it was decided early in 1950 to try out the Firestone and Goodyear sales commission plan . . ."

NOTE: In 1950, the sales commission plan was used in only 3 of Atlantic's 34 sales districts. The sales commission plan was not introduced in all 34 Atlantic sales districts until March 1, 1951.

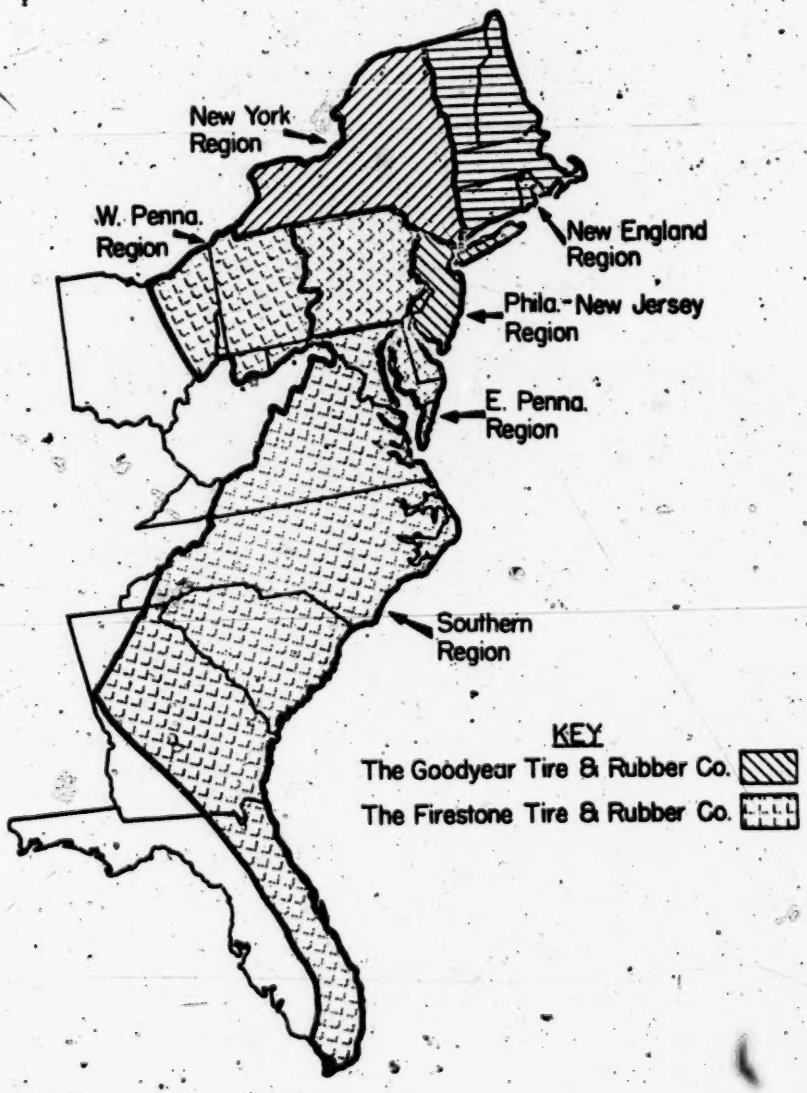
THE ATLANTIC REFINING CO.

DIVISION OF MARKETING REGIONS BY TBA SALES COMMISSION PLANS.

EFFECTIVE MARCH 1, 1951



In 1952, the first full year in which the sales commission plan was operative in all Atlantic sales districts, combined sales of Goodyear and Firestone TBA to Atlantic dealers and distributors amounted to $8,525,506, and the two rubber companies paid a total of $816,691 in sales commissions to Atlantic. The success with which Atlantic transferred its own former TBA sales volume under the purchase-resale plan to Goodyear and Firestone under the sales commission plan may be gauged from the fact that Atlantic's TBA sales volume in 1949, the last full year of operation under the purchase-resale plan, amounted to $6,697,471. In 1950 Atlantic continued the purchase-resale plan in all except 3 of its 29 sales districts, and in that year the oil company's TBA sales volume was $7,581,760.

The sales gains accruing to Goodyear and Firestone as a consequence of their sales commission contracts with Atlantic were accompanied by a corresponding loss in sales by Lee and Exide even though both companies made vigorous efforts to retain the business of Atlantic dealers and distributors after Atlantic switched to the sales commission plan. Lee opened new factory branches in Hartford, Connecticut; Providence, Rhode Island; and Syracuse, New York for this specific purpose. All branches of Exide were instructed to make it "their number one job" to solicit the business of Atlantic dealers and distributors. Nevertheless, within nine months after Atlantic began sponsoring Goodyear TBA on March 1, 1951, Lee concluded that "approximately 25% of the Atlantic Refining Company business will be salvaged this year." Seven months after the changeover, Exide found that it had retained all or part of the business of 22.5 percent of the better Atlantic accounts and all or part of the business of 24.7 percent of the total number of Atlantic accounts. Thus, some 75 percent of Lee-Exide sales to Atlantic distributors and dealers were lost within a nine-month period in 1951, even though a market survey conducted by the Atlantic Sales Research Section in 1949 had shown that 67 percent of Atlantic dealers and distributors preferred Lee tires and 79 percent preferred Exide batteries.

Lee's Vice President in Charge of Sales, Mr. W. F. Hinderscheid, complained bitterly to Atlantic about the wholesale replacement of Lee advertising signs at Atlantic stations with Goodyear advertising signs shortly after the sales commission plan was undertaken on a test basis by Atlantic in 1950:

> "I was under the impression, also, where dealers wanted to continue to handle Lee Tires through us it would be allright for them to do so and we could still have our identification on those locations, however, I find that even though the dealers continue to handle our tires their stations are identified with competitive signs. For instance, in the Newark District our identification is being taken down and Goodyear will be erected even though the dealer still wants to handle Lee Tires."

TBA sales by Firestone and Goodyear to Atlantic outlets continued to grow, and by 1955, the last full year for which data are available, combined sales of the two rubber companies under their sales commission contracts with Atlantic amounted to $11,263,057. In order fully to understand the devastating competitive effects on manufacturers and wholesalers of TBA products competing with Firestone and Goodyear which have resulted from the latter two companies' sales commission contracts with Atlantic, however, some further understanding of the functioning of the sales commission system is necessary.

Mechanics of the Sales Commission System

Goodyear and Firestone maintain either company-owned or franchised wholesale outlets in most of the principal cities and in many smaller communities throughout the entire marketing area of Atlantic Refining Company. Atlantic markets its petroleum products in the Middle Atlantic States (including parts of Ohio and West Virginia), New England (not including Maine) and the Southern Atlantic States. As has been shown, this marketing territory is subdivided into six sales regions, three of which have been assigned to Goodyear and three to Firestone. (See MAP I, supra.)

In cities and towns where Atlantic retail stations are located, such stations are assigned to a local Goodyear distributor (if in Atlantic's New England, New York or Philadelphia-New Jersey sales regions) or to a local Firestone distributor (if in Atlantic's Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania or Southern sales regions). The assigned TBA distributor is intended to be the supply point from which the Atlantic dealer will purchase a substantial percentage of his requirements of TBA.

The vast majority of Atlantic's retail service stations are operated by independent businessmen who either own or lease their stations. These dealers not only buy and sell Atlantic petroleum products, but also offer TBA at their stations, and in addition perform various automotive services and repairs. Atlantic maintains sales offices throughout its marketing area and employs salesmen whose duty it is to solicit orders for Atlantic petroleum products from Atlantic dealers, and to perform other functions for the oil company in its dealings with its service station operators.

When orders for petroleum products are obtained, the salesmen cause such products to be delivered to the Atlantic dealers, who pay for them at time of delivery or at other specified times. The same Atlantic salesmen also act as sales agents for Goodyea or Firestone, soliciting TBA orders from Atlantic dealers, frequently accompanied on their rounds by salesmen employed by either the local Goodyear or Firestone distributors. If TBA orders are obtained, such orders are turned in to the appropriate TBA suppliers—the local distributors of either Goodyear or Firestone—who deliver the merchandise and are paid by the Atlantic dealers. The TBA suppliers, in turn, make reports of such sales to the District Sales Offices of their respective companies, either Goodyear or Firestone.

Under the terms of the sales contracts between Goodyear and Atlantic and Firestone and Atlantic, Atlantic is entitled to a commission amounting to 10 percent of the net sales value of all sponsored (i.e., Goodyear or Firestone) merchandise sold by Atlantic retail dealers, as consideration for the assistance given by the Atlantic sales organization in obtaining TBA orders from Atlantic dealers.[4] These payments are made by Goodyear and Firestone directly to Atlantic each month. Atlantic incurs no expense in connection with the purchasing, financing or warehousing of the TBA so supplied and has received sales commissions from Goodyear and Firestone over the years equivalent to more than 9 percent of the net sales value of all TBA products sold by these rubber companies to Atlantic dealers and distributors.[5]

Tires and tubes comprise the most important of the three components of the TBA line, accounting for about 70

[4] Atlantic has some 236 wholesale distributors, and is entitled to a commission of 7½ percent on purchases of sponsored TBA by these jobbers, compared with 10 percent on purchases by Atlantic's retail dealers.

[5] Goodyear's reasons for entering into its sales commission agreement with Atlantic were set forth in a "Confidential" memorandum of February, 1951, written by Mr. S. A. Gaylord, Goodyear's Manager of Sales to oil company outlets:

> "... As you know we have recognized the desirability of Atlantic distribution for many years and the need for more oil company distribution in the new territory now assigned to us, which represents more than 50% of the Atlantic T. B. A. sales and potential.
>
> "Early last year when supplies were plentiful and signs for the future pointed to over-production and increased competition, we mutually agreed on the marketing experiment with Atlantic in our respective Newark District territories with a commitment for expanded territory if the Goodyear Commission Plan proved successful—which it did.
>
> "It is true that even at a late date we could have withdrawn from our commitment to Atlantic, however, we would have been out of the account for keeps and our competition [Firestone], which placed no restrictions on moving in, would have the account 100 percent.
>
> "... The decision of our Management was made after consideration of all factors and particularly because it gave Goodyear the opportunity of entering into a long-term relationship with Atlantic providing our performance is satisfactory."

percent of total TBA sales to Atlantic outlets, with batteries and accessories representing about 15 percent each. Goodyear produces its own tires and tubes, and the more important categories of automotive accessories, including tire retread and repair materials, fan belts and radiator hose. Batteries marked with the "Goodyear" label are purchased for resale from Electric Auto-Lite Company and Gould-National Batteries, Inc., while the following accessories are purchased by Goodyear for resale under the original manufacturer's own brands:

Accessory	Brand	Manufacturer
Spark Plugs	AC	AC Spark Plug Div., General Motors Corp.
Oil Filters	AC	Same as above
Oil Filters	Purolator	Purolator Products, Inc.
Cleaners, Polishes and Waxes	du Pont	E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc.

The sales commission method of distributing TBA products thus affects competitive relationships among producers and distributors of various products, all linked by but one common factor: the motor vehicle. As a consequence, in order to show the net work of unlawful trade restraints and inhibitions permeating the sales commission system of distributing TBA, it is necessary first to describe the marketing structure of Atlantic and to define the manner in which this company exercises control over its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors, and next to describe how the sales commission plan enables Goodyear to integrate such market control into its own system of distribution.

Distribution System of Atlantic Refining Company

Atlantic is a major integrated producer, refiner, and distributor of petroleum products. The company was organized in 1860, and was acquired by Standard Oil Company in 1874. Since the dissolution of the Standard Oil Trust in 1911, Atlantic has been operated as a separate corporate entity. In 1948, Mr. S. J. Heideman of Atlantic stated that "Atlantic's percentage of the national gasoline market is 2½% . . ."; and since the oil company markets its gasoline along the Atlantic Coast states and in parts of Ohio and West Virginia only, it may be inferred that Atlantic's share of gasoline sales in its own marketing area is substantially in excess of 2½ percent. Sales and operating revenue of this oil company totalled more than one-half billion dollars in 1954.

Atlantic markets its refinery products to three major classes of customers: (1) wholesale distributors; (2) retailers (chiefly service stations but including also garages, grocery stores, restaurants with outside gasoline pumps, etc.); and (3) commercial accounts. This opinion is not concerned with the last-named group, which accounted for 16.6 percent of total gasoline sales by Atlantic in 1954, as these accounts are customers who purchase for their own consumption and not for resale.

Atlantic sold gasoline and other petroleum products directly to some 5,537 retail customers in 1956, and these direct retail dealers accounted for 57.2 percent of total gasoline sales by Atlantic in 1955. Atlantic's direct dealers are of two classes: (1) Lessee dealers, who accounted for 39.1 percent of total Atlantic gasoline sales in 1955; and

(2) Contract dealers, who accounted for 18.1 percent of gasoline sales by Atlantic in the same year. Shown below in TABLE II are the numbers of lessee and contract dealers purchasing petroleum products directly from Atlantic in each of its marketing regions in June, 1956.

TABLE II

Lessee Dealers. The principal characteristic distinguishing lessee dealers from contract dealers is that the former do not own their own business properties, but instead lease them from Atlantic. Lease terms range from three months to three years; most lessee-dealers operate under one-year leases, however. The leasehold instrument does not require the lessee to handle Atlantic products, but does provide that the premises shall be used for the operation of a "first-class automotive service station retailing petroleum products and TBA merchandise normally handled at competitive service station outlets." Rental payments by lessees are based on specified percentages of gross monthly sales of all types of merchandise, including TBA. These percentages are as follows:

0 percent	First $500 monthly
6 percent	Next $2000 monthly
5 percent	Next $2000 monthly
4 percent	Next $2000 monthly
3 percent	Over $6500 monthly

At the time he executes his lease with Atlantic, each lessee-dealer is required to sign a separate document known as an "Eleven Point Lease Letter". This letter defines standards of operation for Atlantic lessee-dealers. Illustrative of these is the standard for "Housekeeping":

> "1. Housekeeping—Clean, sanitary premises, inside and out."

Other standards set forth in the "Eleven Point Lease Letter" are "Use and Upkeep", "Display", "Illumination", "Personnel", "Hours of Operation" ("Uniform daily operating schedule based on buying habits of potential trade in the area"), "Services", "Adequate Inventory", "Sales Promotion", "Prices", and "Accounting". These standards of operation are implemented by Atlantic not only through the surveillance of its sales force, but also by the employment of "Phantom Customer Inspectors".[6]

Since its adoption on April 1, 1953, the "Eleven Point Lease Letter" has been used by Atlantic to interpret and enforce Paragraph Three of dealer leases which, as noted, provides that ". . . the sole purpose and use of the leased premises shall be the lawful, diligent and businesslike operation of a first-class automotive service station . . .", thus the "Lease Letter" is an integral part of the lease itself. This is shown by the regularity with which Atlantic warns lessee-dealers in writing that their leases will be terminated if stated defaults with respect to the provisions of the [6] Witness John Chambers, former Atlantic lessee-dealer who testified in support of the complaint in this proceeding, received the following letter from his former Atlantic District Sales Manager on October 14, 1954:

---

"Dear John:

"Our Phantom Customer Inspector has just reported to us that you received a 299 out of a possible 300 on a recent inspection.

"This is the kind of job which makes us all very happy and certainly is an important factor in running a profitable service station."

Witness Chambers' lease was subsequently terminated because he refused to go along with Atlantic's pricing policy and because he did not purchase sufficient quantities of sponsored TBA.

"Eleven Point Lease Letter" are not remedied within fifteen days.[7]

Prior to about August 1953, Atlantic's written agreements with its lessee-dealers also included an "Atlantic Franchise Agreement", providing for their purchase of motor fuels and automotive lubricants from their oil company lessor under stated terms and conditions. In recent years, only automotive lubricants have been covered by written purchase agreements between Atlantic and its lessees. Nevertheless, the facts of record clearly establish that Atlantic lessees purchase and resell Atlantic motor fuels exclusively.

Notwithstanding the economic power possessed by an oil company as a consequence of being both landlord and supplier to its lessee-dealer customers, the powers and responsibilities of an oil company's lessee-dealer ". . . satisf[y] all the requirements of an independent enterprise." United States v. Richfield Oil Corp., 99 F. Supp. 280, 288 (1951) aff'd, 337 U. S. 922 (1952). Judge Yankwich's comments in the Richfield case as to the relationship of an oil company to its lessee-dealers apply with equal force to the instant case:

> "Implicit in the contract is the lessee's assumption of obligation and responsibility for his own acts upon the premises and those of his employees in their relation to the public, who come in contact with them during the time of his dominion. The lessee is not the employee of Richfield. Richfield

---

[7] Here, for example, is a letter dated December 8, 1953 to dealer Michael J. Clifford, Baltimore, Maryland:

"1. From observations, we note that your regular hours of operation are such that we believe your market area is not being properly supplied.

"2. We also note from observations that inventories maintained in your station are not adequate to serve normal customer needs without delay."

(This dealer's lease was terminated January 4, 1954, for noncompliance with the above defaults.)

pays him no wages or other remuneration. He must carry his own workmen's compensation. He is not carried on their books as an employee for the purpose of social security taxes or any of the withholding taxes, state or federal, incidental to the employer-employee relationship. Richfield is not required to withhold any moneys from him for income tax purposes. Neither are they required to perform any of the duties just mentioned as to any of the employees who may assist the lessee in the conduct of the station or of any auxiliary repair work upon the premises. The lessee is solely responsible for his own conduct and that of his employees which may cause damage to the persons or property of others." [99 F. Supp. at 288]

Contract Dealers. There were 3,044 contract dealers of Atlantic as of June 1956, and of this number about 50 percent operated service stations (as distinguished from grocery stores, garages, and similar outlets with gasoline pumps on the premises). Non-service station outlets generally do not purchase and resell TBA products; all service station outlets, however, are regarded as potential purchasers of TBA under Atlantic's agreements with Goodyear and Firestone.

Although contract dealers either own their own service station properties, or lease them from parties other than Atlantic, these dealers are subject to the control of Atlantic as a consequence of various contractual agreements between such dealers and Atlantic. Chief among these is an agreement having the following principal provisions:

"1. EQUIPMENT LOAN. ATLANTIC, reserving the right of addition, change, substitution, and maintenance, lends to BUYER [the contract dealer] for the purpose of storage and sale of motor fuel purchased solely from ATLANTIC and for no other purpose, equipment that has been installed or which ATLANTIC may install, which shall remain personalty and the property of ATLANTIC, and which BUYER shall not remove, but shall repair and maintain as follows." [Lists equipment.]

"2. SALE AND DELIVERY. Provides that the contract dealer shall buy a specified number of gallons of motor fuel annually from Atlantic; that deliveries will not exceed one-eighth of such gallonage monthly; that the contract dealer 'shall order and accept not less than one-twentieth of such annual gallonage in any calendar month'; and that the times, manner and quantities of delivery shall be in accordance with Atlantic's current practice."

The agreement further provides that all petroleum products delivered thereunder shall be paid for at prices established by Atlantic. The term of such agreement is generally for one year, and may be terminated by either party at the end of the original or any subsequent term by giving 60 days notice. Upon termination, Atlantic is entitled to repossess any equipment loaned to the dealer, with or without legal process. If the agreement is cancelled by Atlantic because of breach by the dealer the dealer must pay a fixed sum to Atlantic as reimbursement for cost of installation and removal of the equipment or, at its option, Atlantic may leave the equipment in place and require the dealer to pay a fixed sum for the value of the equipment and improvements. The equipment most frequently loaned (without charge) by Atlantic to contract dealers includes gasoline pumps, underground storage tanks, compressors, air towers, lifts, signs, outside lighting and poster frames.

Both lessee-dealers and contract dealers have agreements with Atlantic relating to annual purchases of specified quantities of automotive lubricants, and to the terms upon which credit may be extended by these dealers to the approximately 160,000 holders of Atlantic credit cards.

Wholesale Distributors. This class of customers purchases refinery products from Atlantic for resale under the oil company's brand names. Wholesale distributors maintain bulk storage tanks capable of receiving truck deliveries of gasoline from Atlantic, and maintain their own delivery equipment for transporting such gasoline from their bulk storage tanks to retail customers, including service stations. There were 236 wholesale distributors of Atlantic products in 1956, who resold to 2,897 service stations, as shown by Table III:

TABLE III

Numbers of Wholesale Distributors of Atlantic Refining Company, and Service Stations Supplied by them in June, 1956, by Marketing Regions

Region	Distributors	Service Stations
New England	8	151
New York	39	238
Philadelphia-New Jersey	0	0
Eastern Pennsylvania	77	925
Western Pennsylvania	26	410
Southern	77	1,173
Grand Total	236	2,897

Atlantic had wholesale distributors in each of its six principal marketing regions in 1956, with the exception of the Philadelphia-New Jersey region. (There were 1,121 Atlantic service station outlets in the Philadelphia-New Jersey region in 1956, but all were supplied directly by the oil company.) These distributors accounted for 24 percent of total gasoline sales by Atlantic in each of the years 1951 and 1954. Eighty-seven percent of the 2,897 service stations supplied by wholesale distributors of Atlantic in 1956 were in the Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania, and Southern regions; the remaining 13 percent were in the New England and New York regions.

Wholesale distributors are parties to the same type of sales contracts for automotive fuels and lubricants with Atlantic as are Atlantic's contract service station dealers. Moreover, Atlantic has the power to change the source of supply for service station dealers from Atlantic itself to wholesale distributors. During the period from April 1950 to June 30, 1956, Atlantic reassigned 53 contract service station dealers in the Wilmington, Delaware and Baltimore, Maryland sales districts from itself to particular wholesale distributors in those districts. Atlantic's use of the power to expand a wholesale distributor's retail market by adding to the number of service stations supplied by such distributor in order to induce such distributor to purchase and resell sponsored TBA to his service station customers was described by witness Lingenfelser, a salesman for Reading Batteries, Inc. (now the Reading Battery Division of the Electric Auto-Lite Company), who testified in support of the complaint.

The Issue of Coercion

The complaint in this case charges that Atlantic has caused its various classes of dealers to purchase substantial quantities of Goodyear or Firestone TBA through the use of threats to terminate either their tenure as lessees (if lessee-dealers) or their petroleum supply and equipment loan contracts (if contract dealers). It is conceded by counsel supporting the complaint that when Atlantic adopted the sales commission system on March 1, 1951, all its dealers were informed by letter entitled "A Statement of Atlantic's TBA Policy" as follows:

> "Our sales organization has been instructed to explain and demonstrate to you the many advantages of the new TBA plan. They will do so with enthusiasm and conviction because they are confident that it will be advantageous for you to accept it. However, your acceptance or rejection of the program is a matter of your own choice." (Emphasis added.)

Notwithstanding this initial statement of policy by Atlantic, repeated periodically thereafter in form letters sent to its dealers, counsel supporting the complaint contend that in practice this officially-proclaimed policy has been ignored by Atlantic and that in fact, Atlantic dealers have been orally advised by sales officials of the oil company that their continued status as Atlantic dealers and lessees will be in jeopardy if they do not purchase sufficient quantities of sponsored TBA. This contention is supported by the testimony of former Atlantic dealers who appeared as witnesses and further reinforced by the testimony of witnesses representing many suppliers of TBA engaged in competition with Firestone and Goodyear, who testified that they encountered difficulty in selling TBA to Atlantic dealers because the latter group felt that they were required to purchase sponsored TBA and feared reprisal by Atlantic if they purchased non-sponsored items. Testimony of the competing TBA suppliers as to reasons given by Atlantic dealers for not purchasing competitive TBA was allowed under the authority of Lawlor v. Loewe, 235 U. S. 522 (1915). This testimony was received not as proof of the facts recited, but for the purpose of showing the state of mind of the Atlantic dealers. Such testimony is competent to show that Atlantic dealers did not purchase a substantial amount of competitive non-sponsored TBA because of their feeling that they were required to purchase Goodyear or Firestone TBA.

Among the former Atlantic dealers who testified in support of the complaint, several recounted specific instances in which either express or implied threats of lease cancellation were made. Other ex-Atlantic dealers testified to incidents occurring during their tenure as Atlantic lessees which made it apparent to them that they were expected to handle either Goodyear or Firestone TBA, and that if they failed to purchase sufficient quantities of such TBA, that their relationship with Shell might be terminated.

Typical of the former Atlantic dealers testifying in support of the complaint was witness John Chambers, who operated an Atlantic station in the Philadelphia area from 1945 until November 28, 1954. He gave this account of the events occurring when Atlantic changed over from the Lee-Exide program to the sales commission plan in 1951:

> Q. Mr. Chambers, referring . . . to the dealer meeting when the switch-over to the Goodyear TBA line was announced, were you given any choice as to the brand of TBA that would be carried by Atlantic? A. No, there was no choice; I mean the company said that they were going from one product which would be Lee and Exide, over to full Goodyear.

Thereafter, witness Chambers commenced purchasing Goodyear TBA from the local Goodyear distributor to whom he had been assigned, a Mr. Parris. From time to time, however, he also purchased TBA products from other suppliers in his area. Among these were the following:

Chester Auto Parts Chester, Pennsylvania	Waxes and other accessories
V. J. Auto Parts Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania	Accessories, including "Barsleak", a radiator sealer
C. A. Powers Chester, Pennsylvania (A Goodyear tire distributor)	Recapped tires, and also some new Goodyear tires and tubes

Witness Chambers testified that he was criticized by Atlantic salesmen for purchasing accessories from wholesalers other than Mr. Parris, his assigned supplier:

> Q. Were any comments ever made by Atlantic representatives concerning your purchases of accessories from other than Ed Parris? A. Yes.
>
> Q. Would you please state some instances? A. . . . the one that is greatest in my memory right now was the Barsleak, . . . Joe Connelly was Atlantic [salesman] at that time, and Joe would pick it up and say, "What are you doing with this," and he would set it back down.
>
> . . . . . .
>
> Q. Were any comments other than the one referred to made by Atlantic representatives concerning the purchases of TBA from local jobbers other than Ed Parris?

. . . . . .

A. Why yes, there was great criticism, shall I say, in reference to outside [i. e., non-sponsored] merchandise.

Q. Who made these criticisms?

. . . . . .

The Witness: Why salesmen who represented the company.

Q. Which company? A. Atlantic.

. . . . . .

Q. Where did these conversations take place between the Atlantic salesmen and you? A. Many times over a cup of coffee and sometimes out in the driveway. Q. Would it generally be a private conversation? A. If it was to be of that private nature, yes.

Q. Well, when it was a criticism, was it generally of a private nature? A. It was never done openly.

Subsequently, in November 1954, witness Chambers was notified that his lease would not be extended beyond December 31, 1954. He discussed this with Mr. Parris, his TBA supplier, who was also a former employer of witness Chambers:

> Q. . . . what was the substance of your conversation with Mr. Parris? A. I asked, "what in the world happened, what could I do." He said, "Jack, you have been turned in by three [Atlantic] . . . salesmen for buying outside merchandise." I said "Who?" He said, "Connelly, Muldoon, and Petrison" turned me in for buying outside merchandise.[8]

[8] Atlantic regarded witness Chambers as an excellent service station operator, as is shown by the letter to him of October 14, 1954, quoted supra, note 6. This letter of commendation was received by witness Chambers just one month before he received notification that his lease would be terminated.

The above testimony must be assessed in the light of that given by Mr. Glenn L. Wetzel, President of Chester Auto Parts, Inc., of Chester, Pennsylvania. His company sells automotive parts, batteries and accessories (but no tires) at wholesale. Witness Wetzel gave this account of his conversation with witness Chambers:

> Q. Do you recall any other conversations with other Atlantic dealers or Sinclair dealers, along similar lines? A. Yes. John Chambers.
>
> Q. Please state the time as nearly as you can, the place, and what was stated. A. I would approximate the time as about 1953, possibly 1954. I wouldn't know exactly any more. But it was to the effect that he had to stop buying from me. He was told that he was buying too much on the outside from outside distributors, meaning V. J. Auto Parts and myself, which were specifically named.
>
> Q. Now will you please state what the conversation was? A. Jack said to me: "Glen, I am going to have to stop buying from you. I have been warned that if I don't, I am going to be removed from this station. They are going to give me the ax." And two months later he got the ax.

Further testimony as to the state of mind of witness Chambers in 1953 and 1954 was given by witness Joseph Marabella, a partner in the firm of V. J. Auto Parts Company, Folcroft, Pennsylvania. Mr. Marabella testified as follows:

> Q. And did you solicit Bars Leak (sic) business from Mr. Chambers when he was an Atlantic lessee-dealer? A. Yes sir.
>
> * * * * * * *
> Q. And what was your experience with respect to the sale of Bars Leak to Mr. Chambers? A. My, well, business relations and experience with Mr.

> Chambers had been the same as with other gentlemen I have mentioned, enjoying good business relations, good sales on Bars Leak, up until the time he was told to remove it from his shelf, ...

Later, witness Marabella tried to sell Mansfield tires and tubes to witness Chambers and to another Atlantic dealer named Booz:

> A. Well, in the latter part of 1954 with Mr. Booz, Elmer Booz, Wycombe Avenue and McDade Boulevard in Darby, I along with a Mansfield tire representative went in to solicit some of Mr. Booz's tire business. He said, "Joe, I'd be glad to buy them on a fill-in basis, but you know I cannot put anything in here but Goodyear tires and Goodyear tubes." And that was the extent of the conversation.
> Q. Do you recall any other conversations with Atlantic dealers along similar lines? A. Jack Chambers, we solicited him the same day at his station which was Clifton Avenue and Chester Pike in Sharon Hill, in his office, told us he was sorry to waste our time but more or less the same answer, that he couldn't put anything but Goodyear in there.

Documentary evidence taken from the files of Atlantic reveals the vigor with which Atlantic carried out its campaign to replace Lee tires and Exide batteries with Goodyear and Firestone TBA products. The minutes of a meeting of Atlantic's Regional TBA coordinators held on October 21, 1951, reveal that as of that date, "New England reported that approximately 98% of their accounts have been signed on a Goodyear program and that they are getting about 75% of the tire business they formerly enjoyed from these accounts. New York reported that they had about 96% of their accounts signed on a Goodyear program and that they were getting about 65% of their former tire business . . ." By December 24, 1951, an Atlantic report showed that virtually all Atlantic dealers in Goodyear's assigned territory who were potential purchasers of TBA had signed contracts agreeing to handle Goodyear products.

Accompanying the campaign to sign Atlantic dealers to Goodyear contracts was a drive to install Goodyear signs and advertising materials in Atlantic stations throughout Goodyear's assigned marketing areas. This is an excerpt from a letter of July 30, 1951, from Atlantic's TBA sales manager, Mr. Heideman, to another Atlantic official:

> "I asked Mr. O'Neill of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company to supply me with a list of the Atlantic dealers in the Philadelphia Region who refused to be identified on the Goodyear Program. Attached is a list of 46 dealers who, for reasons indicated, have refused this service.
>
> "You will probably wish to review the respective portions of this list with the District Managers concerned. Undoubtedly, facilities for identification are not the best at some of these locations, but with the others it is apparent that the proprietors have not been sold on the Goodyear program. In such instances, I believe that additional sales effort is called for. In any event, would you be kind enough to advise me at your convenience what action you have taken with regard to this list."

Mr. Heideman followed this letter up himself on August 21, 1951, with a letter to Mr. S. A. Gaylord, Manager, Petroleum Sales Department, of Goodyear:

> "I wonder if you can furnish me promptly with a report on the progress of the subject program. I should like to have this information broken down by our regional territories. As I understand it, the signs are being erected by Goodyear crews, but the decals are being erected by outside agencies. Furthermore, at the present time when we locate an Atlantic dealer who is without any Goodyear identification or without one or the other signs or decals, we do not know whether an unsuccessful attempt has been made to complete the assignment or whether all or part of the job, whatever the case may be, is scheduled for attention.

"We should like to interest ourselves in the cases where an unsuccessful attempt has been made to provide the Goodyear identification. Perhaps this information could be made available to us in simplest form by stating the Atlantic District areas that have been covered by either sign crews or agencies that are applying the decals, and by supplying us a list of the dealers where attempts to erect decals or signs were unsuccessful.

"I have already received a list of this type for the Philadelphia and South Jersey areas, and this has been referred to our District Managers for further attention. However, I do not know if this is a partial or complete list of the dealers in that territory who could not be identified with Goodyear signs."

Atlantic's "sales efforts" met with complete success, for the entire group of 46 recalcitrant dealers referred to in Mr. Heideman's letter of July 30 was thereafter signed to Goodyear contracts and Goodyear advertising signs were installed at their stations. The letter of complaint from Lee Rubber and Tire Corporation to Atlantic over the question of removal of Lee advertising signs from Atlantic stations has already been referred to, supra at page 15. And on March 5, 1951, Mr. E. W. McCreery, another Lee vice president, stated in an intracompany memorandum referring to the Atlantic sales regions assigned to Firestone:

"In analyzing salesmen's reports on their calls on Atlantic accounts and with other information that we have, we are doubtful that many of the #2 type stations will stay on Lee tires. Because these stations are leased from Atlantic, some on a month-to-month basis, others on 90 days or longer basis, they are not in a position to take an independent stand and as a result will probably find it expedient to handle Firestone tires."

In our opinion, the documentary evidence in this record —only a fraction of which is referred to above—and the testimony of the various representatives of suppliers of TBA competing with Goodyear and Firestone previously adverted to lend credence to the testimony of the ex-Atlantic dealers who gave evidence in support of the complaint in this proceeding. We affirm the hearing examiner's finding that agents of Atlantic have in fact coerced a substantial number of Atlantic dealers to purchase substantial quantities of Goodyear and Firestone TBA, and that Atlantic has accepted the benefits of such coercion in the form of sales commissions.

Respondent Atlantic cites United States v. J. I. Case Co., 101 F. Supp. 856 (D. C. Minn. 1951) as authority for the proposition that the hearing examiner erred in concluding that Atlantic has coerced a substantial number of its dealers in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. This District Court opinion is commonly regarded as a notable exception to the trend of decisions dealing with the subject of exclusive dealing.[9] But we need not dwell on the Case decision, since the subject of coercive practices has received careful scrutiny from the Seventh Circuit and from the Supreme Court in a line of cases in the field of automotive financing. In United States v. General Motors Corp., 121 F. 2d 376 (7th Cir. 1941), General Motors and its affiliates, General Motors Sales Corporation, General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and General Motors Acceptance Corporation of Indiana, Inc., appealed from a conviction of criminal conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Act. The indictment charged that these defendants had conspired to coerce franchised dealers of General Motors Corporation to finance their purchases and sales of automobiles through [9] Robinson, Providing for Orderly Marketing of Goods, 15 A. B. A. Antitrust Sec. 282, 308 (1959).

General Motors Acceptance Corporation. In affirming the criminal convictions, the court stated:

> "The record leaves no doubt that the dealer body as a whole was made acutely aware and had knowledge of the set policy of the appellants with respect to the use of GMAC financing facilities. The fear of cancellation or refusal to renew contracts was great, so much so that the dealer was reluctant to refuse the terms and policies dictated by the appellants."

Approving the trial judge's instructions to the jury in the General Motors case, the Supreme Court stated in Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 335 U. S. 303 at 316-317 (1948):

> "... Their plain effect is to draw a line between such practices as cancellation of a dealer's contract, or refusal to renew it, or discrimination in the shipment of automobiles, as a means of influencing dealers to use GMAC, all, of which falls within the common understanding of 'coercion,' and other practices for which 'persuasion,' 'exposition' or 'argument' are fair characterizations."

We are of the opinion that the record contains ample evidence to support the hearing examiner's finding that Atlantic has coerced and forced a substantial number of its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA. However, we regard these overt acts of coercion as mere symptoms of a more fundamental restraint of trade inherent in the sales commission system itself. The more dramatic and immediate impact of this system, to be sure, is upon retail service station dealers of Atlantic and other oil company dealers similarly situated. Their freedom to buy and sell as independent merchants is shown to be less complete in practice than in theory. Yet from the point of view of the anti-trust laws, it is the competitive effects of the sales commission system on competitors of Goodyear and Firestone which raise the most grave questions in this proceeding.

We turn, therefore, from an examination of the restrictive effects of the sales commission system upon service stations as buyers of TBA to an assessment of this system's impact upon wholesale and retail distributors of TBA engaged in competition with wholesale and retail distributors of Goodyear and Firestone. Preliminary to this inquiry, however, it will be helpful to have a more detailed understanding of the manner in which the sales commission plan enables Goodyear to integrate into its own nationwide distribution system the economic power possessed by Atlantic over its wholesale and retail petroleum outlets.

The Sales Commission Plan in Goodyear's System of Distribution

Goodyear is the largest manufacturer of rubber products in the United States, with net sales of more than one billion dollars in 1954. The company has tire and tube factories located respectively in the states of Ohio, Alabama, Michigan, California and Kansas. There are 57 Goodyear warehouses across the land, and Goodyear tires, tubes and accessories are distributed to wholesale and retail distributors through these warehouses. Batteries, because of the weight factor, are not warehoused by Goodyear except for emergency needs; all Goodyear wholesalers order "Goodyear" batteries directly from the factories of the two companies which produce "Goodyear" batteries under contract: Electric Auto-Lite Company and Gould-National Batteries, Inc.

Goodyear has approximately 500 company-owned and operated retail stores throughout the United States, and these stores also sell at wholesale. Apart from such company stores, there are more than 12,000 independent franchised stores selling Goodyear products at wholesale and retail and an unknown but very substantial number of firms not franchised by Goodyear but which purchase and resell Goodyear merchandise in the same manner as franchised Goodyear dealers. Franchised dealers are sometimes referred to as "direct" accounts, and non-franchised dealers in Goodyear merchandise are sometimes referred to as "indirect" or "associate" accounts.

All direct Goodyear accounts, which include independent franchised Goodyear dealers, wholesale petroleum distributors of Atlantic, and some retail petroleum dealers of Atlantic, execute a franchise agreement with the Goodyear Company itself, and purchase Goodyear products from the nearest Goodyear District Sales Office. Indirect, or associate Goodyear dealers do not have contracts with the Goodyear Company and do not purchase Goodyear TBA from the Goodyear District Sales Office. Instead, they usually execute a "Goodyear Associate Dealer Agreement" with the particular Goodyear wholesaler to which they are assigned. Such wholesaler may be either a company-owned store, a franchised independent dealer of Goodyear, an Atlantic wholesale petroleum distributor, or an Atlantic retail petroleum dealer. Indirect, or associate, dealers normally purchase from the wholesaler to which they have been assigned, and normally pay higher prices for merchandise than do direct dealers of Goodyear.

Most service station customers, including Atlantic stations, are classified as indirect or associate dealers by Goodyear, although, as noted, some Atlantic stations are direct dealers of Goodyear and function as supply points to other Atlantic stations which are merely associate dealers. (The term "supply point" is used by respondents to refer to the local TBA supplier to which local Atlantic stations have been assigned.) A number of Atlantic wholesale distributors of petroleum products also function as supply points for Goodyear, and distribute TBA to the same retail stations which the wholesale distributors supply with Atlantic petroleum products. A supply point, then, is a local wholesaler of Goodyear TBA, although it may also be a retail dealer of Goodyear, a retail dealer of Atlantic, or a wholesale distributor of Atlantic as well. In the three marketing regions of Atlantic assigned to Firestone, the same classification of Atlantic dealers into direct and indirect accounts of Firestone is found as is described above with respect to Goodyear, and in all other material respects the sales commission plan between Atlantic and Firestone functions in substantially the same manner as does the sales commission plan between Atlantic and Goodyear described herein.

An integral part of the Goodyear-Atlantic and Firestone-Atlantic sales commission plans is the assignment or allocation of each Atlantic retail outlet to a specific supply point designated by Goodyear or Firestone. When a new Atlantic station is opened, or when a new dealer replaces a retiring operator, Atlantic reports to Goodyear (or to Firestone, as the case may be) the name and address of the new Atlantic dealer on an appropriate Goodyear (or Firestone) form. The Goodyear (or Firestone) District Manager then assigns this outlet to a specific supply point and notifies the supply point and the Atlantic outlet of the assignment which has been made. No sales commission is paid to Atlantic unless the Atlantic outlet purchases from the designated supply point to which it has been assigned. In other words, even though an Atlantic dealer purchases Firestone or Goodyear TBA exclusively, unless he buys from his assigned supply point, Atlantic receives no sales commission. One reason why Goodyear does not pay a sales commission when TBA merchandise is purchased by an oil company dealer from someone other than his assigned supply point was set forth in a letter dated December 19, 1951, addressed to an official of Shell Oil Company, and signed by the Baltimore District Manager of Goodyear:

> "I am returning to you, unsigned, two G-1209's which request that G. D. Armstrong Co., Inc., of Laytonsville, Md., be approved as a supplying dealer for Laurel Park Servicenter at Laurel Park, Md., and Bowie Shell Service at Bowie, Md.
> "My reason for taking this attitude is the fact that we very definitely discourage our dealers from selling Goodyear tires outside of their authorized territory, and in servicing either Laurel or Bowie, the Armstrong Company are out of their territory.

> "A situation of this kind, of course, presents us with a serious problem for, naturally, we are not in a position to dictate to any good dealer exactly where he may sell the merchandise which he purchases from us—all we can do is ask that they remain within the boundaries which we establish. However, in the case of oil company stations where we have already authorized and established an ample number of supply points, all with good service, we cannot pay the oil company in question a commission on merchandise delivered by a dealer who is operating outside of his territorial boundaries."

Although in some cases Atlantic dealers are assigned to more than one supply point of Goodyear, in none of Atlantic's marketing regions are Atlantic dealers assigned to supply points of both rubber companies. For, as has been shown, Atlantic's sales commission contract with Goodyear is confined to the company's New England, New York and Philadelphia-New Jersey sales regions, whereas Atlantic's sales commission contract with Firestone is operative only in the Eastern Pennsylvania, Western Pennsylvania and Southern sales regions of the oil company.

A reporting technique has been established whereby Atlantic may determine the exact amount of sponsored TBA purchased by each Atlantic outlet from its assigned supply point or points each month. As both rubber companies use substantially the same reporting procedure, only the one used by Goodyear need be described in detail here.

Once every month each Goodyear supply point submits a report to the Goodyear District Sales Office for his district, showing his sales of TBA during the past month to each Atlantic outlet assigned to him.[10] The Goodyear District Sales Office then compiles these reports into a master list, showing TBA purchases by each individual Atlantic dealer from his assigned supply point during the past month, and sends copies of this list to Atlantic and to Goodyear's home office in Akron, Ohio. Although these forms provide the basis for computation of sales commission accruing to Atlantic each month, they also afford Atlantic a means of determining the volume of sponsored TBA purchases by individual Atlantic dealers during that time.

[10] One exception is Atlantic service stations acting as supply points. A 7½ percent commission is paid by Goodyear to Atlantic on the net sales value of TBA purchases by these Atlantic supply point dealers, and, consequently, no further commission is paid by Goodyear on the resale of merchandise by such Atlantic supply points to other Atlantic stations supplied by them.

A different procedure is followed with respect to TBA purchases by wholesale distributors of Atlantic (including, as indicated by footnote 10, supra, Atlantic retail dealers functioning as supply points). Wholesale distributors purchase directly from the Goodyear or Firestone district offices, and then resell such TBA to their retail dealers. Some 2,897 Atlantic retail outlets were supplied by wholesale distributors in 1956. Atlantic receives a 7½ percent sales commission on the net sales value of all sponsored TBA purchased by wholesale distributors, but no additional sales commission is paid when such purchased TBA is resold to retail dealers supplied by the wholesale distributors.

Goodyear has sales commission contracts with a number of other marketing oil companies, and these agreements are in all material respects identical with the Goodyear-Atlantic contract. Total sales by Goodyear under its sales commission contracts with such other oil companies, including Shell Oil Company and D-X Sunray Oil Company, increased from about $16,700,000 in 1951 to about $36,105,000 in 1955, with sales commissions paid thereon by Goodyear increasing from approximately $1,600,000 in 1951 to approximately $3,300,000 in 1955. The evidence of record in this case shows that oil companies other than Atlantic have employed coercive tactics in requiring their dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA. Witness S. K. Osborn, for example, was a Sinclair dealer for 20 years, from May 1936 until May 1956. He was also a distributor of Firestone tires, and could therefore purchase Firestone tires at lower prices than Goodyear tires. He testified that he stocked Firestone tires exclusively at his service station until 1948, at which time he was given a notice of lease cancellation:

> A. It was a few days after I got the lease cancellation. I was disturbed about it, and I wanted to find out what it was all about. I called up the company and finally got an interview with Mr. Weller, and Mr. McCauley [Sinclair officials] . . . I asked them why I was getting a lease cancellation. They told me that I wasn't doing the right things by them, that Goodyear tires, batteries and accessories were just as much Sinclair products, just as important to the company, as Betholine gas, Sinclair Gas, whatever they were marketing, and Opaline oil. And I promised to go along with their wishes. I gave them an order for Goodyear merchandise. In a few days I had a new lease.
> Q. You say you gave them an order for Goodyear TBA merchandise. Do you recall the approximate amount of the order? A. A thousand or more dollars worth.[11]

In order to keep his service station lease, therefore, this Firestone distributor was placed in the anomalous position of having to purchase Goodyear TBA, a competing brand, in order to maintain his status as lessee of a Sinclair service station.

Another former lessee-dealer, witness MacMasters, who operated a Sinclair station from 1944 until 1954, testified that he purchased Bowers batteries for resale at his station up to sometime in 1947 or 1948. At that time he was summoned to a conference with top-level Sinclair personnel at the oil company's offices:

> A. We went into a conference room, some sort of conference room that had quite a large table. They [11] In Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., F. 2d (4th Cir. 1960), the Court of Appeals held that the facts recited above by witness Osborn constituted an unlawful tying contract violative of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

[Since the writing of the Commission's opinion the Osborn case has been reported as follows: 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U. S. 963 (1961).]

put me on one side of the table, and the other three down the other side.

So, to make the conversation short, Mr. McCauley was in a hurry and he said, "We will make this brief, Mac. You are not buying batteries from us."

I said, "No, Mac, I can't buy batteries from you. I owe an allegiance to Bowers because they took care of me during the war and immediately after the war, and I promised them if they would help me so I could remain in business satisfactorily, that I would see that they maintained and kept the business."

And his almost exact words were, "We don't give a good God damn who you think you owe, you are going to buy our [Goodyear] batteries or else."

And that was the end of the meeting."

Many other advantages accrue to Goodyear, and Firestone as well, as a consequence of their sales commission contracts with oil companies. A prime advantage is participation with each oil company's sales force in a number of joint merchandising programs. This advantage commences with the selection of persons to operate newly-opened service stations or to replace outgoing dealers in previously-operated stations. A continuing responsibility of Atlantic salesmen is to help newly-recruited dealers get established. Through these salesmen, the local Goodyear or Firestone supply points are notified of the names and addresses of new dealers before they actually take over operation of their stations and, as a result, before local competitors of Goodyear and Firestone in any community become aware of a new dealer's identity. This policy was implemented by a memorandum of April 25, 1952, by Atlantic's TBA Manager Heideman to Atlantic personnel:

> "Station Openings. We ask that you instruct your Districts to establish, as a regular practice, automatic and advance notice to the Goodyear District Office, of the openings of any new stations, or of change in proprietorship at any dealer location. Such notice will be mutually beneficial to both Goodyear and ourselves. It will enable Goodyear to complete any unfinished business with the outgoing dealer and, further, will enable them to anticipate and to move promptly in handling the new dealer's requirements."

The importance of advance notification is indicated by the fact that the initial stocking order of TBA costs approximately $1,000—for large stations the amount may be much greater. And Atlantic's turnover of dealers is high. During 1955, 720 lessees of Atlantic ceased operation and had to be replaced, representing a turnover of about 29 percent of the oil company's total number of lessee-dealers in that year. Moreover, during the period March 1950 to June 1956, 389 new Atlantic stations commenced operations. Frequently these new or replacement dealers have recently completed Atlantic training schools in which Goodyear and Firestone TBA were used in demonstrations, and have already formed biases in favor of one or the other brand. However, the new dealer has no choice as to which of the two brands he will purchase and display—if his station is located in the three Sales Regions of the company in which Goodyear is sponsored, then he must take Goodyear TBA, and if his station is located in the three Sales Regions of Atlantic assigned to Firestone, then he must take the Firestone program.

Numerous other examples of joint merchandising programs favorable to the rubber companies having sales commission agreements with Atlantic could be cited. Although Atlantic officials stated in an intra-company memorandum shortly before the inception of the sales commission program that "Practically all sales promotional expense [will be] assumed by supplier [Goodyear]," Atlantic aggressively assists in carrying out the Goodyear program in various ways. For example, Atlantic salesmen obtain TBA orders from dealers and send them to local Goodyear supply points, recommend minimum Goodyear TBA inventories to dealers, coordinate special Goodyear promotional programs with radio, television, and other forms of advertising by the Atlantic company and its dealers, and assist dealers in arranging Goodyear TBA displays. Atlantic credit card facilities are also available to motorists wishing to purchase Goodyear TBA products from Atlantic stations. Without doubt, however, the most effective joint merchandising tactic is dual solicitation, or "double-teaming." This refers to the practice of an Atlantic salesman accompanying a Goodyear or Firestone salesman in calls upon service station operators to urge them to purchase sponsored TBA.

Goodyear's heavy reliance upon double-teaming to convert Atlantic dealers from the Lee-Exide program to Goodyear TBA was set forth in a "Confidential" memorandum of February 27, 1951, from Mr. S. A. Gaylord, manager of the rubber company's sales commission programs with oil companies, to Goodyear District Managers located within the three Atlantic Sales Regions assigned to Goodyear:

> "You have been advised of the Sales Organization Meetings [between Goodyear and Atlantic sales personnel]. Mr. McConky [Goodyear Northeast Division Manager] will keynote for his Division. He will welcome the opportunity and pledge strong support and cooperation. No doubt he will stress the importance of Atlantic and Goodyear personnel getting acquainted and teaming up together when presenting the Goodyear franchise to Atlantic dealers. Because the Atlantic salesman has the 'in', but cannot be expected to know the Goodyear story at the start, so by team work the Goodyear Sales Representative will make the presentation and also assist in training the Atlantic Representative.
> "Two purposes will be accomplished by this teaming activity—first the Atlantic salesman will learn the basic details of our Franchise Presentation and, secondly—our Goodyear salesman will be very favorably introduced to the account through the sales influence of the Atlantic Representative, also bring up this point with your men."

Thereafter, on August 7, 1951, a Goodyear official wrote to Atlantic's TBA Manager, Mr. Heideman:

> "Having reviewed your letter of July 30th, I am pleased to outline below for your consideration steps that I suggest be followed in the handling of a new Atlantic Dealer on the Goodyear T. B. A. Program:
>
> "1. Arrange for double team contact by the Goodyear and Atlantic salesman."

Nine additional steps were outlined in this letter of August 7, the fifth being to "Take stock order (Tires, Batteries and Accessories)" and the sixth being to "Furnish initial price lists, tires, batteries and accessories." Goodyear thus appeared confident that the presence of an Atlantic salesman together with the Goodyear representative would render unnecessary any higgling or haggling over price before obtaining an initial order for TBA from Atlantic dealers.

Similar confidence in the efficacy of double-teaming activity was expressed in a memorandum setting forth action to be taken to introduce the sales commission plan to Atlantic outlets in the three Sales Regions assigned to Firestone:

> "Double-teaming activity with Firestone and oil company salesmen is then scheduled in order to sell the oil company's dealers on the Commission Plan."

Atlantic's Vice President, Mr. D. T. Colley, inaugurated the sales commission program on March 1, 1951, with the following letter to the oil company's sales force:

> "I am sure that the new T. B. A. program which we have carefully selected has so many advantages that it will not be difficult to convince Atlantic dealers and distributors of its superior merit. This job is to be done with the use of all the sales equipment and knowledge that we, or our suppliers, have at our respective commands. I expect the results of our salesmanship to be highly successful.

"You can appreciate the fact that under no circumstances are our dealers to be made to feel that they must buy this new program just because they are Atlantic dealers. The sales you make must be made on the merits of the program and your ability to sell the dealer on its advantages to him. Any evidence that coercion or misrepresentation were used in securing acceptance would be most embarrassing to our company. This program is a challenge to your sales ability. I am confident that you will do a fine selling job." (emphasis added)

These quotations reflect the belief of Goodyear and Firestone, as well as Atlantic, that the presence of an Atlantic salesman is the almost indispensable ingredient needed to insure the success of the two rubber companies in selling their TBA products to Atlantic dealers under the sales commission plan. Perhaps one reason for this is that the annual evaluation by Atlantic salesmen of their respective lessee-dealers carries substantial weight with District Managers of Atlantic when the latter group make decisions as to extensions of dealers' leases for another year. Although respondent Atlantic has made vigorous efforts to create a record image of the typical Atlantic lessee-dealer as a stoutly independent businessman, able to close up shop as an Atlantic lessee on Saturday night and reopen down the street in a Sinclair or an Esso station the following Monday morning, the record as a whole suggests that this is a romanticized picture of a small businessman who is, more often than not, in a woefully weak bargaining position vis-a-vis his oil company lessor.

The typical lessee-dealer's dependence upon his lessor-supplier is explained by the following facts: The cost of constructing an average Atlantic service station is about $50,000. Few men who become service station operators have this amount of money—many have as little as $1,000, and very few have as much as $15,000. Most marketing oil companies, therefore, build a substantial portion of their own stations and lease them to operators. The lessee-dealer uses his own capital to purchase an initial inventory of petroleum products, TBA, and tools and for other expenses incurred in commencing operations. It is frequently necessary for incoming dealers to borrow several thousand dollars from Atlantic in order to purchase these initial stocks of goods. Nor is the income of the typical lessee-dealer sufficient to enable him eventually to purchase his own station. Although an exceptional dealer with an unusually high-gallonage station may earn as much as $20,000 per year, the average annual net income of Atlantic dealers is in the range of 6 to 10 thousand dollars. But no matter how long an operator may remain as lessee, and no matter how much he strives to establish goodwill in his community, the time may come when his lease is not renewed—for any one of a number of reasons or for no reason at all except that the lessor would prefer to have someone else operate that particular station.

Many of the control devices available to Atlantic in its relationship with lessee-dealers are also applicable to contract dealers. Many of the latter are indebted to Atlantic, and most of them lease storage tanks, gasoline pumps and other equipment from their oil company supplier. These equipment leases specify that such equipment may not be used for storage or sale of petroleum products purchased from any supplier other than Atlantic. And serious inconveniences would be caused for any contract dealer whose petroleum supply contract with Atlantic was not renewed from year to year.

Service station operators are understandably susceptible to the urgings and recommendations of their oil company suppliers and lessors in the matter of TBA. The Goodyear salesman encounters less buyer resistance on the part of such a customer when an oil company salesman is standing nearby adding his endorsement to the sales presentation of the Goodyear representative. The technique of dual solicitation ("double-teaming") thus symbolizes in microcosm the competitive effects of the sales commission method of distributing TBA when introduced throughout the entire marketing area of a major oil company. It is to these macrocosmic effects that we now turn.

COMPETITIVE EFFECTS OF THE SALES COMMISSION PLAN AT THE MANUFACTURING, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL LEVELS.

A glance at MAP I, supra, suffices to show that competition between Firestone and Goodyear in selling to Atlantic oil company accounts has been wrecked by the operation of the sales commission system. But other evidence of record is available in abundance to illustrate the same point. The following is an exchange of correspondence between Atlantic and Goodyear concerning Republic Oil Company, a wholesale distributor of Atlantic products in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. (Atlantic's Western Pennsylvania sales region, it will be recalled, is assigned to Firestone.)

On August 2, 1951, Mr. E. C. Sauter, District Manager of Goodyear in Pittsburgh, addressed the following letter to Mr. F. W. McConky, Jr., Manager of Goodyear's Northeast Division:

> "Republic Oil Co.
>
> "This is a Pittsburgh concern who are acting as distributor of Atlantic products in parts of Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia.
> "The retail division of this company operates about seventy-five (75) service stations. They have never gone into a TBA program and at present have no tire hook-ups. They are in process, however, of trying to get a deal with one of the major tire companies and would like to entertain a proposition from Goodyear whereby we would sell their stations direct or through supplying dealers at a price which would be in line with each outlet's volume with an override to the oil company.[12]

[12] Many service station operators and TBA dealers use the term "override commission" or "overriding commission" in referring to payments by a TBA manufacturer to an oil company such as those made by Goodyear and Firestone to Atlantic. However, as respondents and their witnesses usually use the term "sales commission" to refer to such payments, we are using "sales commission" in this opinion.

"Possibly we could use this additional distribution in the Pittsburgh area, particularly on passenger tires and tubes, so if you are interested possibly we should take the matter up with Petroleum Sales for their comments."

Thereafter, on August 3, 1951, the matter was referred by Mr. McConky to Mr. S. A. Gaylord of Goodyear in Akron:

"The attached from Eddie Sauter regarding Republic Oil and the possibility of their handling our products is a matter, in my opinion, for Akron decision, inasmuch as they [meaning Republic Oil] are distributors of Atlantic products.

"I don't want to spend any time lining up with these people if for example Atlantic-Philadelphia would prefer they handle Firestone, since this is the tire being handled by Atlantic in that area.

"Of course, I am not acquainted with the influence Atlantic might be able to bring to bear in forcing these people to a decision as to the line of tires that they—Atlantic—would like them to handle.

"At any rate, will you explore this from a management standpoint and advise so we can proceed according to Atlantic's desires."

On August 9, 1951, Mr. Gaylord addressed the following letter to Atlantic's TBA Manager, Mr. Heideman:

"Mr. Sauter, our District Manager at Pittsburgh, and Mr. McConky, advises that subject account is considering marketing T.B.A. products and have invited us to submit a proposal.

"Before taking any action in the matter we felt that we should take the matter up with you for further guidance and your good counsel in the matter.

"Will appreciate hearing from you on this as soon as possible."

On August 14, 1951, Mr. Heideman replied to Mr. Gaylord under the heading "Republic Oil Company":

> "Your note of August 9th has been received. Any overtures on your company's part to the subject could upset negotiations that we have underway at present. It was thoughtful of you to consult us and needless to say we appreciate it as we will also appreciate your rejection of the invitation." (emphasis added.)

Not only has competition between Goodyear and Firestone been eliminated as a result of these companies' sales commission contracts with Atlantic, but even within Atlantic's sales regions assigned to Goodyear, competition among Goodyear wholesalers for the business of Atlantic accounts has been eliminated through the assignment of each Atlantic account to a designated supply point. There are 1,155 independent franchised Goodyear dealers in the Atlantic marketing territories assigned to Goodyear, but only 128 of these dealers, or 11 percent, are supply points for Atlantic dealers. The remainder, representing 89 percent of all Goodyear dealers in the three Atlantic sales regions, are substantially foreclosed from access to Atlantic accounts.

Nor is this anticompetitive allocation of customers by Goodyear among its wholesale distributors confined to Atlantic accounts alone—nine other oil companies have sales commission contracts with Goodyear, and as shown by Table IV, below, only a minute fraction of the total number of Goodyear dealers in any of these oil companies' marketing areas have been nominated as supply points for local oil company outlets:

TABLE IV

Goodyear Dealers Acting as Supply Points for Oil Company Outlets Compared with Total Number of Goodyear Dealers in Each Oil Company's Marketing Area

Name of Oil Company	Total Number of Goodyear Dealers in Marketing Area	Number of Goodyear Supply Points
Anderson-Pritchard	3,825	28
Ashland & Subsidiaries	2,387	87
Carter	1,509	73
D-X Sunray	6,772	162
Quaker State	482	14
Richfield	1,691	3
Shamrock	1,717	25
Shell	10,756	679
Sinclair	10,963	10
Atlantic	1,155	128

The extent to which competition among Goodyear's own dealers at the wholesale level has been shattered by the operation of the sales commission plan may be inferred from the data in TABLE IV. In Shell's marketing area, for example, there are 10,756 Goodyear dealers; yet only 679 of these dealers have been appointed as supply points to Shell stations. In the marketing territory of D-X Sunray Oil Company there are 6,772 Goodyear dealers, but only 162 have been granted the privilege of becoming a supply point. And in Atlantic's New England, New York, and Philadelphia-New Jersey sales regions, only 128 out of 1,155 Goodyear distributors have been named as supply points.

To illustrate the elimination of competition among TBA wholesale dealers caused by the sales commission plan, evidence adduced in the course of hearings in Atlantic's Philadelphia-Suburban Sales District (one of several sales districts comprising Atlantic's Philadelphia-New Jersey Sales Region) may be considered. As of June 30, 1956, there were 226 lessee dealers and 291 contract dealers of Atlantic in this district. These dealers were assigned to three Goodyear company stores and six independent franchised Goodyear distributors in the Philadelphia metropolitan area as follows:

* Includes some duplication due to 11 lessee dealers and 5 contract dealers having two alternate sources of supply.

 No breakdown is available as to the numbers of lessee and contract dealers, respectively, supplied by these two supply points. Mr. Hagan was supply point to a total of 54 lessee and contract dealers of Atlantic, and Mr. Parris to a total of 61 lessee and contract dealers of the oil company.

Witness Elmer H. Booz, for example, an Atlantic lessee dealer from 1952 until 1956, testified that Mr. Edward Parris was the designated Goodyear TBA supply point for dealers in his area. He stated that although he could have purchased Goodyear tires from other dealers at lower prices than from Mr. Parris, that he nevertheless obtained about 85 percent of his TBA requirements from Mr. Parris. One competing Goodyear dealer offered tires to Mr. Booz at a discount from list price of 10 percent plus 5 percent, plus 2 percent whereas Mr. Parris gave only a 10 percent discount, plus 2 percent discount for cash.

As to competing brands of tires, Mr. Booz testified that he could make more profit on several such brands than he could on Goodyear tires. Lee tires were available at a discount from list price of 10 plus 10 plus 10 percent, plus 2 percent for cash. Moreover, the witness stated that he could never resell Goodyear tires at list price because "there is always someone from the Goodyear company or somebody else that is going to knock you down on it."[13]

Witness Francis J. Balloran commenced operating an Atlantic station in 1953 and was a contract dealer for Atlantic at the time he testified in this proceeding. He stated that after becoming an Atlantic dealer he purchased Goodyear TBA from his designated supplier, Mr. E. F. Miller (Table V, supra):

> Q. Now, you stated that the Goodyear TBA was furnished by Mr. Miller? A. That's right.
>
> Q. Why did you buy your Goodyear TBA from Mr. Miller? A. Well, that was the setup by the Atlantic Refining Company when I first operated the business.

> Q. Was it a matter of your own choice? A. No, sir.

> Q. Did you want to purchase TBA from Mr. Miller? A. Not truthfully, no.

send a man with a truck and waste an hour and a half to go pick it up and bring it back.

Q. Could you have purchased Goodyear tries at a cheaper price in the area? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the name of the supplier? A. Hires and Kocher.

Witness Balloran also testified that he occasionally purchased brands of tires other than Goodyear, but did not display them openly:

Q. Did you purchase U. S. tires from Harris and Leonard? A. That's right.

Q. Were such tires advertised, U. S. tires? A. Not out of my place they weren't.

Q. Did you purchase Lee tires? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you keep them? A. On the racks, sir . . .

Nineteen witnesses representing eleven TBA wholesale suppliers in the Philadelphia-Suburban District engaged in competition with one or more of the six Goodyear supply points named in Table V, supra, testified in support of the complaint. Without exception, these witnesses gave evidence that they were able to sell little or no TBA products to Atlantic dealers in their areas, and that such Atlantic dealers had stated that they must purchase their TBA needs from one or more of the designated Goodyear supply points listed in Table V.

Witness Michael T. Lanza, partner in the Philadelphia firm of Lanza Tire Service, stated that his company sells Goodyear and Firestone tires and tubes, as well as other brands, and also Exide batteries. He further stated that there are from 45 to 60 Atlantic service stations in his sales area, and that all such stations stock and advertise Goodyear tires and batteries. Witness Lanza identified Messrs. Fred Glenn and Harvey George as Goodyear TBA suppliers to Atlantic service stations in the North Philadelphia marketing area of Lanza Tire Service.

Witness Glenn L. Wetzel, President of Chester Auto Parts, Inc., of Chester, Pa., testified that his company sells Willard batteries, Dayton Rubber Co. fan belts and radiator hose, AC, Purolator and Fram oil filters, and a wide assortment of automotive waxes, polishes and cleaners in competition with other sellers of TBA in his company's marketing area, including Mr. Edward Parris. Witness Wetzel stated that it is "rather futile" to attempt to sell automotive batteries to Atlantic dealers, and "very difficult" to sell automotive accessories to them. On cross-examination he was asked this question:

> Q. Did I understand you to say that you don't sell any TBA items to Atlantic stations now? A. Selling and buying are two different categories. They buy from me one or two filters to carry them over until Ed Parris can deliver them a case. They buy six or eight cans of merchandise to carry them over until Ed Parris can deliver a case or two cases or five cases, whatever the deal may be.

Witness Myer Duboff is an outside salesman for Lancaster Auto Supply Company of Philadelphia. This firm competes with Goodyear dealers Frank Hagan, E. F. Miller and Ellwood Kieser, supra, TABLE V. Witness Duboff testified that he had solicited the business of about 35 Atlantic stations in his area, all of which advertise Goodyear products ". . . right down the line." He stated that he had been told by a number of Atlantic dealers that they were unable to buy TBA items from him because they "must buy from the company." On cross-examination he was queried as to statements made to him by one Atlantic dealer:

> Q. You mentioned one person, Mr. I. Mann, of Haverford and Brookhaven Road? A. That is right.

Q. As having said something to you about inability to buy from you. I am not clear as to what he said. A. Do you want me to state what he said to me. He said to me. "I can't buy from you."

Q. Had he been buying from you? A. He was buying odds and ends and every time I come in to sell him, he would have to hide things, you would think it was the Gestapo or something. I would go in to see him and talk to him and he would say "Mike, I can't buy from you," and I said "Why not," and he says "They know what I am doing," and I didn't think that was right.

Many other examples of such testimony could be cited, not only by former Atlantic dealers and by TBA suppliers from the Philadelphia area, but from other marketing areas of Atlantic as well. These facts are clear: Atlantic has allocated three of its six marketing regions to Firestone and the other three to Goodyear. Firestone's sales to Atlantic outlets amounted to $5,562,936 in 1955, the last full year for which data are available, and in the same year the rubber company paid commissions amounting to $506,199 to Atlantic. Goodyear's sales to Atlantic outlets amounted to $5,700,121 in 1955 and its sales commission payments to the oil company totalled $557,559.

We find that Atlantic has used its power as a major wholesale and retail distributor of gasoline and as a lessor of numerous valuable retail gasoline distribution facilities to cause its dealers to purchase very substantial amounts of a different class of products, TBA. This finding, in conjunction with Atlantic's market position and the volume of TBA affected, would appear to bring this case within the Supreme Court's ruling in Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (1958) and the more recent decision by the Fourth Circuit in Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., F. 2d (4th Cir. 1960). [*]

The Court held in the Northern Pacific case that tying arrangements are per se violative of Section 1 of the Sherman Act ". . . whenever a party has sufficient economic power with respect to the tying product to appreciably restrain free competition in the tied product and a 'not insubstantial' amount of interstate commerce is affected" (356 U. S. at 6). The content of the phrase "sufficient economic power" with respect to the tying product was defined by the Fourth Circuit recently in the Osborn case.

Osborn was a lessee of Sinclair Refining Company from 1936 to 1948, at which time his lease was terminated and a new lease entered into which was continued until May 1956, when it was finally cancelled by Sinclair. During the years of Osborn's tenure as a Sinclair dealer, the oil company or its subsidiary, Sherwood Bros., Inc., was party to a sales commission contract with Goodyear in all material respects identical to the Goodyear-Atlantic and the Firestone-Atlantic arrangements in the instant case. Osborn filed suit for treble damages under the Sherman Act, claiming that the sale of Goodyear TBA to Sinclair dealers in Maryland was in furtherance of an illegal restraint of trade. On appeal, the court held that Sinclair had gone beyond mere salesmanship in inducing its dealers to carry substantial quantities of Goodyear TBA if they wished to continue selling Sinclair gasoline under their lease and sales agreements with Sinclair.[14] As phrased by the court, quoting its own earlier decision in McElhenny v. Western Auto Supply Co., 268 F. 2d 332, 338 (4th Cir. 1959):

> "Probably nothing is more firmly settled in our antitrust jurisprudence than that an illegal contract may be inferred from all the circumstances."

According to the court, Sinclair had violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act through a series of implied tie-in agreements with its dealers in Maryland. Moreover, the court did not regard it as significant that Sinclair had not required its dealers to purchase all their requirements of TBA from Goodyear:

[14] Sinclair did not have a sales commission plan in effect throughout its entire marketing area, but only in Maryland and, to some extent, in adjacent states. [286] F. 2d [832] at [834]. Osborn, plaintiff in the case discussed above, testified in the instant proceeding as a witness in support of the complaint.

> "To insist upon such exclusivity in a tie-in would be inconsistent with the trend of decisions in this area. If a substantial amount of commerce is restricted by such arrangements, the standard for illegality would seem to have been met."

As to the requirement of "sufficient economic power" in the tying commodity—Sinclair's position in the petroleum retail market—the court found that in 1956, Sinclair had operated about 300 out of some 2300 retail service stations in Maryland and that those stations had sold about 10 percent of the total sale of gasoline in the same state in that year. This was held to afford Sinclair sufficient economic power in the gasoline market appreciably to restrain commerce in TBA. No one questioned the finding that Goodyear TBA purchased by Sinclair dealers in Maryland comprised a substantial amount of commerce. Accordingly, the implied tie-in agreements between Sinclair and its dealers were held to constitute a per se violation of the Sherman Act.

Here we find that Atlantic, which describes itself as ". . . a large producer and distributor of petroleum products" whose operating revenue "totalled more than one half billion dollars" in 1954, distributes gasoline directly to more than 5,500 retail service stations and through wholesale distributors to more than 2,800 additional service stations in 17 states along the Atlantic Seaboard. Approximately 81 percent of Atlantic's total sales of gasoline in 1955 were accounted for by these approximately 8,300 retail service stations.

But we do not rest our decision on a mechanical application of the rule of the Northern Pacific and Osborn cases. The issue here is the legality of respondents' use of a particular method of distributing TBA products. Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic. Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from the sales commission method of distributing TBA used by these respondents.

The record of this case conclusively establishes, in our minds, that the sales commission contracts between Atlantic and Goodyear and Atlantic and Firestone have unlawfully injured competition in the distribution of TBA at the manufacturing, wholesale and retail levels. Firestone dealers are foreclosed from Atlantic outlets in regions assigned to Goodyear, and Goodyear dealers are foreclosed from Atlantic outlets in regions assigned to Firestone. Even within regions assigned to Goodyear, or to Firestone, only those Goodyear or Firestone dealers fortunate enough to be nominated as "supply points" have any prospect of sales to Atlantic dealers. Wholesale TBA dealers representing other tire manufacturers, for example United States Rubber Company, Lee Rubber and Tire Corporation, and Mansfield Tire and Rubber Company testified to their inability to sell tires to Atlantic service station dealers, except upon an occasional "pick-up" basis when a motorist demands a tire brand other than the locally-sponsored offering available at the station.

Battery manufacturers and certain accessory suppliers are, if possible, even more severely disadvantaged by the sales commission system than are tire companies competing with Firestone and Goodyear. Local wholesale distributors of Exide, Willard, Bowers and other brands of batteries testified to their inability to sell batteries to Atlantic stations except upon a pick-up basis. The most shocking feature of the sales commission system as to batteries, however, is the fact that the sales commission contracts with Atlantic enable Goodyear and Firestone to exclude their own suppliers of batteries from the wholesale and retail markets represented by Atlantic service station outlets. For the evidence of record indicates that Goodyear and Firestone both refused to execute sales agreements relating only to tires and tubes, but insisted that it include all TBA items sold by them or none. An analogous situation exists as to certain accessory products, for example, "Mac's" brand of polishes, waxes, and cleaners.

Moreover, as one of the chief characteristics of the sales commission plan is that it strengthens wholesale distributors of Goodyear and Firestone by pre-empting for their benefit a substantial segment of all of the various local wholesale TBA markets in Atlantic's marketing area, the sales commission system stands as a bar to the expansion by smaller TBA manufacturers of their own distributive organizations. As respondents concede, a substantial proportion of all replacement TBA items sold to motorists are accounted for by service stations and "service stations, . . . constitute a large and increasingly important market" for TBA products. Thus, the competitive dislocations engendered by the sales commission plan at the wholesale level entend backward to the manufacturing level.

Finally, the unfair competitive advantages resulting from the sales commission plan are not confined to the manufacturing and wholesale levels—they extend forward to the retail level as well. Many of the wholesalers who testified in this proceeding also sell at retail, directly to motorists. To the extent, therefore, that suppliers of TBA competing with distributors of Goodyear and Firestone at the wholesale level are weakened by the operation of the sales commission system, the dealers are also weakened at the retail level, in instances where they are engaged in retail as well as wholesale operations.

Counsel for Atlantic contend, however, that no competitive consequences attend the sales commission plan which did not characterize the purchase-resale program employed by Atlantic prior to 1951. This point deserves consideration since it implies that no useful purpose would be served by outlawing the sales commission plan between Goodyear and Atlantic as Atlantic would merely return to the purchase-resale method of distributing TBA, with the result that Goodyear and Firestone dealers would lose a substantial volume of sales, but without improving the lot of competing TBA suppliers as they would still be unable to sell TBA to Atlantic dealers. We believe this argument to be without merit for several reasons.

First of all, what course of action Atlantic may follow with respect to TBA if the sales commission plan is outlawed is entirely speculative. Assuming for the moment, however, that Atlantic will return to the purchase-resale plan and flout the antitrust laws by requiring its dealers to handle Atlantic TBA exclusively, or even substantially,[15] it is obvious that local wholesalers of TBA competing with Firestone and Goodyear dealers in Atlantic's marketing area will at least no longer be laboring under the handicap of their competitors representing Firestone and Goodyear having already pre-empted a substantial share of the local wholesale TBA market. As the situation stands under the sales commission plan, local dealers representing Firestone and Goodyear are assured of a substantial chunk of the market before the competitive race at the wholesale level even begins. (See Table V, supra) Abolition of the sales commission system will at least terminate the unjust advantage presently enjoyed by distributors of Firestone and Goodyear over local competitors representing other tire manufacturers and TBA suppliers.

Not only do the competitive effects of the sales commission plan differ from those of the purchase-resale plan at the wholesale level, but at the manufacturing level as well. When Atlantic was considering changing from the purchase and resale of Lee tires and Exide batteries to some other method of merchandising TBA, it contacted several of the larger tire and rubber companies, including Goodyear, Firestone, The B. F. Goodrich Company, United States Rubber Company and General Tire and Rubber Company inquiring "... what interest you may have in the sale of your tires and tubes through Atlantic accounts." Propositions were requested not only as to principal brands of these manufacturers, but as to secondary brands controlled by them and private brands as well. At the same time, Atlantic also contacted Mansfield Tire and Rubber Company and Lee Rubber and Tire Corporation soliciting proposals from them to furnish a private brand tire to Atlantic. This suggests that the smaller tire companies are able to compete with their smaller competitors in selling tires to oil company accounts on a purchase and resale basis. The evidence also shows, however, that the smaller tire companies are unable to compete with larger tire manufacturers for the business of oil companies using the sales commission plan because the smaller tire companies lack distribution facilities which blanket the entire sales area of a major marketing oil company desiring to adopt the sales commission plan. This was established by the testimony of Vice-President Colley of Atlantic, who appeared as a witness on behalf of this respondent.

A major oil company's decision to adopt the sales commission method of distributing TBA thus inaugurates a vicious cycle of injurious competitive effects: smaller tire and rubber companies are unable to compete in the first instance for the business of the oil company desiring to adopt a sales commission plan because they lack widespread distribution facilities at the wholesale and resale levels; and yet the operation of the sales commission plan stands as a bar to future expansion of the smaller tire companies' distributive systems since they are thereby foreclosed from a substantial segment of the wholesale and retail market after the oil company has adopted a sales commission plan offered by a larger tire company.

We believe that the sales commission method of distributing TBA presents a classic example of the use of economic power in one market (here, gasoline distribution) to destroy competition in another market (TBA distribution). Other anticompetitive effects of the sales commission system are so obvious that they require no detailed consideration. The public suffers because it cannot rely upon competitive rivalry among local TBA wholesalers to insure that service station outlets will be able to obtain price savings which may be passed along to consumers. And, too, the system prevents the service station operator himself from using his buying power to further his own business advantage instead of that of his oil company supplier. As the Court of Appeals said in its recent Osborn decision, in a situation identical in its essentials with the present case, insofar as the service station dealer is concerned:

> "Because of its financial interest in having its lessee-dealers sell Goodyear TBA rather than competing brands, Sherwood-Sinclair engaged in a course of conduct designed to bring about this result. The facts in this case utterly fail to reveal any business motive for the defendant's policy that its dealers should handle Goodyear products instead of others. Admittedly, it was proper for Sinclair-Sherwood to desire its lessees to carry a complete, high-quality line of TBA. It is conceded, however, that there are other competing brands, and there is no suggestion that Goodyear was superior to the other brands of TBA, or that there was any benefit to the dealers in handling Goodyear rather than one of the other lines."

Several additional points are raised by Atlantic, but we believe only one of these requires detailed consideration in this opinion. Respondent contends that it was error, violative of due process of law, for the same hearing examiner to have presided over and rendered initial decisions in both this case and in Docket 6487, The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company and Shell Oil Company. The crux of the contention seems to be that the hearing examiner could not possibly have rendered his initial decision in this case solely upon the basis of the record of the instant proceeding, since he also heard testimony and received evidence involving Atlantic's sales commission plan with Firestone in Docket 6487. As respondent puts it,

"While Atlantic has the utmost respect for the Hearing Examiner's integrity and ability, Atlantic submits that he could not humanly exclude from consideration his impression of the witnesses' demeanor and credibility in the Firestone-Shell proceedings and that his decision against Atlantic based on impressions gained in those other proceedings is a violation of due process."

Our study of the initial decision and of the record in this case indicates that there is no basis for the claim that the hearing examiner considered extra-record evidence in making his findings of fact and conclusions of law. Substantial evidence is present in the record of this case to support every finding of fact and conclusion of law by the hearing examiner. In any event, our own independent study of the record herein is the basis for the findings of fact and conclusions of law set forth in this opinion.

Conclusion.

Other exceptions of respondents Atlantic and Goodyear have been considered and rejected. The appeal of respondent Atlantic is denied. The appeal of counsel supporting the complaint is granted in part and denied in part. The initial decision, to the extent that it is contrary to the views expressed in this opinion, will be modified to conform with such views. An appropriate order will be entered.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

BEFORE

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

Commissioners:

EARL W. KINTNER,
Chairman

ROBERT T. SECREST
SIGURD ANDERSON
WILLIAM C. KERN

IN THE MATTER of THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, a corporation, and THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY, a corporation.	Docket 6486

FINAL ORDER

Counsel supporting the complaint and respondent The Atlantic Refining Company having filed cross-appeals from the hearing examiner's initial decision in this proceeding; and

The Commission having considered said appeals, including the briefs and oral arguments of counsel and the entire record, and having rendered its opinion denying the appeal of respondent The Atlantic Refining Company and granting in part and denying in part the appeal of counsel supporting the complaint, and having determined that the initial decision should be modified in certain respects:

IT IS ORDERED that the findings and conclusions of the initial decision be, and they hereby are, modified and supplemented to conform with the findings, conclusions and views set forth in the accompanying opinion of the Commission

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the following be, and it hereby is, substituted for the order contained in said initial decision:

IT IS ORDERED that respondent The Atlantic Refining Company, a corporation, and its officers, agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the promotion, or offering for sale, or sale and distribution of tires, inner tubes, batteries, and automotive accessories and supplies (hereinafter referred to as "TBA products") in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Entering into or continuing in operation or effect any contract, agreement, or combination, express or implied, with The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, or The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., or with any other rubber company or tire manufacturer, or any other supplier of tires, batteries, and/or accessories, whereby The Atlantic Refining Company receives anything of value in connection with the sale of TBA products to any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products by any marketer or distributor of TBA products other than The Atlantic Refining Company;

2. Accepting or receiving anything of value from any manufacturer, distributor, wholesaler, or other vendor of TBA products, for acting as sales agent or for otherwise sponsoring, recommending, urging, inducing, or promoting the sale of TBA products, directly or indirectly, by any such vendor to any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products;

3. Using or attempting to use any contractual or other device, such as, but not limited to, agreements, leases, training programs, promotions, dealer meetings, dealer discussions, service station identification, credit cards, and financial loans, to sponsor, recommend, urge, induce, or otherwise promote the sale of TBA products by any distributor or marketer of such products other than The Atlantic Refining Company to or through any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products;

4. Employing any method of inspecting, reporting, or surveillance or using or attempting to use, in any manner, its relationship with Atlantic outlets to sponsor, recommend, urge, induce, or otherwise promote the sale of any specified brand or brands of TBA products by any distributor or marketer of such products other than The Atlantic Refining Company to any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products;

5. Intimidating or coercing or attempting to intimidate or coerce any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products to purchase any brand or brands of TBA products;

6. Preventing or attempting to prevent any wholesaler or retailer of Atlantic petroleum products from purchasing and reselling, merchandising, or displaying TBA products of his own independent choice.

It Is Further Ordered that respondents The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Inc., (hereinafter collectively referred to as "Goodyear"), corporations, and their officers, agents, representatives and employees, directly or through any corporate or other device, in connection with the promotion, offering for sale or sale and distribution of tires, inner tubes, batteries and automotive accessories and supplies (hereinafter referred to as "TBA products") in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in the Federal Trade Commission Act, do forthwith cease and desist from, directly or indirectly:

1. Entering into or continuing in operation or effect any contract, agreement or combination, express or implied, with The Atlantic Refining Company or with any other marketing oil company whereby Goodyear, directly or indirectly, pays or contributes anything of value to any such marketing oil company in connection with the sale of TBA products by Goodyear or any distributor of Goodyear products to any wholesaler or retailer of petroleum products of such marketing oil company;

2. Paying, granting or allowing, or offering to pay, grant or allow, anything of value to The Atlantic Refining Company or to any other marketing oil company for acting as sales agent or for otherwise sponsoring, recommending, urging, inducing or promoting the sale of TBA products, directly or indirectly, by Goodyear or any distributor of Goodyear products to any wholesaler or retailer of petroleum products of such marketing oil company;

3. Reporting or participating in the reporting to The Atlantic Refining Company or any other marketing oil company concerning sales of TBA products to wholesalers or retailers of petroleum products, individually or by groups, of any such marketing oil company.

It Is Further Ordered that the initial decision as so modified and supplemented be, and it hereby is, adopted as the decision of the Commission.

It Is Further Ordered that respondents The Atlantic Refining Company, The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, and The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Inc., corporations, shall, within sixty (60) days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with the aforesaid order to cease and desist.

By the Commission.

THE ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY,
Petitioner,
v.
FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Respondent.

Petitions to Review and Set Aside Order of the Federal Trade Commission.

April 24, 1964.

Before SCHNACKENBERG, CASTLE, and SWYGERT, Circuit Judges.

SWYGERT, Circuit Judge. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and the Atlantic Refining Company request a review of the Federal Trade Commission order based upon a complaint charging a violation of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act[1] and which challenged the legality

[1] Federal Trade Commission Act §5(a)(1), 66 Stat. 632 (1952), 15 U. S. C. §45(a)(1) (1958), reads as follows:

> Unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce are declared unlawful.

of distribution of tires, batteries, and automobile accessories (TBA) to service stations under a sales commission agreement between petitioners.

Goodyear is an Ohio corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of rubber products, including tires and inner tubes. It is the largest manufacturer of these products in the United States.

Atlantic, a Pennsylvania corporation, is a major producer, refiner, and distributor of gasoline and other petroleum products. It markets its products in seventeen states along the eastern seaboard.

The complaint issued by the Commission alleged that Atlantic produces and sells petroleum in commerce to wholesale distributors, automobile service stations, and others; that the distributors and retailers, ostensibly independent, nevertheless, are under the domination and control of Atlantic; that Goodyear and Atlantic entered into a sales commission contract whereby Atlantic agreed to promote the sale of Goodyear products, that is, tires, batteries, and accessories (TBA), to Atlantic's distributors and service station dealers located in a part of Atlantic's sales territory; that Atlantic had a similar contract with Firestone Tire & Rubber Company for the balance of Atlantic's territory; and that Goodyear had similar contracts with a number of other oil companies which, like Atlantic, dominate and control their distributors and service station dealers. The complaint further alleged that Atlantic is paid a sales commission by Goodyear and Firestone on their products which are sold by Atlantic's distributors and service station dealers. The complaint charged that by the use of the sales commission agreement and the practices of the two companies thereunder, Atlantic and Goodyear have restrained competition in the sale of TBA, and committed unfair acts and practices proscribed by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The hearing examiner dismissed the complaint against Goodyear, upholding the legality of the sales commission contract, but found that Atlantic had violated section 5 of the act by forcing a substantial number of its dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA. The examiner's order against Atlantic prohibited future actions of coercion.

Both Atlantic and general counsel for the Commission appealed from the examiner's ruling. The Commission sustained the examiner's finding that Atlantic had coerced its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA but held that the coercion was symptomatic of a more fundamental restraint of trade, inherent in the sales commission plan itself. The Commission said that the principal issue raised by the complaint was the legality of the Goodyear-Atlantic contract. It noted, however, that Atlantic had a similar agreement with Firestone and that Goodyear had like agreements with a number of oil companies other than Atlantic.

The Commission determined that the sales commission method of marketing TBA is "a classic example of the use of economic power in one market (here, gasoline distribution) to destroy competition in another market (TBA distribution)." It found that Atlantic, which sells gasoline, has used its economic power over its dealers to cause them to carry substantial amounts of a different product, TBA; also, that the effects of the sales commission system are anticompetitive at the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail levels. It found that Goodyear's manufacturing competitors have been substantially precluded from selling TBA to the Atlantic service stations assigned to Goodyear; that wholesalers of TBA have also been substantially precluded from selling to Atlantic's service stations; that Goodyear wholesalers who are not supply points have been similarly restricted; and that Atlantic service station dealers have been restrained in marketing nonsponsored TBA. Finally, the Commission found that the public has suffered because lack of competition among the service stations' suppliers of TBA has precluded the possibility of price reductions to the consumer.

The Commission based these conclusions on the components of the sales commission system which include advance notice to Goodyear and Firestone of the selection of new dealers by Atlantic, training schools for Atlantic dealers in which Goodyear and Firestone TBA are used in demonstrations, sales solicitation by Atlantic salesmen of sponsored TBA from dealers, double teaming, use of a reporting technique whereby the tire company reports to Atlantic the TBA purchases of each dealer, Atlantic's recommendation to each dealer of a minimum Goodyear or Firestone TBA inventory, and Atlantic's assistance in advertising, and providing credit card facilities for the sale of sponsored TBA.

Upon finding the sales commission system an unfair method of competition, the Commission revised and expanded the examiner's order. The order of the Commission not only prohibits Atlantic from coercing its distributors and dealers to purchase a particular brand of TBA but also forbids its participation in any sales commission arrangement for the distribution of TBA. Further, the order prohibits Goodyear's participation in any sales commission arrangement with Atlantic or any other oil company for marketing its TBA.

Upon a consideration of the record as a whole, we conclude there was substantial evidence to support the Commission's ultimate findings and conclusions and that its order should be affirmed in all respects.

To narrate all relevant facts would extend our discussion unduly; we undertake a summary.

Atlantic's Operations.

Atlantic has three major kinds of customers: wholesale distributors, retailers, and commercial accounts; the last class was not involved in the administrative proceeding.

Wholesale distributors maintain their own storage facilities and resell Atlantic's products under its brand names to their retail customers, including service stations. In 1956 there were 236 Atlantic distributors selling to 2,897 service stations.

Retail dealers who purchase directly from Atlantic are of two classes; lessee-dealers, that is, service station operators who do not own their stations; and contract dealers, station operators who own their stations or lease from parties other than Atlantic, or operate garages, grocery stores, and similar establishments. The company had 5,537 direct retail dealers in 1956. Lessee-dealers accounted for approximately thirty-nine per cent of Atlantic's total gasoline sales in 1955 and the contract dealers eighteen per cent.

The usual lease between Atlantic and its lessee-dealers provides for a one year term with automatic renewal from year to year unless written notice is given before the expiration of any term. When the lease is executed the dealer is required to sign an "Eleven Point Lease Letter" which prescribes operational standards for the service station. These include housekeeping, use and upkeep, display, illumination, personnel, hours of operation, services, adequate inventory, sales promotion, prices, and accounting. The standards are enforced by Atlantic through the surveillance of its sales personnel and so-called "phantom customer inspectors."

The Commission found that the eleven point letter is an integral part of the lease; that Atlantic at its option may terminate the lease in the event of its breach; and further, if a dealer violates any of the requirements of the letter, he is warned that the lease will be cancelled unless the noncompliance is remedied within fifteen days.

Atlantic adopted a policy in 1953 providing that any lessee-dealer who establishes a two year record of satisfactory operation is eligible for a three year lease. Moreover, Atlantic after 1953 no longer required its dealers to purchase Atlantic products except lubricants. The record shows, however, Atlantic's dealers handle its products exclusively.

In 1956 fifty per cent of the 3,044 Atlantic contract dealers operated service stations; the others operated grocery stores, garages, and similar outlets (outlets other than service stations ordinarily do not handle TBA).

Although contract dealers do not lease their stations from Atlantic, they usually enter into two kinds of agreements with the company, one providing for loans of station equipment and the other for the purchase of a minimum amount of gasoline. The loan agreements for equipment provide that Atlantic will install but the dealer must maintain the equipment (gasoline pumps, storage tanks, signs, compressors, etc.). The agreements ordinarily are for a one year term but may be terminated by notice of either party at the end of the original or any subsequent term. Atlantic may repossess its equipment upon termination of the contract; however, if the agreement is cancelled because of a breach by the dealer, Atlantic requires him to pay both the cost of installation and removal of the equipment or Atlantic has the option to leave the equipment and require him to pay for it.

Atlantic makes the same type of contract with its wholesale distributors for the purchase of gasoline as required of its contract dealers. The company, moreover, reserves the right to change the service stations' source of supply from Atlantic itself to its distributors.

Goodyear's Operations.

Goodyear has tire factories in five states. It also has fifty-seven warehouses from which its tires and the accessories it markets are distributed to wholesale and retail outlets. The batteries which Goodyear sells are distributed directly by the companies manufacturing them.

Goodyear operates approximately 500 company owned wholesale-retail stores throughout the United States. It also has more than 12,000 independent franchised dealers as well as a number of unfranchised dealers; both sell at wholesale and retail.

TBA.

TBA is an integral part of service station operations. Dealers must carry it in order to give complete service to motorists and to operate their stations at a profit. There are a large number of TBA items available to dealers, and there are constant changes and production developments in TBA of which the dealers must be trained and kept informed. Every major oil company offers some kind of TBA program to give training and advice to its service station dealers.

Atlantic's Purchase-Resale Plan.

For a number of years before Atlantic entered into sales commission contracts with Goodyear and Firestone, it merchandised TBA under a plan known as "purchase-resale."

Under this plan the oil company sells to its dealers at wholesale TBA products which it has purchased and warehoused. The products are merchandised either under the labels of various manufacturers or under the oil company's own labels. Atlantic under its purchase-resale plan bought Lee tires from the Lee Tire and Rubber Corporation, Exide batteries from the Electric Storage Battery Commpany, and various accessories from other suppliers, and sold these products to its wholesale distributors and retail dealers. Between 1948 and 1950 Atlantic's sales of TBA to its distributors and dealers amounted to $22,000,000.

Atlantic became increasingly dissatisfied with the purchase-resale plan. It asserts that outside of the Philadelphia area the ready availability of Lee tires diminished and it could not give good delivery on batteries or keep them properly charged. It asserts further, that its warehouses were unsuited for handling accessories, and it was difficult to maintain an adequate supply of TBA to meet the demands of its dealers.

In 1948 and 1949 Atlantic conducted a survey of its dealers to determine their preferences of brands, sources of supply, and other aspects of TBA marketing. Sixty-seven per cent of the dealers interviewed preferred Lee tires and seventy-nine per cent preferred Exide batteries over competing brands. Only eleven per cent preferred carrying Goodyear tires and four per cent Firestone. A majority preferred to purchase their TBA from more than one source because of price advantage and variety of brands. Nevertheless, Atlantic, after conducting experiments under sales commission arrangements with both Firestone and Goodyear, entered into sales commission contracts with these companies, effective March 1, 1951, covering its entire marketing area and assigning a portion of its sales territory to each company.

While negotiating the Goodyear and Firestone contracts, Atlantic asked certain battery manufacturers whether they would offer a program similar to that of Goodyear or Firestone. Several manufacturers indicated an interest. However, both Goodyear and Firestone said they would refuse to sell only tires under the sales commission plan and insisted that they be allowed to handle batteries and accessories as well as their own products.

In order to effect the transition to the new plan, Atlantic held numerous meetings with its dealers at which its own representatives and those of Goodyear or Firestone explained the new program. The dealers were told that the plan was a change in company policy; that Atlantic wanted them to carry Goodyear or Firestone TBA rather than Lee tires and Exide batteries and that the switch would be to the dealers' benefit. Letters were also sent to the dealers advising them of the availability of the new TBA program and urging them to take advantage of it. A Goodyear representative commented on the arrangement with Atlantic, "After years of courtship Atlantic and Goodyear have wed," and "We welcome wholeheartedly this merger."

To commence the plan, Atlantic gave Goodyear and Firestone the names of its dealers in their respective territories so that their advertising could be installed at the service stations. Under Atlantic's policy this meant that only Goodyear or Firestone identifications were to be displayed at Atlantic stations. Atlantic salesmen accompanied either by Goodyear or Firestone salesmen contacted the dealers concerning the change-over to sponsored TBA, and Atlantic received progress reports from Goodyear and Firestone. The reports included the names of dealers who refused to permit the installation of Goodyear or Firestone signs.

Within nine months after the sales commission system was inaugurated, Lee and Exide lost seventy-five per cent of their Atlantic sales notwithstanding the dealers' previous indication of a preference for these products. By October, 1951 ninety-seven per cent of Atlantic's New England region dealers and ninety-six per cent of its New York region dealers had signed with Goodyear. Firestone also signed virtually all the Atlantic dealers in its territory.

The Sales Commission System.

The sales commission contract between Goodyear and Atlantic and the contract between Firestone and Atlantic are similar. Under the contracts, Atlantic assigned to Goodyear its New England, New York, and Philadelphia-New Jersey marketing regions and to Firestone its eastern Pennsylvania, western Pennsylvania, and southern regions.

By the terms of the Goodyear contract, Atlantic receives a commission on all Goodyear TBA sold to Atlantic dealers in the territory assigned to Goodyear in return for Atlantic's efforts and cooperation in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA to those dealers. Atlantic's contractual assistance to Goodyear includes continuous efforts, suggestions, and counseling its dealers that they maintain adequate Goodyear stock, joint calls with Goodyear salesmen upon the dealers, and the institution of a dealer TBA training program.

An important part of the Goodyear contract is the assignment of each Atlantic dealer to a specific supply point designated by the tire company. The supply point is a TBA wholesaler who may be a Goodyear company operated store, a franchised Goodyear dealer, or an Atlantic service station dealer or distributor who at the same time is a franchised Goodyear wholesaler. Atlantic receives ten per cent commission[2] on all purchases of Goodyear TBA made by its retail dealers from the tire company's supply points and seven and one-half per cent on purchases by Atlantic's wholesale distributors.

When Atlantic selects a new retail dealer, at least three separate interviews are held with the applicant at which the sales commission program with Goodyear is explained. The dealer is told that most Atlantic stations in the Goodyear territory are identified "Goodyear" and that it would be to his advantage to carry that company's products. When an applicant is selected but before he is given a lease, he attends an Atlantic training school where extensive discussions and demonstrations of Goodyear TBA are conducted. Atlantic's sponsorship of Goodyear TBA is explained. The prospective dealer is told what Goodyear inventory he should carry and that he should use approved Goodyear signs, decals, and advertising mats. Goodyear is advised of the opening of the applicant's station, and the new dealer is informed of the Goodyear supply point to which he has been assigned.

Atlantic establishes TBA quotas for its dealers which are considered "an agreed upon obtainable objective." Goodyear reports to Atlantic the monthly purchases of its products by each Atlantic dealer. This procedure enables the oil company to check on the dealers' progress in selling sponsored TBA and also serves as an accounting method for ascertaining the sales upon which Goodyear pays Atlantic its commission.

Atlantic salesmen police the dealers' contractual obligations with the oil company by contacting the dealers regularly. It is the salesman who makes the initial recommendation whether a dealer's lease or contract is to be renewed. Atlantic salesmen not only promote the sale of their own company's products but also Goodyear TBA; they help plan sponsored TBA promotions, they write up TBA orders, and they check the dealer's books to ascertain whether nonsponsored TBA has been purchased.

Under the sales commission system, the dealers are visited regularly by a Goodyear salesman accompanied by an Atlantic salesman. Goodyear considers "double teaming" an effective means of selling its TBA. This duality of sales effort is continued at dealer meetings by the presence of representatives of the tire company and the oil company.

Atlantic reserves control over the advertising and identification that may be displayed at its service stations. Its policy is that only sponsored TBA identification should be displayed. Moreover, Atlantic credit cards include TBA. From 1951 to 1953 the credit card facility was limited in Goodyear territory to Goodyear TBA.

The Supreme Court in F. T. C. v. Cement Institute, 333 U. S. 683, 693 (1948), indicated that the Federal Trade Commission Act grants "the Commission and the courts . . . adequate powers to hit at every trade practice then existing or thereafter contained, which restrained competition or might lead to such restraint if not stopped in its incipient stages." The Commission has a latitude of flexibility within which it can restrain any new unfair method of competition "which the ingenuity of competitors may devise."[3]

Unfair methods of competition proscribed by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act cannot be classified rigidly into categories of business methods that stifle competition. Labeling at times is more harmful than helpful in formulating conceptions that correspond with reality.

Although petitioners contest the view of the general counsel that the Commission grounded its order on the existence of an illegal tying arrangement, the Commission found that the sales commission system is, in effect, such an arrangement. It went on to explain, however, that because of the peculiar features of the system, it did not rest its decision on a "mechanical application of the rule of the Northern Pacific and Osborn cases."[4] The Commission said:

> The issue here is the legality of respondents' use of a particular method of distributing TBA products.

[3] S. Rep. No. 597, 63d Cong., 2d Sess. 13 (1914).

[4] Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (1958); Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960).

> Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic. Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from the sales commission method of distributing TBA used by these respondents.

The heart of this case is the economic power Atlantic possesses over its service station dealers. Ostensibly, they are independent businessmen; but behind the legalistic facade of independence, there exists a servitude caused by the coercive pressures which Atlantic exerts upon its dealers. The keystone of the actual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers is the lease and the equipment loan contract with their short term and cancellation provisions. Without repeating all the components of the relationship, it is evident that the service station dealer is more of an economic serf than a businessman free to purchase the TBA of his choice. We believe the Commission, in evaluating the evidence, correctly found that if a dealer wishes to continue in good standing with the company and retain his lease or contract, it is advantageous that he carry sponsored TBA.

On the issue of coercion the examiner said:

> It is clear from the record in this proceeding that the Atlantic dealers did not consider the nonforcing letter as giving to them free and unhampered authority and the blessing of Atlantic to handle whatever TBA they might see fit. Both the dealers and the Atlantic salesmen accepted this letter for what it said; namely, that the dealer at the time of the change-over and prospective dealers thereafter had the right to select or reject the TBA sales program offered by Atlantic. The prospective dealer making application for an Atlantic > station would not likely reject offhand the program submitted by Atlantic, and such rejection could very well affect his selection as an Atlantic dealer. After a dealer selected a TBA program, the Atlantic salesmen insisted, and saw to it, that the dealer hewed to the line, insofar as the more important items of TBA were concerned. The salesman would be expected to insist upon the purchase of sponsored TBA, as such purchases were reflected in the commission which the salesman received.

He concluded that "coercion and pressure were used [by Atlantic] on a substantial number of dealers to induce them to purchase sponsored TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of nonsponsored items."

The Commission affirmed the examiner's finding of coercion. It said that although the proclaimed policy of Atlantic has been to permit its dealers to carry whatever TBA they choose, the policy in practice is ignored and the dealers "have been orally advised by sales officials of the oil company that their continued status as Atlantic dealers and lessees will be in jeopardy if they do not purchase sufficient quantities of sponsored TBA."

The Commission referred in particular to witnesses representing suppliers competing with Goodyear and Firestone who testified that the dealers responded negatively to their sales efforts because the dealers felt they were required to purchase sponsored TBA. There was evidence that if the dealers purchased nonsponsored TBA, they were told by Atlantic to return it or, in any event, not to display it. There was also testimony that leases had been cancelled or allowed to terminate because dealers had purchased nonsponsored TBA.

Atlantic contends that the finding of coercion is not supported by substantial evidence. It says that the finding rests on the testimony of only thirteen dealers out of more than five thousand; that these isolated instances of "unauthorized" coercion are insufficient to establish a violation of Atlantic's "free choice policy." We disagree. The evidence relating to overt coercive tactics, although not extensive, must be considered with the testimony of the witnesses representing competing suppliers to the effect that the dealers felt that if they did not carry sponsored TBA they risked reprisal. Also to be considered are the policing tactics of Atlantic's salesmen and the surveillance by the so-called phantom customer inspectors. Moreover, it should be noted that the examiner, in considering the testimony of the dealers who testified for Atlantic, recognized that these witnesses "were under considerable pressure because they were naturally interested in not jeopardizing the renewal of their leases."

Atlantic's contention that sporadic reprisals against dealers are an insufficient basis for finding coercion is answered in United States v. Loew's Inc., 371 U. S. 38, 50 (1962). There, the Court said:

> Appellants . . . make the . . . argument that each of them was found to have entered into such a small number of illegal contracts as to make it improper to enter injunctive relief. . . . We disagree. Illegality having been properly found, appellants cannot now complain that its incidence was too scatterd to warrant injunctive relief.

Atlantic's power to cause its dealers to carry either Goodyear or Firestone TBA does not depend upon overt coercive methods. The totality of facts surrounding the relationship between the oil company and the dealers points to one conclusion: the oil company is able to exert sufficient economic power over its dealers so that for all practical purposes they are required to carry sponsored TBA.

Atlantic says that its influence over its dealers to purchase sponsored TBA short of force, threat, or intimidation is lawful; that it may recommend high quality TBA to its dealers; and that such action serves a legitimate business purpose in the promotion of the sale of gasoline. This would be a persuasive argument except for the dealers' economic dependency upon the oil company. In that setting, recommendation is tantamount to command. Covert practices are as efficient as overt action. Sophisticated methods of pressuring the dealers into carrying sponsored TBA are as effectual as express covenants and open threats.

Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), although a private suit under the antitrust laws, dealt with a sales commission contract similar to the one before us. Osborn, a dealer, charged that his lease was cancelled because he had not purchased sufficient quantities of Goodyear TBA. The court of appeals held that an illegal "arrangement or condition," a tie-in, existed between the oil company and its dealers which permitted the plaintiff to recover. Although the court was not specifically concerned with the legality of the Goodyear-Sinclair sales commission contract, it held that, "the Goodyear TBA was tied to the lease and the sale of the gasoline." Chief Judge Sobeloff characterized the arrangement thus:

> The perniciousness of the imposed tie-in is aggravated by the fact that the defendant [Sinclair] is not even in the business of selling the tied products, but is employing its economic power in the gasoline industry to force his dealers to do business with a supplier in another industry under an arrangement that yields the defendant an extraneous revenue. The defendant in this case goes a step further than the supplier in the usual tie-in case, for here the tied product is not even handled or sold by the defendant, but it farms out to another, for a price, its coercive economic power.

We think this an apt characterization of the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system.

It is true that Goodyear's contract with Atlantic in itself has no tying features. Only when the contract is considered contextually with the oil company-dealer relationship and the economic power that Atlantic has over its dealers does its tying feature emerge. Manifestly, the system was designed to exploit Atlantic's created and controlled service station market. The Commission properly, we think, decided that the system integrates Atlantic's economic power over its service station market into the Goodyear TBA distribution system, thus giving Goodyear, for a price, a captive market.

As pointed out in McElhenney Co. v. Western Auto Supply Co., 269 F. 2d 332 (4th Cir. 1959), an illegal understanding (such as a tying arrangement) may be implied from a course of dealing between the parties. Here, the tying arrangement is the sales commission system operated by Goodyear and Atlantic. In its narrower aspects the system is a tying arrangement because it requires the buyer of one product, the service station dealer who purchases Atlantic gasoline, to buy another line of merchandise, Goodyear TBA. Surrender by the dealer of his freedom to choose between brands of TBA is per se illegal if a "not insubstantial" amount of interstate commerce is affected. Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (1958); International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U. S. 392 (1947).

Appraising the broader aspects of the system as a tying arrangement, we think the Commission correctly determined that the system injures competition in the distribution of TBA at the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail levels. Interbrand competition for the Atlantic service station TBA market is foreclosed to Firestone in Goodyear's territory and Goodyear is foreclosed from selling to the service stations in Firestone's territory. Moreover, the record substantiates the Commission's finding that suppliers of TBA competing with Goodyear and Firestone are substantially foreclosed from selling their products to Atlantic dealers. Atlantic's service station market is fenced off so as to make it unavailable to both manufacturers and wholesalers of competing brands.

Intrabrand competition is perniciously affected. Restraint results inevitably from the designation of a single supply point for TBA sales to the Atlantic dealer. Other Goodyear wholesalers cannot compete with the supply point dealer for the business of the Atlantic service stations in his territory.[5]

We are convinced that the Commission correctly analyzed the sales commission system and found, in effect, a tying arrangement inherently anticompetitive. It is anticompetitive largely because competition for the business of the individual service station is replaced by competition for the oil company's domination of its dealers.

The Commission found that service stations constitute a large and necessary market for TBA and evaluated the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system in relation to Atlantic's seventeen-state service station TBA market. Atlantic has nearly seven thousand service stations in this territory. As of 1955 Goodyear had signed TBA contracts with 2,183 of the 2,248 Atlantic service stations in the eight-state territory assigned it. As of 1955 Firestone had signed virtually all the 4,698 Atlantic stations in the ten-state area assigned it. Goodyear's TBA sales to Atlantic dealers rose from approximately two and one-half million dollars in 1951 to more than five and one-half million dollars in 1955. Firestone's sales to Atlantic dealers increased from $3,243,350 in 1951 to $5,562,936 in 1955. Total Goodyear and Firestone sales under the Atlantic contracts from June, 1950 to June, 1956 was more than $52,000,000. Atlantic's stations constitute 3.4 per cent of the total number of service stations in the United States and it sells 2.5 per cent of the gasoline sold in the nation.

We believe the foregoing facts adequately demonstrate that a substantial amount of commerce has been affected by Atlantic's contracts with Goodyear and Firestone. These facts also demonstrate that Atlantic has sufficient economic power in the gasoline market to restrain a substantial amount of commerce in the service station TBA market within the territory serviced by Atlantic. Therefore, the Goodyear-Atlantic sales commission system is within the

[5] Of the 1,155 independent Goodyear dealers in Atlantic's marketing area, only 128 were acting as supply points for Atlantic service stations.

"substantiality of economic effect on commerce" test defined in Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, supra, and Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 337 U. S. 293 (1949). Cf. Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., supra.

II.

Goodyear contends that the provision in the Commission's order prohibiting it from entering into sales commission contracts with any oil company is not supported by substantial evidence. Atlantic makes a similar contention that the order is too broad because it prohibits the oil company's participation in a sales commission arrangement with any TBA supplier.

We think the Supreme Court answered petitioners' contentions in F. T. C. v. Ruberoid Co., 343 U. S. 470, 473 (1952), when it said:

> Orders of the Federal Trade Commission are not intended to impose criminal punishment or exact compensatory damages for past acts, but to prevent illegal practices in the future. In carrying out this function the Commission is not limited to prohibiting the illegal practice in the precise form in which it is found to have existed in the past. If the Commission is to attain the objectives Congress envisioned, it cannot be required to confine its road block to the narrow lane the transgressor has traveled; it must be allowed effectively to close all roads to the prohibited goal, so that its order may not be by-passed with impunity.

Petitioners' contention that the Commission's findings are inadequate and do not meet the requirements of section 8 of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U. S. C. §1007(b), is without merit.

Moreover, we are not persuaded by Atlantic's contention that the hearing examiner, in making his decision, considered evidence outside the record since he heard a similar complaint filed against Firestone and Shell Oil Company;

nor are we persuaded by Goodyear's contention that the finding of the violation against it is based on evidence admitted against Atlantic but struck as to Goodyear. While the examiner received evidence concerning both the Firestone-Atlantic and the Firestone-Shell sales commission contracts, we are satisfied that the findings of both the examiner and the Commission were based on proper and sufficient evidence and that there was no denial of procedural due process.

The Commission's order is affirmed and will be enforced.

DECREE OF THE COURT OF APPEALS.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS,

FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, Respondent.	No. 13339.

May 20, 1964
Final Decree Affirming and Enforcing Order to Cease and Desist

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, a corporation, petitioner herein, having filed in this Court on May 10, 1961, a petition to review and set aside an order to cease and desist issued against it on March 9, 1961, by the Federal Trade Commission, respondent herein, in a proceeding before it entitled "In the Matter of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, a corporation, and The Atlantic Refining Company, a corporation, Docket No. 6486;" and a copy of said petition having been served upon respondent; and the respondent having thereafter certified and filed in this Court a transcript of the entire record in said proceeding; and the matter having been heard by this Court on briefs and oral argument on January 9, 1964, and this Court having rendered its decision on April 24, 1964:

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that the prayer of the aforesaid petition to set aside the order of the Federal Trade Commission as to the petitioner herein be, and it hereby is, denied;

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that the order to cease and desist of the Federal Trade Commission be, and it hereby is, affirmed, and that petitioner be, and it hereby is, commanded forthwith to obey said order and to comply therewith.

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

No. 296

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

ON PETITIONS FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

These cases primarily involve the validity, under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 45, of a so-called "sales commission agreement" between the petitioners Atlantic Refining Company ("Atlantic"), a large marketer of petroleum products (Pet. App. A–5),[1] and Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company ("Goodyear"), one of the nation's largest tire companies. Pursuant to this agreement, Atlantic promotes the sale of Goodyear tires, batteries and automotive accessories ("TBA") to Atlantic gasoline dealers in the northeast United States, in exchange for the payment of a commission to Atlantic measured by the amount of Goodyear sales to such dealers.[2]

The Federal Trade Commission, describing the Atlantic-Goodyear sales commission agreement as "a classic example of the use of economic power in one market [gasoline distribution] to destroy competition in another market [TBA distribution]" (Pet. App. B–64), held that the agreement and its implementation constituted an unfair method of competition in violation of Section 5; and entered an order prohibiting either company from entering into or continuing any such agreements (Pet. App. B–67–71). In two companion cases, Federal Trade Commission v. Texaco, Inc. and The B. F. Goodrich Co. (FTC Docket 6485) and Federal Trade Commission v. Shell Oil Company and The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company (FTC Docket 6487), the Commission held other sales commission agreements similarly illegal and entered similar orders. In the present cases the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit unanimously upheld the Commission's orders (331 F. 2d 394; Pet. App. C–1–19). In the Texaco-Goodrich cases however, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit (Judge Washington concurring in part and dissenting in part) reversed the Commission and remanded the cause to the agency with instructions to dismiss the complaint (Texaco, Inc. et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, Nos. 17,915 and 17,923, C.A.D.C., July 30, 1964).[3] The opinion in the Texaco cases is reprinted in the Appendix (App. pp. 1a–27a).

[2] The agreement provides for the payment of a 10 percent commission on all sales of TBA to Atlantic dealer outlets, and a commission of 7½ percent on all sales of TBA to Atlantic franchise petroleum distributors. Atlantic entered into a similar agreement with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. covering its dealers in another part of the country (Pet. App. A–7–8). Petitioner Goodyear also had similar sales commission arrangements for distribution of its TBA through the outlets of 11 other oil companies (Pet. App. B–2). The validity of these other distribution arrangements also is involved in these cases.

The Seventh and the District of Columbia Circuits, in respectively upholding and condemning the sales commission contracts, each looked to the evidence of the oil company's economic power over its dealers and the impact of the sales-commission agreement in the particular market involved. Because the decisions rest upon different records, they might not appear to involve any conflict as to the governing legal principles. There is, however, a basic inconsistency in the rationale of the two courts which underlies the differing results. This conflict in approach is epitomized, we believe, by contrasting the majority's statement in Texaco-Goodrich, that Texaco's "contracts with the dealers do not give rise" to "controlling economic power over its dealers" (App. p. 15a), with the Seventh Circuit's assertion, in Atlantic-Goodyear, that Atlantic had controlling economic power over its dealers and that the "keystone" of this power was the lease and equipment loan contracts between Atlantic and its dealers (Pet. App. C–12). The conflicting approaches are further illustrated in the response of the two courts to the argument that an oil company should be permitted to "recommend" sponsored TBA to its dealers. The Seventh Circuit stated that because of the dealers' "economic dependency upon the oil company * * * recommendation [by Atlantic] is tantamount to command" (Pet. App. C–14–15) and agreed with the Commission that, viewed in the context of the oil company-dealer relationship, Atlantic's recommendation made the sales commission system of TBA distribution "in effect, a tying arrangement inherently anticompetitive" (Pet. App. C–17).[4] The Texaco-Goodrich majority, on the other hand, stated (App. p. 16a):

> An oil marketing company's recommendation to its dealers that they purchase a particular line of TBA, even though it receives a commission for doing so, is not incompatible with its primary business of selling petroleum products.

The government believes that in view of the conflicting rationale of these two courts of appeals, review by this Court is appropriate.[5] Moreover, the validity of these sales commission agreements presents an important question. Such agreements are widely used and have a substantial economic impact in the marketing of tires, batteries and accessories and upon the relations of petroleum companies with their dealers. The uncertainties and inconsistencies that would result if these two decisions were permitted to stand, are readily apparent.

The government intends to file a petition for a writ of certiorari to review the decision of the District of Columbia Circuit. While we believe that the decision below in the present cases is correct we join with the petitioners in urging this Court to review it.

Respectfully submitted.

THE B. F. GOODRICH COMPANY, PETITIONER

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, RESPONDENT

Petitions to Review Order of the Federal Trade Commission

Decided July 30, 1964

Before WILBUR K. MILLER, WASHINGTON and BURGER, Circuit Judges.

WILBUR K. MILLER, Circuit Judge: Texaco, Inc. (formerly The Texas Company) and The B. F. Goodrich Company have filed separate petitions for review of an order of the Federal Trade Commission which was issued April 15, 1963, after proceedings which will be described. The cases were heard together and will be disposed of in a single opinion.

On January 11, 1956, after an investigation which began at least as early as 1952, the Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint against the petitioners charging them with violating Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45, by engaging in unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce. Specifically, the object of the Commission's attack was the implementation of a contract between the two companies, entered into in 1940, in which Texaco undertook, in return for a commission, to promote the sale of Goodrich tires, batteries and accessories (TBA) to its thousands of dealers in its petroleum products. It was alleged that Texaco has entered into a similar contract with Firestone Tire & Rubber Company.

The complaint stated that influence and control over the purchasing and marketing activities of its dealers has been and is being exercised by Texaco "by recommending, urging, persuading and causing them to purchase a substantial quantity of TBA products from Goodrich and Firestone, the sellers designated by it." The acts and practices of Goodrich and Texaco under the commission contract, the complaint said,

> ". . . have unduly frustrated, hindered, suppressed, lessened, restrained, prevented and eliminated competition in the sale of TBA products in commerce within the intent and meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act; have the capacity and tendency to restrain unreasonably and have restrained unreasonably such commerce in said products; and constitute unfair methods of competition and unfair acts and practices, in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act."

Essentially, the complaint was that Texaco coerces its dealers, through economic pressure, to distribute Goodrich TBA and thus unfairly and unlawfully prevents Goodrich's competitors from selling TBA to Texaco's outlets.

Answers by the companies placed the essential allegations of the complaint in issue, after which evidentiary hearings were conducted over a period of nearly three years. They were concluded December 10, 1958. The examiner, in his initial decision issued October 23, 1959, found that Goodrich had not done anything to force Texaco outlets to buy its products; that there was neither charge nor proof that Goodrich had conspired with Texaco to restrain competition; and that the commissions paid by it under the contract were for substantial services rendered by Texaco in promoting the sale of its products. Accordingly, the initial decision of October 23, 1959, dismissed the complaint against Goodrich.

With respect to Texaco, the examiner found that the contracts between Texaco and its dealers do not contain any provision requiring the latter to purchase only Goodrich TBA. He said the commission paid to Texaco by Goodrich is based on substantial services rendered by Texaco in promoting the sale of Goodrich TBA, and added:

> "No inference or implication can be drawn, simply from the contractual relationship between Texas and its dealers, that the degree of control by Texas over its dealers is sufficient to force its dealers to purchase only sponsored TBA."

The examiner found, however, that > ". . . the record in this proceeding as a whole indicates that coercion and pressure was [sic], in fact, brought on a substantial number > of dealers to induce them to purchase sponsored TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of non-sponsored items."[1] (Emphasis supplied.)

Pursuant to this, the examiner's initial decision of October 23, 1959, ordered Texaco to cease and desist from coercing its dealers into purchasing TBA from any particular supplier.

In keeping with the deliberate progress of this proceeding, the Commission did not act on the initial decision of October 23, 1959, until March 9, 1961. On that day it handed down an opinion in which it not only reversed the examiner's dismissal of Goodrich but also found > ". . . that Texaco had sufficient economic power over its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics. . ."

Proceeding from its assumption that Texaco had controlling economic power over its dealers, "even without the use of overt coercive tactics," the Commission said:

> ". . . The determination of whether Texaco's exercise of such economic power in favor of Firestone and Goodyear under the oil company's sales commission contracts with these rubber companies constitutes an unfair method of competition depends, therefore, upon the

[1] This was a rather extraordinary conclusion in view of the fact that not one of Texaco's more than 38,000 dealers was called to testify before the examiner in support of the complaint. The examiner based the statement on the testimony of five former Texaco dealers who said they had been coerced, although five other former dealers and 54 active dealers called by Texaco said they had never been coerced or influenced in any way as to Goodrich TBA.

competitive effects of these sales commission contracts; not upon whether Texaco has exercised its power to implement such contracts through the use of overt coercive tactics, or by more subtle, but equally effective, means.

"At issue in this litigation, then, is the legality of a particular method of distributing TBA used by respondents. A key fact in evaluating the competitive effects of respondents' use of the sales commission method of distributing TBA is the fact that Texaco has sufficient economic power with respect to its retail and wholesale petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of the brand of TBA sponsored or sold by Texaco. But such economic power is a fact existing independently of any particular method of distributing TBA which Texaco may use. Whether the sales commission agreements between Firestone and Texaco and Goodrich and Texaco are unlawful must depend, therefore, upon the characteristics and the competitive effects of these sales commission agreements. For reasons set forth hereinafter, we conclude that this case must be remanded in order that market data may be introduced to show the competitive effects of Texaco's sales commission agreements with Goodrich and Firestone upon competing suppliers of tires, batteries and accessories at the manufacturing, wholesale and retail levels."

Having thus concluded that the legality of the sales commission agreements depends upon the "characteristics[2] and the competitive effects" of the agreements, the Commission closed its opinion by saying:

"However, the record in this case does not contain sufficient market data to enable the

[2] The "characteristics" of the agreements were of course fully known to the Commission, which had before it their complete text.

> Commission to assess the competitive effects of the sales commission method of distributing TBA employed by these respondents. The case will be remanded to the hearing examiner for the taking of evidence indicating the competitive effects of the sales commission contracts at the manufacturing, wholesale and retail levels of TBA distribution."

More than a year after the remand of March 9, 1961,[3] the examiner conducted hearings from July 16 to July 19, 1962, at which the only proof introduced was in the form of exhibits received over the objection of the petitioners. A new initial decision was filed by the examiner September 24, 1962. In it he incorporated the findings of fact of his first initial decision and made additional findings of fact based on the record as supplemented after remand. The examiner noted that he was bound by the Commission's reversal of his dismissal of Goodrich, and by its finding that Texaco has sufficient economic power over its dealers to cause them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA, even without the use of coercive tactics. He conluded that > ". . . the only issue left for consideration of the hearing examiner under the terms of the Commission's opinion and order of remand, is the competitive effects of the sales commission plan used by Goodrich with The Texas Company, and whether Texaco's exercise of such economic power in favor of Goodrich and Firestone under their sales commission contracts have sufficient competitive effect to constitute an unfair method of competition or an unfair act or practice."

[3] A part of this period was consumed in the petitioners' unsuccessful attempt to enjoin further hearings.

The examiner disposed of the "only issue left for [his] consideration" by concluding that > "The use of the sales commission plan of distribution of TBA by the respondents, The Texas Company and The B. F. Goodrich Company as herein found, has a tendency and capacity to restrict, restrain or lessen competition in the sale of TBA products and constitutes an unfair method of competition and an unfair act and practice in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act."

In obedience to the Commission's order on remand, the examiner abandoned his former position, held Goodrich as a respondent, and concluded:

> "The use of the sales commission method of distribution by Goodrich was designed to take advantage of the economic control which Texaco had over its dealers, and by such use, Goodrich was able to obtain an unfair advantage over its competitors in selling to Texaco stations and in addition, aided and abetted Texaco in removing from the open market a substantial number of new and established Texaco dealers by causing them to purchase Goodrich TBA exclusively or in substantial quantities, and thereby excluding competitors of Goodrich who might otherwise have been able to sell their TBA to a substantial number of such Texaco dealers."

Although he had the first time dismissed Goodrich, and had merely ordered Texaco to cease and desist from the coercive practices he had found from the testimony of five ex-dealers, this time the examiner entered a broad order as to both respondents. He ordered Texaco to cease and desist from entering into or continuing in effect any contract with Goodrich or any other rubber company or tire manufacturer, or any other supplier of tires, batteries or accessories, by the terms of which Texaco receives anything of value in connection with the sale of TBA to its dealers. The examiner ordered Goodrich to cease and desist from operating under its contract with Texaco and prohibited it from entering into a similar contract with any other marketing oil company.

The order of remand of March 9, 1961, was entered by a Commission composed of Chairman Kintner and Commissioners Secrest, Anderson and Kern. Accompanying it was the opinion to which we have referred, written by Chairman Kintner and concurred in by the other three members of the Commission. Shortly thereafter—on March 21, 1961—Earl W. Kintner was replaced as Chairman by Paul Rand Dixon, who had not been a member of the Commission theretofore. One of the acts of the new Chairman when he had been in office only a short time led to the phase of the proceeding which we shall now consider.

On February 18, 1963, before the Commission had acted on the examiner's new initial decision of September 24, 1962, Texaco filed a motion that Chairman Dixon withdraw from participation in the proceeding or that the Commission determine him to be disqualified. The basis of the motion was a speech made by Dixon before the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, Inc., in Denver, Colorado, on July 25, 1961, while the case was pending before the examiner after remand and before any steps had been taken by him. In the course of his address, according to a press release issued by the Commission itself, the then newly appointed Chairman of the Commission said:

> "Your problems are many, and many of them are the problems of the Federal Trade Commission, too; for the Commission is concerned with promoting fair competition. More particularly, many of your problems are ours because they arise from practices prohibited by two of the most important statutes administered by the Commission—discriminatory pricing, prohibited by the Robinson-Patman Act, and other unfair acts, practices, and methods of competition, prohibited by the Federal Trade Commission Act.

* * * * *

"We at the Commission are well aware of the practices which plague you and we have challenged their legality in many important cases.

"You know the practices—price fixing, price discrimination, and overriding commissions on TBA.

"You know the companies—Atlantic, Texas, Pure, Shell, Sun, Standard of Indiana, American, Goodyear, Goodrich, and Firestone.

* * * * *

"Some of these cases are still pending before the Commission; some have been decided by the Commission and are in the courts on appeal. You may be sure that the Commission will continue and, to the extent that increased funds and efficiency permit, will increase its efforts to promote fair competition in your industry."

The Commission denied the motion that it determine Chairman Dixon to be disqualified, and he declined to withdraw from participation. Instead, he took part in the entry of the order of April 15, 1963, more than two years after the remand, which adopted the examiner's initial decision and order of September 25, 1962, which as we have seen, was adverse to Texaco and Goodrich and which is now under review. Before turning to the question whether the order of April 15, 1963, was supported by the record, we consider the propriety of Chairman Dixon's participation in that decision.

In Gilligan, Will & Co. v. Securities and Exchange Comm'n, 267 F. (2d) 461 (1959), the Commission, three days after commencing proceedings, issued a press release stating in effect that Gilligan, Will & Co. and others had violated Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933. Although the Second Circuit held that petitioners' failure to make timely objection had waived their right to assert the defect of prejudgment, the Court strongly disapproved of the Commission's behavior. It said, at pages 468–9:

> "* * * [T]he Commission's reputation for objectivity and impartiality is opened to challenge by the adoption of a procedure from which a disinterested observer may conclude that it has in some measure adjudged the facts as well as the law of a particular case in advance of hearing it. * * *"

In this case, a disinterested reader of Chairman Dixon's speech could hardly fail to conclude that he had in some measure decided in advance that Texaco had violated the Act.

We said in Amos Treat & Co. v. Securities and Exchange Comm'n, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 100, 107, 306 F. (2d) 260, 267 (1962):

> ". . . [A]n administrative hearing of such importance and vast potential consequences must be attended, not only with every element of fairness but with the very appearance of complete fairness. Only thus can the tribunal conducting a quasi-adjudicatory proceeding meet the basic requirement of due process."

The administrative hearing in the present case was certainly as important as that in the Amos Treat case, and has perhaps even greater potential consequences. We conclude that Chairman Dixon's participation in the hearing amounted in the circumstances to a denial of due process which invalidated the order under review. If that were the only infirmity in the order, we should be constrained to remand the cases to the Commission for a de novo consideration in which Chairman Dixon does not take part. His Denver speech, made before the matter was submitted to the Commission but while it was before the examiner, plainly reveals that he had already concluded that Texaco and Goodrich were violating the Act, and that he would protect the petroleum retailers from such abuses.

But that is not all. The Supreme Court has said that in reviewing the substantiality of the evidence we must consider all the evidence including "the body of evidence opposed to the Board's view." Universal Camera Corp. v. N.L.R.B., 340 U.S. 474, 487–8 (1951). Viewed in this way we are convinced that the order of April 15, 1963, is not supported by substantial evidence on the record as a whole. The order under review, as we have said, adopted the examiner's initial decision and order of September 24, 1962, after slight modification. In it, the Commission said:

> "Respondents contend that the tables, surveys, and matters officially noticed by the examiner on remand were improperly admitted both because they are inappropriate objects for official notice and because respondents were afforded inadequate opportunity to rebut them.
>
> "It is not necessary to pass upon the correctness of these contentions, since the Commission excludes from its present decision any reliance upon the challenged evidence. It finds that the other evidence of record amply supports the conclusions and the order of the hearing examiner. The legal principles relevant to this decision need not be reexamined here because they are set forth at length in the opinions of the Commission in Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., et al., Docket 6486, March 9, 1961, and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., et al., Docket 6487, March 9, 1961. . . ."[4]

Thus, in its consideration of the revised initial decision and order, the Commission expressly disclaimed any reliance upon the evidence introduced after remand and held that the evidence or record before the remand "amply supports the conclusions and order of the hearing examiner." This was the same record which the Commission on March 9, 1961, had said "does not contain sufficient market data to enable the Commission to assess the competitive effects of the sales commission method of distributing TBA employed by these respondents."

But, in successfully resisting an action in the District Court by Texaco and Goodrich to enjoin the remand, the new Commission contended that it "needed additional evidence in order to decide the issues presented." It asserted that the opinion of March 9, 1961, ordering the remand showed that the Commission "is not seeking a retrial of matters already tried but rather envisions supplementary evidence on what it considered to be significant facts in any assessment of the competitive effects of the sales commission agreements. . . ."

Despite these representations, the Commission on April 15, 1963, contrary to the former Commission's determination that the record did not justify such a finding, found the petitioners in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act on the basis of that record. It adopted the examiner's revised

[4] It is perhaps not without significance that Commissioner Anderson, the only member of the Commission as constituted on April 15, 1963, who had participated in the remand of March 9, 1961, did not concur "for the reason that the command of the remand order of March 9, 1961, has not been met and complied with . . ."

order which prohibited Goodrich from entering into sales commission agreements with Texaco or any other marketing oil company, and prohibited Texaco from entering into such agreements with Goodrich or any other rubber company or tire manufacturer, or any other supplier of tires, batteries or accessories.

The new Commission placed itself in an anomalous position: first, it vigorously asserted (as the former Commission had held when it remanded the proceeding) that it could not find against the petitioners without additional evidence as to the competitive effects of the sales commission contracts; then, it decided that same issue against the petitioners without any consideration of the record made after remand, and without repudiating or even commenting upon its confessed inability to reach that issue previously.

Although the two Commissions reached diametrically opposite conclusions from the same record as to whether unfair competition had been shown, both based their action upon their conclusion that

> "Texaco has sufficient economic power over its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics. . . ."[5] (Emphasis supplied.)

---

[5] Although the examiner concluded in his first initial decision that the record "as a whole" indicated coercion had been brought on "a substantial number of dealers" (five former dealers out of many thousands of former and active dealers), the remanding Commission apparently did not regard such meager proof as convincing, for it expressly discarded it as a basis of decision, and concluded as stated in the text above that Texaco had controlling economic power over its dealers without the use of coercive tactics.

The examiner's first initial decision had not so concluded, but the remanding Commission's conclusion as to Texaco's economic

But neither Commission referred to any evidence in support of this finding, and neither made any finding of fact which would sustain a conclusion that Texaco had such economic power over its dealers, and we are unable to see substantial evidence on the record as a whole to sustain that conclusion. The Commission did not reject its examiner's statement that no inference can be drawn from the contracts between Texaco and its dealers that the former has sufficient economic power over the latter to force them to purchase only sponsored TBA. And it did not say (for there was no proof from which it could conclude) that Texaco's treatment of its dealers and their reaction indicated that Texaco had, or had attempted to exercise, the controlling economic power over its dealers that the Commission found. Indeed, the examiner found as a fact that Texaco's policy, announced to all its salesmen as long ago as June 1, 1948, is that it has neither the right nor the desire to dictate to the dealer or to influence him in any way as to the type of merchandise he should handle, or the source from which he should purchase it.[6] This finding was adopted by the Commission.

power was parroted by him in his initial decision after remand. He added thereto the following sentence selected from another portion of the remanding Commission's opinion: "Such economic power exists independent of any particular method of distributing TBA which Texaco might use." This new conclusion was adopted by the Commission in its decision of April 15, 1963. Consequently, both Commissions concluded that Texaco had controlling economic power without the use of coercive tactics.

[6] Finding of Fact No. 8 in the examiner's post-remand initial decision is as follows:

"As a result of an antitrust suit filed against Standard Oil Company of California, Walter Hochuli, General Sales Manager of The Texas Company, on June 1, 1948, issued a so-called policy letter to the territorial man-

Consequently, we find no basis in the record for the Commission's conclusion that Texaco has controlling economic power over its dealers. The contracts with the dealers do not give rise to it, and it is the announced policy of Texaco to respect the independence of its dealers; as the evidence overwhelmingly shows, its practice has followed its policy. The mere fact that Texaco is a giant corporation and the dealers are in the main small businessmen cannot be said to demonstrate controlling economic power over the latter, particularly when, as here, the evidence is to the contrary. We hold, therefore, that the Commission erred in concluding that Texaco has sufficient economic power over its dealers, without the use of coercive tactics, to cause them to buy substantial quantities of Goodrich TBA. We have already noted that the Commission did not find coercive tactics had been used, and that the record as a whole demonstrates the contrary.

From its unwarranted assumption that Texaco had such economic power, the Commission proceeded to the conclusion that the question whether the exercise of that power in Goodrich's behalf amounts to an unfair method of competition depends on the "competitive effects" of the sales commission agreements. It agers, which was subsequently disseminated down the chain of command to salesmen. This letter advised the personnel that they were to consider a Texaco dealer as an independent businessman; that he should be encouraged to expand his business by purchasing TBA; that the personnel have a right to recommend certain lines, but that Texas has neither the right nor the desire to dictate to the dealer or to influence him in any way as to the type of merchandise he should handle, or the source from which he should purchase it; that the Texaco dealer must be permitted to operate as an independent businessman and anyone who violates this policy would be subject to immediate dismissal."

said that Texaco's controlling economic power is a "key fact" in evaluating the competitive effects of the sales commission contracts. Thus, the Commission itself said that the supposed need to examine the "competitive effects" was due entirely to its conclusion that Texaco not only had, but exercised, controlling economic power over its dealers without using coercive tactics. This conclusion was indeed the keystone of the Commission's ultimate decision, without which it cannot stand. That being true, our holding that there is not a substantial evidentiary basis in the record for the Commission's assumption that Texaco had and exercised coercive economic power causes its conclusion based thereon to collapse.

The Commission's sweeping order not only condemned the Texaco-Goodrich contract but also held illegal any sales commission arrangement between an oil marketing company and a TBA supplier. This either attributes to all such oil companies inherent controlling economic power over their dealers, or implies there is basic illegality in such arrangements. Our view is that, in any case, there must be substantial evidence on the whole record of the supposed economic power of the oil marketing company before a prohibiting order can be based upon it. As to the implication that sales commission agreements between oil companies and TBA suppliers are basically illegal regardless of their terms, we disagree. There is no reason to condemn such contracts unless they result in unfair competition. An oil marketing company's recommendation to its dealers that they purchase a particular line of TBA, even though it receives a commission for doing so, is not incompatible with its primary business of selling petroleum products. The dealers, at least in the situation here involved, are quite free to accept or reject the recommendation, and to handle a different line if they think it would be more acceptable to their customers.

The Commission's broad order prohibited contracts for sponsorship of TBA sales to oil marketing company dealers only when the company receives compensation for the sponsorship. The vice found by the Commission in the arrangement seems therefore to be the payment of commissions. Yet the Commission adopted the findings of the examiner which described in detail the services performed by Texaco under its contract with Goodrich and also adopted his conclusions that

> "The consideration for the payment of a commission to Texas under the sales commission contract is based upon substantial services rendered by Texas in promoting the sale of Goodrich TBA to Texaco dealers and distributors."

We see nothing illegal or even unethical in the payment of commissions for such services, except in instances where an oil marketing company forces its dealers through coercive tactics or controlling economic power to buy the sponsored products. Neither of those influences was proved in this case, and it may not be presumed that either will exist in future similar situations.

After four years of preliminary investigation followed by eight years of litigation, including the remand for additional evidence said to have been necessary but never used, the Commission has not been able to show illegality in the Texaco-Goodrich contract of 1940. During that long period, the companies necessarily have devoted much time and money to their defense. Although the Commission must be allowed considerable leeway in developing a record, its efforts in this case—fruitless after a dozen years—have exceeded permissible limits and have had unreasonably harassing and oppressive effects upon the companies under attack. Because the Commission's drastic orders are not supported by the record as a whole and because of the undue protraction of the administrative process, we are of the opinion that this long drawn out proceeding should now be terminated. Accordingly, the order under review will be set aside, and the matter will be remanded to the Commission with instructions to dismiss the complaint.

It is so ordered.

WASHINGTON, Circuit Judge, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

I agree with the majority that Chairman Dixon's conduct disqualified him from participating in the Commission's order, and that the order must be set aside for that reason. I would not, however, dismiss the entire proceeding, either on the merits or because of the Commission's delays. I would remand for further consideration of the case by the Commission, without the participation of Chairman Dixon, and on a basis which I will outline later on.

I

With reference to Chairman Dixon's conduct, I would add only this. Federal Trade Commissioners, like other adjudicators, are entitled to hold and express views on the laws they are charged with enforcing and applying. They "do not stand aloof on . . . chill and distant heights; and we shall not help the cause of truth by acting and speaking as if they do."[1] We do not equate impartiality with utter indifference. A judge does not deny litigants a fair hearing by sitting in a case "after he had expressed an opinion as to whether certain types of conduct were prohibited by law."[2] We do not expect a Trade Commissioner to be neutral on anti-monopoly policies.

A fair hearing is denied, however, if the administrative judge, prior to examining the evidence and findings, has indicated his belief that named individuals or firms are violating the statute, and the "guilt" or "innocence" of such parties depends on certain factual findings which are in dispute. Once an adjudicator has taken a position apparently inconsistent with an ability to judge the facts fairly, subsequent protestations of open-mindedness on his part cannot restore a presumption of impartiality. Whether justice was in fact done is not the issue; an administrative hearing "must be attended, not only with every element of fairness but with the very appearance of complete fairness."[3] We must presume that a fair hearing was denied[4] if a disinterested observer would have reason to believe that the Commissioner had "in some measure adjudged the facts . . . of a particular case in advance of hearing it."[5]

Chairman Dixon's speech leaves a clear impression that his belief that petitioners had violated the Act was far stronger than the "reason to believe" which

In that case the Securities and Exchange Commission, three days after commencing adjudicatory proceedings, had issued a press release, stating that the parties involved had violated the relevant Act. The Second Circuit, in dicta, strongly disapproved of the Commission's behavior, but held that petitioners had waived their right to object by failing to make a timely motion.

justifies the issuance of a complaint. Indeed, his speech suggests not only a substantial conviction that Texaco and Goodrich are violating the Act but an implied promise to support the petroleum retailers in their struggle against alleged abuses by their suppliers. An independent observer could fairly conclude that Chairman Dixon was in some measure pre-committed to a determination adverse to petitioners. We must therefore—at the least—vacate the Commission's order and remand to the Commission for a de novo consideration of the record and the arguments without the participation of Chairman Dixon.[6]

II

The Absence of Reviewable Findings

The Commission's decision consisted of an assertion that the "other evidence of record[7] amply supports the conclusions and the order of the Hearing Examiner. The legal principles relevant to this decision need not be reexamined here because they are set forth at length in the opinions of the Commission in Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. * * * and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. * * *"

---

[6] Federal Trade Commission v. Cement Institute, supra, is to be distinguished on the grounds that (a) the disqualification of the entire Commission, which was there sought, would have effectively precluded any enforcement of the Act against the respondent (the "necessity doctrine"), and (b) the opinion does not indicate that the Commissioners had expressed a focussed bias against the respondent, rather a general "policy" bias against basing point systems.

[7] That is, exclusive of certain evidence adduced in the remand proceeding, which petitioners claimed was improperly admitted, and which the Commission in fact stated that it would not consider.

Section 8(b) of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 1007(b) (1958), provides in part that all decisions "shall * * * include a statement of (1) findings and conclusions, as well as the reasons or basis therefor, upon all the material issues of fact, law, or discretion presented on the record * * *." Recently, the Supreme Court set aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, partly on the ground that—

> "There are no findings and no analysis here to justify the choice made, no indication of the basis on which the Commission exercised its expert discretion. We are not prepared to and the Administrative Procedure Act will not permit us to accept such adjudicatory practice."[8]

The mere citation of earlier opinions does not provide a sufficient basis to understand and evaluate the Commission's decision on the facts of this case. There are a variety of facts and findings relied on by the Commission in the Goodyear and Firestone cases which cannot be readily assumed here. For example, on the issue of coercion, in Goodyear the Commission found that "Atlantic dealers have been orally advised by sales officials of the oil company that their continued status as Atlantic dealers and lessees will be in jeopardy if they do not purchase sufficient quantities of sponsored TBA."[9] In Firestone the Commission pointed to internal memoranda of the Shell Oil Company to support the conclusion of coercion. In both cases the Commission purported to make an examination of the competitive effects of the sales commission plan, saying, "Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from respondents' use of the sales commission method of distributing TBA,"[10] and, in pursuing an alternative theory of a tie-in arrangement, purported to make findings on Atlantic's and Shell's economic power in the "tying" commodity.

Also to be noted is the fact that on the same day that the Commission decided Goodyear and Firestone—March 9, 1961—it considered this case, and did not affirm the findings of actual coercion but remanded to the Examiner for the taking of further evidence on "competitive effects":

> "'[T]he record in this case does not contain sufficient market data to enable the Commission to assess the competitive effects of the sales commission method of distributing TBA employed by these respondents."[11] (Emphasis supplied.)

On April 15, 1963, the Commission, reviewing the Hearing Examiner's remand decision, affirmed his conclusions of a statutory violation, even though it excluded from consideration any new evidence adduced on the remand, and cited the Goodyear and Firestone cases, even though the Commission had previously declined to find a violation on this record, when it remanded simultaneously with its formulation and application of legal theories in the companion cases. The one Commissioner who had participated in the earlier decision and was on the Commission on April 15, 1963, dissented from the decision rendered on that date.

[10] Firestone, 58 F.T.C. 371, 408 (1961); Goodyear, supra at 365. E.g., Shell accounted for about 5% of the total gasoline sold at retail in the United States in 1955, 58 F.T.C. at 407; Firestone accounted for 15.3% and Goodyear 21.4% of total replacement tire sales at consumer level in 1954. 58 F.T.C. at 409.

[11] In Goodyear and Firestone the Commission considered such "competitive effects" as division of markets between manufacturers, foreclosure of battery and accessory manufacturers, foreclosure of smaller tire manufacturers, restraint on expansion of smaller tire manufacturers' distribution systems, foreclosure of wholesalers, preemption in favor of wholesalers selling sponsored products, and the impact on wholesalers who also sell at retail.

These considerations indicate, not that the evidence, as a whole, fails to support a finding of a Section 5 violation under a proper interpretation of that section, but that the Commission failed to perform its function of articulating the facts and spelling out its theories. The Commission's decision falls short of the standards required for judicial review, for we are unable to discern with a fair degree of certainty the facts or the theories relied on below.[12] Under the circumstances, we should express no opinion on the merits.

In my view, we should hold simply that a court must know why a Commission acted in order to fulfill the function of judicial review (Secretary of Agriculture v. United States, 347 U.S. 645 (1954)), and that businessmen and other parties subject to administrative regulation are entitled to an explanation of their duties and obligations. Thus, even in the absence of the disqualification issue, we would—in my view—find it necessary to remand for a proper opinion. See Radio Station KFH Co. v. Federal Communications Commission, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 164, 247 F. 2d 570 (1957).

For the reasons given, I would set aside the Commission's order but would pass neither on the merits nor on other issues argued by the parties. The Commission could then be required to produce a new opinion within a reasonable time, such as sixty days, meeting the standard for judicial review.

[12] See e.g., Interstate Commerce Commission v. Mechling, 330 U.S. 567 (1947); Connecticut Light & Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, 324 U.S. 515, 532 (1945).

III

Though, as I have indicated, I do not think we should pass on the merits, the majority has done so. Under the circumstances, I am constrained to say that in my view the majority's conclusion that the record does not contain sufficient evidence to support a finding of a Section 5 violation is very doubtful. The crucial failing, in the court's view, is the lack of evidence to establish that Texaco has sufficient economic power over its dealers to compel them to handle Goodrich tires exclusively. I submit that under the antitrust laws, Texaco's relationship to its dealers must probably be deemed inherently coercive. See, e.g., Simpson v. Union Oil Company of California, —— U.S. —— (April 20, 1964); Standard Oil Company of California v. United States, 337 U.S. 293 (opinion for the Court per Frankfurter, J.), 323 (concurring opinion of Jackson, J.) (1949); Federal Trade Commission v. Motion Picture Advertising Service Co., 344 U.S. at 402 (1953) (Frankfurter, J., in dissent, explaining his opinion in Standard Stations, supra); Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1961); United States v. Sun Oil Co., 176 F. Supp. 715, 719–20 (E.D. Pa. 1959); Schwing Motor Co. v Hudson Sales Corp., 138 F. Supp. 899 (D. Md. 1956); United States v. General Motors Corp., 121 F.2d 376, 398 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 314 U.S. 618 (1941). See, also, the recent opinion of the Seventh Circuit in Goodyear, Tire & Rubber Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, —— F. 2d ——, ——, (April 24, 1964). See, generally, S. Rep. No. 2073, 84th Cong., 2d Sess. (1956); H.R. Rep. No. 2850, 84th Cong. 2d Sess. (1956), relating to the Automobile Dealers' Franchise Act, 70 Stat. 1125, 15 U.S.C. § 1221.

Evidence which might tend to show coercive power in this case includes (a) one year leases and sales agreements, terminable at the year's end upon 10 days' notice; (b) substantial contractual control by Texaco over the use, maintenance and appearance of stations (the obligations imposed by Texaco, in addition to being evidence of Texaco's bargaining power, are means by which Texaco could prematurely terminate the lease through enforcement of one of those obligations, under cancellation provisions); (c) high personal investments by the lessees in their stations; (d) close dealer supervision by Texaco salesmen; (e) Goodrich's manifest understanding that Texaco controls its dealers (e.g., Goodrich's books refer to the dealers as "oil company controlled dealers"); (f) testimony of competing TBA suppliers that Texaco dealers felt they risked reprisal if they did not carry sponsored TBA, and (g) testimony of former Texaco dealers of the existence of a pattern of coercive conduct throughout their tenure. Other evidence in the record that Texaco imposed a course of purchasing behavior on the dealers may be summarized by quoting from page 51 of Respondent's brief:

> ". . . the services performed by Texaco pursuant to its contracts include: Stressing the importance of TBA to prospective dealers and recommending BFG and Firestone; giving advance notice of dealer selection to BFG or Firestone and introducing new dealers to their salesmen; assisting new dealers with adequate TBA inventories; encouraging its salesmen to write sponsored TBA orders without awaiting formal dealer request; calling on dealers with BFG or Firestone salesmen ('double teaming'); conducting frequent dealer meetings and training courses, with active BFG and Firestone participation; arranging for and participating in BFG and Firestone advertising and promotions; and permitting sponsored TBA purchases on its credit cards. Texaco training schools are conducted at company-owned service stations where only BFG or Firestone TBA is used. This can only solidify the dealer's 'choice' of sponsored TBA."

Thus, I suggest that it may well be the record as a whole would support findings of both the existence and the utilization of coercive economic power by Texaco over its dealers. Were we reviewing the Hearing Examiner's findings, and formulating the appropriate legal theory in the first instance, I suggest that we might also properly conclude that there was sufficient evidence of anti-competitive effect to warrant finding a violation under a tie-in theory.[13] But in the first instance it is the Commission, not this court, which must indicate what facts and what legal theories constrained it to find a violation. We could of course select those legal doctrines appearing in the cases cited in the Commission's opinion—Goodyear

[13] On the appropriate test of anti-competitive effect necessary to sustain a finding that a tie-in violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act (which generally puts a more stringent burden on the Government than does Section 5 of the FTC Act), see, e.g., Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1 at 5–6 (1958). The percentage of the gasoline station market for TBA controlled by Texaco, on any reading of the record, certainly affects a "not insubstantial" amount of interstate commerce. See International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U.S. 392 (1947), and Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 330 (1962).

On utilization of a tie-in theory under circumstances similar to those of the instant case, see Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., supra, 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1961). The fact that Texaco's power and practices resulted in something less than exclusive dealer use of sponsored TBA would not seem to require a different result. Id. at 838–39. See, also, the decision of the Seventh Circuit, in an appeal from a parallel decision of the Federal Trade Commission relied on below, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, —— F. 2d —— (April 24, 1964).

and Firestone—and those facts in the record before the Hearing Examiner, which would sustain the Commission's conclusions, and then affirm. But aside from the fact that such an approach would be less than faithful to the appropriate institutional relationship between this court and the Commission, it would not be possible in this case because of Chairman Dixon's disqualifying conduct.

The delays in this case are serious.[14] But I would not terminate the proceedings because of them. The public interest in effective competition should not lightly be subordinated to Texaco's interest in speedy adjudication.

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1964.

No. 296.

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY,

Petitioner,

v.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,

Respondent.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

BRIEF FOR PETITIONER, THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY.

Opinions Below.

The Court below affirmed an order to cease and desist entered by the Federal Trade Commission (hereinafter the "Commission") because of an alleged violation of Section 5(a)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 719 (1914), as amended, 15 U. S. C. §45(a)(1) (1958).

The Initial Decision of the Hearing Examiner (R. 94),* which recommends dismissal of the complaint against The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company (hereinafter "Goodyear"), is reported at 58 F. T. C. 309 (1961). The Commission's order (R. 114) and its opinion reversing the Examiner (R. 118) are reported at 58 F. T. C. 309 beginning at page 323.

* "R." refers to the record herein which consists of the printed Joint Appendix (in five volumes) filed in the Court of Appeals and the opinion, judgment and final decree of the Court of Appeals.

The opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3680) affirming the Commission is reported at 331 F. 2d 394.

Jurisdiction.

The judgment (R. 3697) and the final decree (R. 3698) of the Court of Appeals were entered on April 24, 1964 and May 20, 1964, respectively. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed July 20, 1964 and was granted December 14, 1964. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U. S. C. §1254 (1) (1958).

Questions Presented.

Goodyear has sales commission agreements with The Atlantic Refining Company ("Atlantic"), its co-respondent in the instant proceedings before the Commission, and with some twelve other non-respondent petroleum companies.* Under those agreements Goodyear pays commissions to the oil company in return for the latter's assistance in promoting the sale through its dealers of Goodyear tires, batteries, and accessories ("TBA" or "TBA products").

No conspiracy between Atlantic and Goodyear was alleged or found, and it is undisputed that Atlantic entered into its sales commission agreement with Goodyear only after Atlantic had encountered serious distribution and cost problems in using the only feasible alternative method of TBA distribution. Nevertheless, the Commission found that Atlantic's "power" with respect to its dealers made its sales commission agreement with Goodyear an "unfair method of competition" within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, §5(a)(1).

As to the non-respondent oil companies with which Goodyear has sales commission agreements, there is no significant evidence of record concerning their dealer relationships or the presence or absence of oil company "power" to influence TBA sales. Nevertheless, the Commission entered an order barring Goodyear perpetually from any further participation in any sales commission agreement, not only with Atlantic but with any marketing oil company.

The Court below approved the Commission's action.

In the Commission's petition for a writ of certiorari to review a conflicting decision by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in a pending companion proceeding, Federal Trade Commission v. Texaco, Inc. and B. F. Goodrich Co., No. 635, October Term, 1964 (hereinafter "Petition, Goodrich-Texaco"), the Solicitor General has posed the controlling issue before the Court in the following language:

> (1) "Whether it is an unfair method of competition, in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, for a major rubber company and a major oil company to enter into an agreement under which the oil company, in return for a commission, sponsors the sale of the rubber company's products to the oil company's retail dealers." (p. 2).

The question as stated* in No. 635 articulates—for the first time—just what the Commission has done, what the Court below has approved and what the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has disapproved. Comprehended within this basic question are certain subsidiary questions which were set forth in our petition for certiorari:

> (2) Is a sales commission agreement between Goodyear and Atlantic totally unlawful merely because Atlantic has the ability, without the exercise of coercion or use of tying agreements, to influence the purchase of a substantial volume of TBA products?
>
> (3) Is any sales commission agreement totally unlawful merely where a sponsoring party (in this case any petroleum company) may be able, without the exercise of coercion, or use of tying agreements, to influence the purchase of a substantial volume of the sponsored product (here TBA)?
>
> (4) May the Commission dispense with any attempt at market analysis and establish a conclusive presumption that any oil company which has leases with, or lends equipment to, its franchised dealers has the ability, deemed unlawful, to influence the requisite "substantial" volume of sales of the sponsored product?
>
> (5) May the Commission altogether outlaw a time-tested method of distribution which offers undisputed benefits to the public and to all parties concerned without considering the possibility of more limited alternative remedies?

Statute Involved.

The statute involved in this case is Section 5(a) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 719 (1914), as amended, 15 U. S. C. §45(a) (1958), which in pertinent part provides that:

"(a) (1) Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are declared unlawful.

"(6) The Commission is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations . . . from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce."

Statement.

A. Context of the Litigation.

The instant case is one of three parallel cases, all currently in the courts, brought by the Federal Trade Commission in 1956 to abolish one of the two traditional methods of distributing automobile tires, batteries and accessories through service stations. This method is called "sales commission" distribution.

Goodyear* and Atlantic were joined as respondents in an amended complaint, issued May 22, 1956 (R. 5), which charged that they had entered into agreements which "have the capacity and tendency to restrain unreasonably and have restrained unreasonably" the commerce in TBA products (R. 12). Goodyear is a large manufacturer of rubber products (R. 157). Atlantic is a medium-size producer, refiner and distributor of petroleum products; it markets gasoline and related petroleum products under the "Atlantic" brand through retail outlets and wholesale distributors in 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia (R. 28).

* The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., also named as a respondent, was a wholly-owned marketing subsidiary of Goodyear which was merged with Goodyear in 1956 (R. 1, 5-6). This fact is not significant to this litigation and both Goodyear respondents are collectively referred to as "Goodyear".

The complaint challenged a contract entered into in 1951 between Atlantic and Goodyear, whereby Goodyear agreed to pay Atlantic a commission on Goodyear's TBA sales to dealers in Atlantic's products in exchange for Atlantic's services in promoting Goodyear's TBA.

In addition, the complaint attacked similar sales commission agreements between Goodyear and some twelve other marketing oil companies;* of these companies, most are a good deal smaller than Atlantic, and only two are, or are affiliated with, national concerns. The complaint also alleged that Atlantic had entered into a similar TBA sales commission agreement with The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company ("Firestone").

It was alleged that all the contracts—those between Goodyear and all other oil companies and that between Atlantic and Firestone as well as the one between the parties here—were illegal (R. 12). However, only Atlantic and Goodyear were named as respondents to this proceeding.

Concurrently with the institution of the instant complaint, the Commission initiated two similar proceedings, one against Shell Oil Company ("Shell") and Firestone, and the other against The Texas Company ("Texaco") and The B. F. Goodrich Company ("Goodrich"). Like the instant one, these complaints attacked sales commission agreements between the respective parties and between each party with all other rubber or oil companies.

* The petroleum companies which the record shows as having sales commission arrangements with Goodyear were: Anderson-Prichard Oil Corporation, Ashland Oil & Refining Co. Inc. (and certain subsidiaries of Ashland), Atlantic Refining Company, Carter Oil Company, D-X Sunray Oil Company, Frontier Refining Company, Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation, Richfield Oil Company, Shamrock Oil and Gas Corporation, Shell-American Petroleum Company, Shell Oil Company, Sinclair Refining Company and Sherwood Brothers Inc. (R. 119, 2493, 242, 2573-76, 243).

All three complaints were tried as separate proceedings before the same Hearing Examiner (Earl J. Kolb, later appointed Chief Examiner) who held hearings over a two-year period from October 1956 to February 1959. In October, 1959 the Hearing Examiner rendered initial decisions finding in all three cases that the oil companies had exercised specific acts of coercion against their dealers, but that this was not caused by the rubber companies or the sales commission agreements. Accordingly, he entered injunctions against the oil companies' exercise of coercion, but dismissed the complaints against the rubber companies.

The Commission reversed all three decisions. Upon the original record in each case,* it found that the sales commission agreements violated Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. In each case the Commission issued an order barring the rubber company from entering into any sales commission plan with any oil company at all, thereby prohibiting not only existing agreements but any that might be contemplated in the future with any marketing oil company of whatever size. It also barred the three oil companies from participating in any sales commission plan for tires, batteries, or accessories with any company whatever.

All the cases were appealed. Goodyear and Atlantic filed petitions to review and set aside the Commission's order with the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. The petitions to review were denied by that Court and the Commission's order in all respects affirmed (R. 3680). That decision is now under review in this case and in No. 292, The Atlantic Refining Company v. Federal Trade Commission, cert. granted, December 14, 1964.

Goodrich and Texaco appealed to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. That Court on July 30, 1964 set aside the order and remanded the case to the Commission with instructions to dismiss the complaint.*

Firestone and Shell petitioned to the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Argument was heard on January 16, 1964, and decision is still pending.

B. The Commercial Context.

The sales commission method of distribution has been widely used, for more than two decades, to facilitate the marketing of TBA through automobile service stations. Motorists prefer "one-stop" service stations capable of supplying, not only gasoline and oil, but also the full range of products required for the operation of the modern automobile (R. 1505, 1846, 2267-68). As a result, the nation's neighborhood "gas stations" have become, in response to motorists' demands, one of the major sources of supply for replacement TBA products (R. 122).

To meet this consumer demand under contemporary conditions is a complex task. The service station must have access to a wide variety of tires—for example, Goodyear manufactures and markets approximately 130 different popular-sized tire models (R. 2221). In addition, the service station must carry various sizes and types of batteries and a host of accessories such as spark plugs, radiator chemicals, lamps and bulbs, windshield wipers and blades, polishes, waxes, etc. (R. 99-100, 517-19).

* As already noted, a petition for a writ of certiorari to review the Goodrich-Texaco decision has been filed in this Court on the Commission's behalf (No. 635, October Term, 1964) and is sub judice.

The efficient provision at point of sale of such a range of products requires knowledge, skill and organization. The service station operator must be trained in several areas: the products available, installation and repair of such products, sound inventory practices and modern sales techniques (R. 1507, 2221-24, 2268). Behind the station operation must stand a well-developed warehousing and distribution system.

The Hearing Examiner made clear—and the Commission did not deny—that an oil company TBA program benefits motorists and dealers, as well as oil companies and rubber companies:

> "Tires, batteries and accessories have become a necessary and integral part of the business operation of the Atlantic dealer. He cannot profitably and successfully operate his business without the added revenue from that portion of his business which also enables the dealer to give complete service to his customers. The service station is important to TBA manufacturers as an outlet for distributing to customers. It is to the interest of The Atlantic Refining Company to have its dealers engaged in the sale of TBA as this builds a stronger dealer organization and increases the sale of gasoline". (R. 99-100).

The Court below agreed:

> "TBA is an integral part of service station operations. Dealers must carry it in order to give complete service to motorists and to operate their stations at a profit. There are a large number of TBA items available to dealers, and there are constant changes and production developments in TBA of which the dealers must be trained and kept informed. Every major oil company offers some kind of TBA program to give training and advice to its service station dealers". (R. 3685).

Over the years, two methods have developed in the petroleum industry for meeting these marketing needs. One of these is the so-called "purchase-resale" method, which the Commission's opinion approves (R. 183-85). Under this method, the petroleum company purchases TBA products and resells them, along with gasoline and oil, to its service station dealers.

"Purchase-resale" has a particular vogue today among the larger petroleum companies, such as Standard of New Jersey, Standard of California, Standard of Indiana, Socony-Mobil, and Phillips Petroleum. (The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, 58 F. T. C. 371, 388 (1961)). They have the resources to provide, and a sufficient number of service station outlets to warrant, the necessary investment in warehousing and distribution facilities for TBA. Atlantic made use of the purchase-resale method in earlier days, but gave it up in 1951 when it found that its sales of TBA were insufficient to warrant the costs of training, warehousing and overhead (R. 100-101, 2357-62, 2859-64, 239).

The second principal method of TBA distribution through service stations is the "sales commission" method involved in this case. It evolved a generation ago as an alternative to purchase-resale. Goodyear, which manufactures tires, tubes and certain accessories in its own factories and distributes batteries and accessories acquired from outside sources, entered such a sales commission plan with Atlantic in 1951.

In return for Atlantic's sales assistance Goodyear agreed to pay to Atlantic a 10% commission on sales of Goodyear TBA to Atlantic retailers in seven northeastern states and the Philadelphia area of Pennsylvania and to pay a 7½% commission on TBA sales to Atlantic wholesale distributors in the same area. The Commission's opinion does not challenge either the rates of these commissions or the fact that Atlantic made expenditures approximately equal to them. Moreover, there is no claim that Atlantic wholesalers and retailers who bought Goodyear TBA under this plan did so on different terms from other wholesale and retail customers of Goodyear or that they were required to absorb the commissions paid by Goodyear to Atlantic.

The services which Atlantic supplied to Goodyear in return for its commissions are described in the Hearing Examiner's Initial Decision and are not disputed by the Commission. Atlantic operated training schools for dealers and prospective dealers which included promotional and merchandising aspects of TBA sales; conducted tire clinics jointly with Goodyear personnel to familiarize Atlantic dealers in the care and repair of Goodyear tires; advised prospective new dealers of the importance of TBA and recommended Goodyear TBA products; assisted dealers in arranging for Goodyear TBA inventory; conducted dealer meetings which discussed TBA sales; arranged for advertising and promotion of Goodyear TBA products; suggested methods of TBA merchandising in its dealer magazines; and made Goodyear TBA products available to credit card holders (R. 101-102).

The sales commission plan is not an independent source of revenue to Atlantic, but rather aids Atlantic in its primary business of selling gasoline and other petroleum products. Atlantic's commission receipts under its two agreements with Goodyear and Firestone have averaged about ¼ of 1% of its petroleum revenues, and the costs to Atlantic of its participation in the TBA program are approximately equal to its receipts from it (R. 2364).

C. Operation of Goodyear's Sales Commission Plan with Atlantic.

The evidence in this case concerning sales commission plans is devoted almost entirely to the particular sales commission agreement between Goodyear and Atlantic.

Goodyear makes tires and tubes for automotive vehicles in factories in five states. It sells these at wholesale and retail through some 12,000 independent franchised dealers, and 500 company-owned stores (R. 157-58).

Many of these dealers serve as supply points to oil company dealers under Goodyear's sales commission arrangements. For the Atlantic outlets, there were at the time of the hearing 162 supply points, of whom 128 were independent businesses (including Atlantic service stations) operating under franchise and selling to everyone they pleased, the other 34 being company-owned Goodyear stores (R. 525, 3407, 1449). To operate satisfactorily, supply points must carry a balanced and full stock of TBA products and maintain adequate equipment, business and staff facilities; they often employ delivery trucks and salesmen (R. 524-25).

There is no evidence and no finding that any competent Goodyear dealer not designated as a supply point wanted to become one, or that any such dealer was denied the opportunity to become one.

The record, which describes the situation obtaining in 1955-56, shows that Atlantic distributes its gasoline and other automotive petroleum products to some 5,500 retail dealers, of whom some 2,400 are in the area covered by the Atlantic-Goodyear sales commission agreement (R. 140, 132). In that area, in addition, Atlantic sells its petroleum products to some 47 wholesale distributors who service about 390 retail outlets (R. 146, 132). Most of these gasoline retailers operate service stations which are likely to offer TBA (as contrasted to the country store or roadside restaurant which may have a gas pump, without more, in the yard).

Atlantic sells directly to two types of retailers: contract dealers who own their own stations or lease them from others, and "lessee-dealers" who lease their stations from Atlantic. The contract dealers are often lent station equipment by Atlantic and their contracts usually require them to purchase a minimum amount of gasoline in the course of a year (R. 144). The lessee dealers generally hold one-year leases, although in some instances the lease term may be longer or shorter (R. 99, 140).

At the time Atlantic entered into the sales commission agreements in 1951 and at times thereafter, it advised its dealers that the plan did not obligate them to buy Goodyear TBA (R. 103-104, 2892-93, 220). Atlantic stressed that "under no circumstances are our dealers to be made to feel that they must buy this new program" (R. 2891, 220).*

During the hearings the Commission introduced the testimony of 16 former Atlantic dealers—8 from areas not covered by Goodyear, and the remaining from the Philadelphia area. Some of these testified that despite Atlantic's instructions, they had been pressured by Atlantic's salesmen to buy sponsored brands of TBA (R. 104-08).

In rebuttal, Atlantic introduced the testimony of 38 dealers and ex-dealers who testified that they had regularly sold other brands of TBA without objection (R. 108-09). The Examiner found on all the testimony that no dealers carried the sponsored brands of TBA exclusively; all dealers carried some non-sponsored TBA in varying amounts "to satisfy demands of their customers" (R. 109).

In addition, it was shown that there is aggressive competition between the petroleum companies for the services of qualified dealers, who are often local businessmen with an entrenched customer following (R. 1493-97, 2353). It would thus be in the interest of Atlantic not to jeopardize its dealer relationships in the petroleum business by demands with respect to TBA—on which Atlantic makes no profit.*

* It instructed dealers to report directly to Atlantic any instance in which "any of our people at any time insist on your buying any certain products or merchandise against what you feel is to your best interest" (R. 3038, 406).

The Examiner concluded that the contracts between Atlantic and its dealers did not require the purchase of Goodyear TBA, and that "No inference or implication can be drawn from the contractual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers, that the degree of control by Atlantic over its dealers is sufficient to force its dealers to purchase only sponsored TBA" (R. 111). However, he concluded that certain of Atlantic's representatives had pressured some dealers into buying sponsored lines of TBA and to discontinue the purchase or display of other brands (R. 110). Accordingly, he entered a detailed order designed to prohibit coercion by Atlantic of its dealers (R. 112-13).

At the same time, he found that Goodyear was not responsible for any coercion of Atlantic's dealers or guilty of any other coercive practices. He found that:

> "There is no evidence that The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, or The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., engaged in, or participated in, any of acts or practices designed to force dealers and distributors of The Atlantic Refining Company to purchase Goodyear TBA products". (R. 110).

This conclusion was based upon a record concerned almost exclusively with the nature and operation of Goodyear's sales commission agreement with Atlantic. The

---

* The mere replacement of a lost dealer is a matter of considerable expense (R. 1496-97).

 The findings of coercion by the Hearing Examiner, as approved by the Commission, are not now contested by Atlantic before this Court.

Initial Decision of the Hearing Examiner does not even mention Goodyear's sales commission agreements with other oil companies and made no finding as to their nature or operation. While the Commission made a bare passing reference to these agreements, its opinion contains no findings addressed to actual operations under any of them.* There is no finding by the Commission that each of these companies pressured its dealers to buy sponsored TBA. The Court below, except for reciting the complaint, makes no reference whatever to these other contracts and other oil companies. Indeed, its opinion states that "the heart of this case is the economic power Atlantic possesses over its service station dealers" (Emphasis added) (R. 3690).

D. Rulings Below.

The Hearing Examiner found that Goodyear had been guilty of no unfair practice. He found:

> —there was neither charge of nor proof of a conspiracy between Goodyear and Atlantic or anyone else to restrict competition in the sale of TBA (R. 110);
>
> —"The consideration for the payment of commission to Atlantic under the sales commission contract is based upon substantial services rendered by Atlantic in promoting the sale of Goodyear TBA to Atlantic dealers and distributors" (R. 111);

and that > —the terms of the contracts and leases between Atlantic and its dealers were not unreasonable and did not themselves confer upon Atlantic control sufficient to require its dealers to carry only sponsored TBA (R. 111).

---

* The Commission remarked that the other contracts "are in all material respects identical with the Goodyear-Atlantic contract," and drew a bland inference from the isolated testimony of dealers from two other oil companies—Sinclair-Sherwood and Shell—that they had been subjected to pressure (R. 162).

Accordingly, he dismissed the complaint against Goodyear and prohibited Atlantic from coercion of its dealers (R. 112-13).

The Commission brushed coercion aside. In reversing, it relied upon a view that Atlantic and, inferentially, other oil companies had a "power" over their dealers which rendered a sales commission plan improper whether or not acts of coercion were proved (R. 119, 179-86).

The Commission cited Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1 (R. 179), but evidenced its unwillingness to rely thereon:

> "But we do not rest our decision on a mechanical application of the rule of the Northern Pacific and Osborn cases. The issue here is the legality of respondents' use of a particular method of distributing TBA products. Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic. Determination of illegality in this context requires an evaluation of competitive effects resulting from the sales commission method of distributing TBA used by these respondents" (R. 181).

After purportedly evaluating these "competitive effects" the Commission concluded that the sales commission plan foreclosed TBA sales by others to Atlantic dealers (R. 181-83), and that the use by Goodyear of "supply points" to handle sales to its service station customers restricted competition among Goodyear's retail and wholesale dealers (R. 182).

Upon this basis the Commission entered an order sweepingly condemning any use of the sales commission plan. It forbade Goodyear, inter alia, from:

> "2. Paying, granting or allowing, or offering to pay, grant or allow, anything of value to . . . . any . . . marketing oil company for acting as sales agent or for otherwise sponsoring, recommending, urging, inducing or promoting the sale of TBA products, directly or indirectly, by Goodyear or any distributor of Goodyear products to any wholesaler or retailer of petroleum products of such marketing oil company" (R. 116-17).

On appeal, the Seventh Circuit affirmed the order in all respects, its opinion finding that there was substantial evidence to warrant the Commission's conclusions (R. 3683). The Court also invoked a "tying" theory to support the Commission's order, despite the Commission's statement that it did not rely thereon (R. 3690, 3693-95).

In answer to Goodyear's contention that there was no basis for outright abolition of sales commission plans with all oil companies, the Court said simply that "we think the Supreme Court answered petitioners' contentions in F. T. C. v. Ruberoid Co., 343 U. S. 470, 473," which states that the Commission's remedial power is not limited to the prohibition of illegality "in the precise form in which it is found to have existed in the past" (R. 3696).

Summary of Argument.

I.

The Commission's order, approved by the Court below, violates controlling law in its attempt to abolish totally Goodyear's sales commission plan with Atlantic.

It is uncontradicted that a TBA program results in benefits to American motorists, service station dealers, oil companies and rubber companies. Yet, the Commission has completely prohibited Atlantic and Goodyear from a sales commission plan notwithstanding the fact that Atlantic attempted the only alternative method of TBA distribution (a purchase-resale plan) and found it economically unfeasible.

In ignoring the benefits derived by everyone concerned from a TBA program, the Commission also ignored the strictures of this Court that the advantages and the economic setting of a particular business method must be carefully considered before that method can be condemned under the antitrust laws. These precedents of the Court apply with equal force to a proceeding under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act when a long-standing and widespread method of product distribution is sought to be condemned as a per se unfair method of competition.

Instead, the Commission relies on a theoretical construct —a postulate that Atlantic has "power" over its dealers (derived solely from its contracts and leases with them) which renders any sales commission plan whatever totally illegal. The Commission did not explore the exercise of that claimed "power" and did not rely upon a finding that Atlantic had pressured its dealers; its result, rather, is based on the conclusive presumption, without supporting findings, that an oil company's "power" will always result in a "foreclosure" of TBA sales to its dealers under a sales commission plan.

This presumption of the Commission is directly contradicted by the Goodrich-Texaco decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, which ruled that there was no showing that Texaco had such "power" over its dealers, notwithstanding contracts and leases similar to Atlantic's.

Moreover, in adverting to the "effects" of the presumed "foreclosure" the Commission failed to define the line or lines of commerce, the area of effective competition and the substantiality of the competition alleged to have been foreclosed. In so doing, the Commission wholly disregarded the careful economic analysis which the decisions of this Court require.

In any case, there is no tenable basis for the Commission's decision. Given the Commission's notion of oil company "power" and its presumed effects, there is no justification for banning sales commission plans while permitting purchase-resale distribution, which is most easily employed by the larger oil companies. Furthermore, the idea that "power" is a justifiable basis for abolition of a sales commission plan is contradicted by the specific provisions of the Automobile Dealers' Day In Court Act and by the fact that the Congress has refused to enact bills which would limit or outlaw sales commission plans in the oil industry.

Finally, an analogy to "tying" cases cannot justify the Commission's action. In the first place, the Commission did not rely on a "tying" theory, and the Court below could not properly rest its decision on that ground. In any case even assuming that Atlantic had deliberately tied Goodyear TBA to Atlantic's sale of its own products to its dealers (an assumption unsupported by findings of the Commission or by the record), there is no basis in precedent for abolition of the sales commission plan itself. The remedy in "tying" cases has uniformly been to enjoin the "tie", not to bar a firm from continuing to sell or lease the two product lines which had been "tied". In contrast, the order here is not content to enjoin Atlantic from any pressure upon its dealers (an aspect of the order which Atlantic has not appealed to this Court), but goes on to prohibit both Atlantic and Goodyear from continuing to sell Goodyear TBA to Atlantic's dealers on a sales commission basis without any tying whatsoever. The "tying" case precedents thus provide no escape from the inexorable conclusion that there is no basis in precedent, fact or equity for the Commission's destruction of the sale commission plan between Atlantic and Goodyear.

II.

The Commission's order, approved by the Court below, seeks to prohibit Goodyear permanently from engaging in any sales commission arrangement with any oil marketing company—of which there were 156 listed in the year 1964 in an authoritative trade publication. The Commission's order exhibits this vehemence notwithstanding the fact that there is virtually nothing whatsoever in the record as to the "power" of oil marketing companies with respect to their dealers. In addition, there are no findings either as to the actual operations of Goodyear's sales commission plans with oil companies other than Atlantic or as to the actual relationship of any such company with its dealers.

For example, as to one oil company which had a sales commission arrangement with Goodyear at the date of the record, Shell, there is hardly any pertinent evidence in the record here. Despite the fact that Shell brought before the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit a review of the Commission's order barring Shell, inter alia, from continuation of its sales commission plan with Goodyear—on a record which at least purports to examine Shell's relationship with its dealers—the Commission's order in this case operates so as to prohibit Goodyear from continuing the plan with Shell. This is the case notwithstanding the fact that Shell is voiceless here on a determination which is vital to it and which does not even claim to be based upon a factual analysis of Shell's relations with its dealers.

As to marketing oil companies other than Atlantic with whom Goodyear had sales commission arrangements as of December, 1964—20 in number (of whom 14 are relatively small marketing oil companies)—there are also no findings to justify the Commission's result even on its own theory of oil company "power". The clearest example of this is Goodyear's plan with Texaco. The order bars Goodyear from a sales commission plan with Texaco because of the Commission's presumption of uniform oil company "power"—while at the same time Texaco, itself, under the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, is completely free to enter into such an agreement with Goodyear or any other rubber company because that Court decided that there was insufficient evidence in the record before it to justify any conclusion that Texaco had any such "power" over its dealers.

As to the 156 oil marketing companies with whom Goodyear is barred from sales commission arrangements, there is a complete evidentiary vacuum—a dramatic example of failure of proof. The Commission simply did not know enough about oil marketing companies to have issued the instant order. Indeed, the Commission has itself very recently acknowledged that it does not yet know enough about oil company marketing. On December 28, 1964 the Commission dismissed four cases then before it on the specific grounds that it had insufficient knowledge of the "highly complex" facts involved in the competitive marketing of gasoline; that this "dynamic industry" undergoes rapid change and has altered significantly since the mid-1950's; and that the Commission should not enter orders "against a few oil companies" when such orders could not provide "complete or effective solution to the competitive problems of the gasoline industry." The Commission therefore dismissed the cases in order to concentrate upon "a comprehensive industry-wide approach to the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline".

It is submitted that the Commission's reasoning is precisely applicable to this case—and that this proceeding should be dismissed because the Commission has made huge presumptions, on a stale and sparse record, about an entire industry as to which it has explicitly recognized a lack of sufficient knowledge.

III.

Apart from the substantive argument in the preceding two Points that the Commission has improperly sought to abolish a legal and proper economic practice, it is clear that the Commission fixed upon a remedy without performing its required functions.

Contrary to the decisions of this Court that an administrative agency must consider various alternative remedies, the Commission's opinion provides no stated basis why the order here could not be framed in less sweeping terms. On the Commission's own view of this case there were many remedial measures open to it falling far short of the broad-scale banishment which it fixed upon. Nowhere does the Commission explain why any of these measures would not provide solutions to the problems which it found to exist in sales commission arrangements. Open reasoning by the Commission as to appropriate remedies is particularly called for here because at least four previous judicial determinations have left intact the right of an oil company to "sponsor" TBA products to its dealers.

The Commission's function is to tailor remedies to the faults which it finds. One of the chief purposes of the Congress in creating an administrative agency is to provide a body with expertise in the vitally important area of remedial action. It is submitted that the Commission has here failed utterly to exercise such expertise and has displayed instead an unskilled and insensitive approach to an important and beneficial method of distributing products. In so doing, the Commission did not perform the very functions which the Congress created it to exercise.

ARGUMENT.

I.

THE COMMISSION'S TOTAL ABOLITION OF GOODYEAR'S SALES COMMISSION PLAN WITH ATLANTIC VIOLATES CONTROLLING LAW.

A. The Commission Was Required to Weigh the Benefits and Consider the Economic Setting of the Sales Commission Plan.

There is now before this Court a new and raw formulation of an "unfair method of competition" under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

As put by the Solicitor General on behalf of the Commission, the question presented is the validity of the Commission's view that it is an unfair method of competition "for a major rubber company and a major oil company to enter into an agreement under which the oil company, in return for a commission, sponsors the sale of the rubber company's products to the oil company's retail dealers."*

* As already noted, the formulation should be even broader than the Solicitor General has phrased it, since the Commission has condemned as illegal (a) any such agreement by Goodyear with any Petition, Goodrich-Texaco, p. 2. The primitive simplicity of the question's phrasing is apt, for the Commission permits no qualifications to its freshly-devised formula. Instead, it condemns the sales commission plan without considering the plan's manifest benefits to the American motorist, service station operators, oil companies and rubber companies.

As noted in the Statement, the existence of these benefits is uncontradicted. The Hearing Examiner found—and the Commission did not deny—that an Atlantic dealer "cannot profitably and successfully operate his business" without the sale of TBA "which also enables the dealer to give complete service to his customers"; that service stations are an important outlet to TBA manufacturers; and that the sale of TBA by Atlantic's dealers builds a stronger dealer organization and increases the sale of gasoline (R. 99-100).*

These benefits are especially significant when the plan is used to assist the dealers of smaller oil companies, and all marketing oil companies, small or "major", and (b) any such agreement by Atlantic with any rubber company, small or "major". Specifically, four of the oil companies with which the record shows Goodyear had sales commission arrangements—Anderson-Prichard Oil Company, Frontier Refining Company, Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation and Shamrock Oil & Gas Corporation—are undeniably "small" marketers of petroleum products. Furthermore, Goodyear's position among rubber companies is nowhere treated by the Commission as material to the lawfulness of sales commission plans in the oil industry—except for the Commission's unsupported (and in fact mistaken) assertion that "smaller tire companies are unable to compete with larger tire manufacturers for the business of oil companies using the sales commission plan" (R. 185).

* The Seventh Circuit freely found that sales of TBA were an "integral part of service station operations", aided stations in giving "complete service to motorists" and required that station operators be trained and kept informed of changes and production developments in TBA products. (R. 3685).

as was demonstrated here by Atlantic's decision to abandon purchase-resale (the alternative method of providing these benefits) when purchase-resale proved to be uneconomic and inefficient (R. 100-01, 2357-62, 2859-64, 239). Indeed, the basic facts of economic life—ignored by the Commission—are that small and medium-size oil companies are engaged in fierce competition with larger competitors and that the sales commission system is particularly well adapted to the needs of those smaller companies (and consequently their dealers) who may not be economically able to sustain the start-up costs and the continuing training, warehousing and distribution expenses of a purchase-resale system.

In spite of these considerations, the Commission chose to ignore the prior holdings of this Court that the advantages of and justifications for any business method under attack as possibly restraining trade must be carefully weighed and considered before that method can be condemned.* Indeed, the requirement that there be review and analysis of relevant economic data has been formulated by this Court in cases where the arrangements under appraisal, unlike the sales commission plan, were openly and obviously restrictive. For example, in White Motor

---

* It is submitted that in this respect the Sherman and Clayton Act holdings of this Court govern a Federal Trade Commission Act proceeding in which the Commission purports to find a "fundamental restraint of trade inherent in the sales commission system itself" (R. 157). The Commission's opinion does not argue that the Commission may totally ignore the requirement of these precedents. In any case, such an argument should fail—especially if, as here, it would endeavor to excuse the Commission's failure to consider the economic benefits and economic setting of a widespread method of product distribution which has been in effect for more than two decades (R. 1450). See Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 253 U. S. 421, 427-28; Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643, 647; Report of the Attorney General's National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws, pp. 148-49 (1955); Oppenheim, Guides to Harmonizing Section 5 of The Federal Trade Commission Act with the Sherman and Clayton Acts, 59 MICH. L. REV. 821, 826, 836 (1961).

Co. v. United States, 372 U. S. 253 (1963), this Court said of the vertical territorial limitations imposed upon its distributors and dealers by White that such limitations "may or may not have that purpose or effect [viz., the stifling of competition]."

> "* * * We do not know enough of the economic and business stuff out of which these arrangements emerge to be certain. They may be too dangerous to sanction or they may be allowable protections against aggressive competitors or the only practicable means a small company has for breaking into or staying in business (cf. Brown Shoe, supra, at 330; United States v. Jerrold Electronics Corp., 187 F. Supp. 545, 560-561, aff'd, 365 U. S. 567) and within the 'rule of reason.' We need to know more than we do about the actual impact of these arrangements on competition to decide whether they have such a 'pernicious effect on competition and lack . . . any redeeming virtue' (Northern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, supra, p. 5) and therefore should be classified as per se violations of the Sherman Act." (Emphasis added) (372 U. S. at 263).

The Court sent the case back for full development of the facts by the trial court because the "rule of reason" read into the Sherman Act by Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, "normally requires an ascertainment of the facts peculiar to the particular business" (372 U. S. at 261).*

* The requirement that a purported restraint be assessed against the background of "the facts peculiar to the business to which the restraint is applied" is of course applicable to cases across the entire antitrust spectrum. See, e.g., Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238 (Section 2 of the Sherman Act); United States v. American Tobacco Co., 221 U. S. 106, 180-83 (Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act); Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U. S. 320 (Section 3 of the Clayton Act); Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U. S. 294, 321-22, 324, 328-31 (Section 7 of the

Here the Commission has failed to consider the "economic and business stuff" out of which the sales commission plan has emerged. Indeed, the Commission's approach seems almost calculated to avoid coming to grips with the complex facts as to the intensely competitive market, or markets, in which TBA products are sold.*

Clayton Act); United States v. Continental Can Co., 378 U. S. 441, 449 (Section 7 of the Clayton Act) ("Concededly these guidelines [to the definition of product market] offer no precise formula for judgment and they necessitate, rather than avoid, careful consideration based upon the entire record").

* In sharp contrast (and as more fully discussed in Point II hereof), the Commission has recently announced a "broad inquiry" into the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline, the very industry under consideration here. The Commission specifically rejected any simplistic approach:

> "It is evident both from these submissions and from the Commission's experience in this industry in enforcing the laws which it administers that a broad, comprehensive, and industry-wide approach to the competitive problems of the industry is necessary, and that specific remedial measures required in the public interest should not be attempted before obtaining a solid factual foundation in regard to the competitive conditions of gasoline distribution. As the Supreme Court stated in a recent decision, proper and effective remedial action in this industry requires that the Commission make realistic appraisals of relevant competitive facts, and these facts are highly complex. The Commission has accordingly determined forthwith to institute an industry-wide inquiry into the competitive problems of marketing gasoline. The Commission intends to employ its flexible administrative powers of investigation and fact-finding as may be found necessary to assure a complete, fair, and realistic understanding of the structure and dynamics of competition in the industry." (Emphasis added) Statement of the Federal Trade Commission Announcing Broad Inquiry into the Problems of Competition in the Marketing of Gasoline (December 30, 1964). (See Annex A hereto, p. 8).

B. The Commission's Postulate of Oil Company "Power" Was Used As a Substitute For Its Required Functions.

1. The Commission and the Court Below Relied Solely on the Postulate of "Power".

In condemning Goodyear's sales commission arrangement with Atlantic, both the Commission and the Court below relied exclusively on the conception that Atlantic had a special kind of "power" with respect to its dealers.

In so doing, both the Commission and the Court rejected the reasoned approach of the Hearing Examiner, who limited his entire remedy to an order barring Atlantic from any coercion of its dealers—after concluding there was evidence of some specific coercive acts by Atlantic representatives despite written Atlantic policy to the contrary (R. 103-08, 111-13, 120).* The Commission made little of coercion: coercive acts were "mere symptoms" of a fundamental "restraint of trade" growing out of Atlantic's economic power over its dealers (R. 156-57, 121, 181).

Thus, the Commission's entire approach to the sales Commission plan is based entirely on its notion of Atlantic's "economic power" over its dealers. Although the Commission explicitly states that the issue presented by the case is "the legality of * * * use [by Goodyear and Atlantic] of a particular method of distributing TBA products" (R. 181) (emphasis in original), the Commission's central finding is:

* As noted in the Statement, the evidence as to coercion of dealers by Atlantic is sparse. However, the sufficiency of the record to support an order against coercing its dealers has not been raised in this Court by Atlantic, and the issue of coercion, which never had relevance to Goodyear or to the lawfulness of the sales commission plan, is now out of the case as it stands before this Court.

"Atlantic has sufficient economic power with respect to its wholesale and retail petroleum distributors to cause them to purchase substantial quantities of sponsored TBA even without the use of overt coercive tactics or of written or oral tying agreements, and this power is a fact existing independently of the particular method of distributing or sponsoring TBA used by Atlantic". (R. 181).

The Seventh Circuit took the same view.

"The heart of this case is the economic power Atlantic possesses over its service station dealers. * * * The keystone of the actual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers is the lease and the equipment loan contract with their short term and cancellation provisions. * * *

* * * * * * *

"* * * The totality of facts surrounding the relationship between the oil company and the dealers points to one conclusion: the oil company is able to exert sufficient economic power over its dealers so that for all practical purposes they are required to carry sponsored TBA." (R. 3690, 3692-93).

The Commission's entire case rests therefore upon the premise—accepted by the Seventh Circuit—that short-term lease and equipment loan agreements outstanding between Atlantic and its dealers are such that the existence of an unlawful power in Atlantic to control its dealers' TBA purchases by mere sponsorship of a brand or brands of TBA is to be conclusively presumed.

2. The Goodrich-Texaco Decision.

It is at this point that the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in Texaco, Inc. and The B. F. Goodrich Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 336 F. 2d 754 (D. C. Cir. 1964), comes into conflict with the decision here. In the face of a record which indicated that Texaco has essentially the same kind of short-term lease and equipment loan agreements with its dealers* as those of Atlantic which were viewed as of paramount importance here, the District of Columbia Circuit nonetheless found "no basis in the record for the Commission's conclusion that Texaco has controlling economic power over its dealers" (336 F. 2d at 762). Indeed, that court specifically held that Texaco's contracts with its dealers "do not give rise to" such controlling economic power (Ibid).

The Soliciter General sees in the conflict between the opinions of the two courts "a fundamentally different conception of the nature of economic power in the oil industry" and concludes that "the different results in the two cases do not reflect merely the courts' respective evaluations of the different records" (Petition, Goodrich-Texaco, p. 14).

We agree that the two cases do not differ sufficiently in their facts to account for their flatly opposite results.

---

* There is no discussion by the Commission of how long a lease must be to be classed as something other than "short-term". Atlantic has leases running as long as three years (R. 99), whereas Texaco's leases are all apparently of one-year duration (336 F. 2d at 767).

 As Judge Washington points out in his dissent in Goodrich-Texaco, the record there contains such evidence of Texaco's "power" over its dealers as:

> "(a) one year leases and sales agreements, terminable at the year's end upon 10 days' notice; (b) substantial contractual control by Texaco over the use, maintenance and appearance of stations (the obligations imposed by Texaco, in addition to being evidence of Texaco's bargaining power, are means by which Texaco could prematurely terminate the lease through enforcement of one of those obligations, under cancellation provisions); (c) high personal investments by the lessees in their stations; (d) close dealer supervision by Texaco salesmen; (e) Goodrich's manifest understanding that Texaco controls its dealers (e.g., Goodrich's books refer to the dealers as 'oil company controlled dealers'); (f) testi-

We also note that there was no evidentiary basis upon which the two courts could demonstrate "different conceptions of the nature of economic power in the oil industry". Whether all marketing oil companies have power to control the TBA purchases of their respective dealers has never been factually considered by the Commission—as is discussed in Point II below.

The District of Columbia Circuit does not deny that Texaco may be able to influence its dealers to purchase TBA sponsored by Texaco. The decision, rather, rules in effect that the relationship between Texaco and its dealers has not been shown to be such that the mere sponsorship by Texaco of a given brand or brands of TBA warrants the Commission to indulge in a conclusive presumption that oil company "power" is synonymous with substantial and illegal market "foreclosure".

3. The Commission's Presumption of "Foreclosure".

In so ruling, the District of Columbia Circuit contradicts the Commission's holding here. The Commission has conclusively presumed that all or substantially all of the TBA purchases made by Atlantic's dealers are of Goodyear TBA, that all of such purchases of Goodyear TBA mony of competing TBA suppliers that Texaco dealers felt they risked reprisal if they did not carry sponsored TBA, and (g) testimony of former Texaco dealers of the existence of a pattern of coercive conduct throughout their tenure." 336 F. 2d at 767.

In Goodrich-Texaco, the Commission also adopted the Hearing Examiner's conclusion that Texaco's "representatives have, in fact, attempted to and did coerce and force Texaco dealers to purchase substantial quantities of Goodrich and Firestone TBA." (Joint App. Goodrich-Texaco (No. 635), 226, 303). Just as in this case, however, the Commission's reason for holding Goodrich sales commission plans illegal does not depend upon a finding of coercion by Texaco. (Joint App. Goodrich-Texaco (No. 635), 302-03).

are the result of Atlantic's "power" and that competitors of Goodyear and its dealers are thus "foreclosed" from selling to Atlantic's dealers.

There is no factual finding which shows this presumption to be correct.*

Even assuming that the Commission were correct and that some "foreclosure" of others from the competition for Atlantic business were a result of the sales commission plan, the Commission was still required to determine and analyze the effects of any such foreclosure on the relevant market. Competition must be foreclosed in a substantial share of the line of commerce affected if a violation is to be found, as this Court made clear in Tampa Electric Co. v. Nashville Coal Co., 365 U. S. 320, 327-28:

> "First, the line of commerce, i.e., the type of goods, wares, or merchandise, etc. involved, must be determined, where it is in controversy, on the basis of the facts peculiar to the case. Second, the area of effective competition in the known line of commerce must be charted by careful selection of the market area in which the seller operates, and to which the purchaser can practicably turn for supplies. In short, the threatened foreclosure of competition must be in relation to the market affected.
>
> "Third, and last, the competition foreclosed by the contract must be found to constitute a substantial share of the relevant market. That is to say, the opportunities for other traders to enter into or remain in that market must be significantly limited * * *."

---

* Moreover, there is nothing in the sales commission agreement which gives Goodyear the right to deal exclusively with Atlantic or its dealers. If any Atlantic dealer chose to deal primarily in Goodyear TBA, the decision to do so was made independently of any requirements by Goodyear or the sales commission agreement.

Since the Commission described in terms of "foreclosure" the deleterious "effects" it relied upon (R. 182-86), the standards set out in Tampa Electric are clearly applicable. None of these was met: there has been no determination of the line or lines of commerce involved, no definition of the area of effective competition and no measurement of what share of that competition, if any, was foreclosed.

a. Line or lines of commerce. Since this is a TBA case, presumably the line or lines of commerce in which any effects are to be measured involve the sale and distribution of TBA. However, the Commission made no determination whether all sales of TBA to motorists constitute a line of commerce,* whether the sale of tires to motorists constitutes a distinct line of commerce but the sale of batteries and accessories to motorists can be broken down into numerous separate and distinct lines of commerce, or which of the almost innumerable other possible combinations and permutations properly can describe the line or lines of commerce in this case.

As this Court has stated of a claimed violation of the Clayton Act, "determination of the relevant market is a necessary predicate to a finding of a violation . . . because the threatened monopoly must be one which will substantially lessen competition 'within the area of the effective competition.' Substantiality can be determined only in terms of the market affected." United States v. E. I. du Pont de Nemours, 353 U. S. 586, 593 (1957) (footnote omitted). The Commission's opinion does not attempt to define the market with which this case is concerned.

* Service station sales of TBA—noted by the Commission as constituting an increasingly important source of TBA sales (R. 122)—may have changed since the date of the record. At least as to sales of replacement tires, service stations appear to have lost ground to their competitors in recent years (Factbook Issue, Mid-May 1964, National Petroleum News, 230).

b. Area of effective competition. Again violating the precepts of Tampa Electric, the Commission does not even attempt to chart "'the area of effective competition in the known line of commerce * * * in which [Goodyear or its supply points operate], and to which [Atlantic or its dealers] can practically turn for supplies" (365 U. S. at 327). The "foreclosure" relied on by the Commission is purported foreclosure of (1) other TBA manufacturers from competing for the business of selling to Atlantic and its dealers, (2) other manufacturers' wholesalers from selling to Atlantic's dealers, and (3) Goodyear's dealers who do not function as supply points from competition for the business of Atlantic's dealers (R. 182-86).

On this basis, any manufacturer of tires, batteries or automotive accessories anywhere in the country who sells or is willing to sell its products within the 17-state area in which Atlantic has stations is someone to whom Atlantic or its dealers could reasonably turn for such products. Whether shipping problems or other factors dictate who can effectively sell tires, batteries or accessories to Atlantic and its dealers is the kind of question not answered by the Commission.

As for the purported foreclosure of other wholesalers (whether wholesalers of non-Goodyear TBA or Goodyear dealers who are not supply points*) from competing

---

* There is no finding and no evidence that any competent Goodyear dealer was ever denied the opportunity to become a supply point for Atlantic's dealers (or for any of the dealers of any other oil company under any other sales commission agreement); nor is there any finding or evidence that any such Goodyear dealer who was not a "supply point" was interested in becoming one. The Commission has persistently ignored the fact that not all Goodyear dealers have the kind of operation necessary to the job required of a supply point. A supply point receives no special compensation for participation in the sales commission plan, and must maintain larger inventories and provide a broader range of services than are usually maintained and provided by other Goodyear dealers who do not perform that function (R. 524-25).

for the business of Atlantic's dealers, the identity of the innumerable competitors possibly involved is left a complete mystery. There are no data at all.*

c. Substantiality of the competition foreclosed. Finally, the Commission has made no effort to determine whether the competition allegedly foreclosed constitutes a substantial share of the relevant market or markets. This failure is a fortiori since there is no information as to what the relevant market is, how big it is, or what portion of it has in fact been foreclosed, if any. Information available in the record does show, however, that Goodyear TBA sales under its agreement with Atlantic totaled somewhat less than $6,000,000 in 1955 (R. 133). The annual national replacement TBA market, for a share of which all TBA manufacturers compete, is estimated to have been $4,000,000,000 in the mid-1950's (R. 3103, 415); thus the maximum share of that market that could have been foreclosed by the Goodyear-Atlantic agreement—even on the Commission's own untenable theory—is roughly 15/100 of 1%.

What all this comes down to is simple. To talk of market foreclosure in the vacuum created by the Commission's total failure to analyze and determine relevant markets and the competition therein is to reject entirely the careful standards and sensitivity to fact developed by this Court in a long line of antitrust cases whose teachings are applicable here.

*Thus, if in a given geographic area there are 20 Atlantic dealers who compete with 400 other stations, 20 tire stores, 3 large department stores, 3 discount houses and several retail stores of giant mail order chains in the sale of TBA at retail, and these dealers buy a substantial share of their total TBA requirements from a Goodyear supply point rather than from 25 other tire wholesalers, dozens of auto parts dealers and various occasional wholesale sellers of one or more TBA items, a determination of the area of competition for purchases by those 20 Atlantic dealers requires careful economic analysis. No attempt at such analysis has been made by the Commission in any possible market.

It is submitted that the Commission's presumption of "foreclosure" based on Atlantic "power" utterly fails to pay heed to the admonitions of this Court.

4. The Inherent Contradictions in the Commission's Approval of Purchase-Resale.

The Commission has also failed to evaluate the functions served by the sales commission plan, particularly in the case of smaller and medium-size oil companies like Atlantic. As noted, Atlantic originally abandoned purchase-resale and entered into sales commission agreements with Goodyear and Firestone because it was convinced that it could not economically provide high quality TBA for its dealers through its own distribution of products which it lacked the facilities and experience to handle (R. 100-01, 2357-62, 2859-64, 239). Yet now Atlantic is to be barred from the alternative method of distribution under which it has been able to achieve that very goal which the Hearing Examiner and the Court below found to be beneficial to dealers, service station operators and oil companies—the provision of high-quality TBA to service station operators trained in their use and sale (R. 114-16, 99-100, 3685).

This paradox in result is also present in the Commission's reasoning. It holds that Atlantic's "power" renders the sales commission plan illegal. But surely that "power" would not cease to exist if Atlantic were relegated to the purchase of TBA for resale to its dealers. Indeed, the Commission proffers nothing to support its silent assumption that the "power" would recede if each Atlantic salesman were himself to be selling, and not merely recommending, TBA.

The Commission's justification* for this incongruity is that there may be some tire, battery or automotive accessory

*The Commission also argues that under a sales commission plan the supply points of a rubber company "are assured of a substantial chunk of the market before the competitive race at the manufacturers who—because of their more limited distribution facilities—are less able to compete for the business of Atlantic's individual dealers than they are to compete for the business of Atlantic. In short, the Commission has issued an order under which "competition for the business of the individual service station is [to be] replaced by competition for the oil company's domination of its dealers", the very thing condemned as anticompetitive by the Seventh Circuit in striking down the sales commission plan (R. 3695).

The Commission's emotionally-charged references to "smaller tire companies" and "smaller competitors" are misleading, for the Commission did not prove—nor could it—that small rubber companies do not have sales commission agreements with oil companies. In addition, as already noted, the Commission failed to consider the effect upon smaller oil companies and their dealers of banning a sales commission plan. In any case, a method of competition has never been held illegal heretofore simply because one company was able to offer a broader range of products and service than another.

C. Under Congressional Policy, Oil Company "Power" is No Basis for Abolition of a Sales Commission Plan.

The Commission's entire approach in establishing a conclusive presumption of illegality based upon Atlantic's purported power over its dealers, rather than upon any wholesale level even begins" (R. 184). This is faulty reasoning, for under purchase-resale the petroleum company would be assured of the same "substantial chunk" at the start of the race.

Moreover, the adoption of purchase-resale by Atlantic and other oil companies with which Goodyear now has sales commission agreements would have the additional effect, under the Commission's own rationale, of "foreclosing" from competition for the business of the dealers of Atlantic and the other oil companies at least the 1,209 independent small businessmen who, as Goodyear supply points, presently sell to such gasoline dealers (R. 173).

acts by Atlantic with respect to its dealers, also conflicts with a clear expression of Congressional policy. In the mid-1950's there was much concern over the power which automobile manufacturers had to influence the purchase by their franchised dealers of cars and other products. In 1956, Congress responded to this concern by enacting, as a declared "supplement" to the antitrust laws, the so-called Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act, 70 Stat. 1125 (1956), 15 U. S. C. §§1221-25 (1958).

Under that Act an automobile dealer was given the right to sue in the district courts for damages if his manufacturer failed

> "... to act in good faith in performing or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise, or in terminating, cancelling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer." (28 U. S. C. §1222).

Good faith was defined in the act as follows:

> "The term 'good faith' shall mean the duty of each party to any franchise, and all officers, employees, or agents thereof to act in a fair and equitable manner toward each other so as to guarantee the one party freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats of coercion or intimidation from the other party: Provided, That recommendation, endorsement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument shall not be deemed to constitute a lack of good faith."* (Emphasis supplied.) (28 U. S. C. §1221(e)).

* Congress appears to have taken the emphasized language from, and thus in a sense to have adopted, the trial court's charge in United States v. General Motors Corp. (affirmed at 121 F. 2d 376 (7th Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 314 U. S. 618), portions of which are set out at length in this Court's decision in Ford Motor Co. v. United States, 335 U. S. 303. In those instructions, the trial court told the jury it was not unreasonable for General Motors to have a finance company and to recommend its use to its dealers. In his charge, he commented, as follows, upon the Government's theory that General Motors' power to refuse to renew dealer contracts

The economic "power" of an automobile company vis-a-vis its dealers is surely no less than the power of an oil company vis-a-vis its service-station operators. Yet, in the dealers' statute, Congress plainly held that an auto-was used as a club upon dealers to force them to use the finance company:

> "[The Government] can only complain if the defendants do sufficient of these acts charged in the indictment as constitute duress upon the dealer to accomplish a result that would have otherwise not have been accomplished, and to make a dealer do something that he would not have done of his own free will.

mobile company might actively attempt to persuade its dealers to buy, provided that the influence was employed in a non-coercive way.

The legislative history of the statute makes clear the contemplation that the statute could serve as a precedent for use in other industries such as the petroleum industry. See H. Rep. Committee on the Judiciary, Antitrust Subcommittee, Hearings on H. R. 11360 and S. 3879, 84th Cong., 2d Sess. (1956).

A bill identical in all material respects to the Automobile Dealers' Day in Court Act, but aimed at oil companies, was introduced in the House the following year. See H. R. 425, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957). At least two bills intended to outlaw the sales commission plan have been introduced. See H. R. 428, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957), and H. R. 9894, 86th Cong., 2d Sess. (1960). Similarly, there have been bills aimed at purchase-resale, see H. R. 5926, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. (1961); S. 2480, 87th Cong., 1st Sess. (1961), and at exercise of dominion with respect to the reselling of gasoline or petroleum products as well as TBA, see H. R. 426, 85th Cong., 1st Sess. (1957). The Congress has chosen not to act.

The Commission has here set its face against this history and has issued a legislative declaration of illegality contradicting the Congress itself.

D. The Analogy to Tying Cases is Improper.

By their references to "tying" cases, the Commission (R. 179-81), the Court (R. 3690, 3693-95) and the Solicitor General (Petition, Goodrich-Texaco, pp. 15, 20) each indicate that their real concern lies with oil company power—and not with the sales commission plan. Thus, the Commission argues from its finding that Atlantic "has used its power as a major wholesale and retail distributor of gasoline and as a lessor of numerous valuable retail gasoline distribution facilities to cause its dealers to purchase" TBA that this "would appear to bring this case within" Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1, and Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U. S. 963 (R. 179). However, it goes on to say that "we do not rest our decision on a mechanical application of the rule of the Northern Pacific and Osborn cases" (R. 181).*

But the difficulty with the tying argument is not simply mechanical; it is basic. As the Seventh Circuit points out, "Goodyear's contract in itself has no tying features" (R. 3694). Any tie, if it exists at all, is a tie of the sale of TBA to Atlantic's ability to sell gasoline and to make gasoline distribution facilities available to its dealers pursuant to leases and equipment loan agreements.

If Atlantic were to make an absolute condition to any lease or loan agreement or sale of its petroleum products to a dealer that the dealer purchase Goodyear TBA (or Firestone TBA, or Atlantic TBA under a purchase-resale method of distribution), such an arrangement might amount to an unlawful tying agreement, assuming the requisite effects upon competition. But unlawful for whom? It is clear that the tie would result purely from Atlantic's act, not from anything having to do with Goodyear.

In any event, the way to eliminate an unlawful tying arrangement is to enjoin the tie. In Northern Pacific an injunction was entered against the railroad's continuing any condition in its leases requiring its lessees to use its shipping facilities in preference to other railroads. The railroad was not enjoined from continuing to lease property; it was not enjoined from continuing to engage in carriage by rail; nor was it enjoined from continuing to lease property and to furnish carriage by rail to the same persons. Similarly in International Salt Co. v. United States, 332 U. S. 392, the defendant was enjoined from tying the rental or sale of its patented machines to the sale of its salt but not from furnishing machines, from selling salt or from both. The "power" which the railroad derived from its ownership of specific real property and the "power" which the salt company derived from its patent monopoly are surely no less than the "power" of General Motors over its dealers or of Atlantic over its.*

* Under this Court's decision in Securities and Exchange Commission v. Chenery Corp., 318 U. S. 80, this explicit refusal to rely upon tying would appear to bar any argument now that the Commission's decision could be affirmed on a tying theory; but cf. Petition, Goodrich-Texaco, pp. 15, 20.

The distinction between unlawful tying and the lawful conduct which the Commission seeks to proscribe in this case is also evidenced in Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Company, 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), cert denied, 366 U. S. 963, a case relied upon by the Commission (R. 179-81), the Seventh Circuit (R. 3693-94), and the Solicitor General (Petition, Goodrich-Texaco, p. 20). The plaintiff Osborn, a former lessee-operator of a service station,

* Similarly, in other cases in which this Court found an illegal practice upon a tying theory, the order banned only the coercive activity, despite "power" in each instance no less than that which Atlantic may have. In no case was the company ordered to restrict production or sale of the tying or tied product. United States v. Loew's Inc., 371 U. S. 38; Jerrold Electronics Corp. v. United States, 365 U. S. 567; International Business Machines Corp. v. United States, 298 U. S. 131; United Shoe Machinery Corp. v. United States, 258 U. S. 451, 456-57. In United States v. Paramount Pictures, 334 U. S. 131, this Court said:

> "We do not suggest that films may not be sold in blocks or groups, when there is no requirement, express or implied, for the purchase of more than one film. All we hold to be illegal is a refusal to license one or more copyrights unless another copyright is accepted." (334 U. S. at 159).

brought suit against Sinclair charging his former supplier-lessor had violated Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act by requiring him to purchase Goodyear TBA and eventually cancelling his lease when he refused.

The Court saw the question before it as "whether there existed between Sinclair Refining Company and its customers an illegal tying arrangement prohibited by Section 1" (286 F. 2d at 834); it concluded there was illegal tying both because such illegal conduct might be inferred from the facts present and because one lease to Osborn "was actually made in pursuance of an express oral agreement to purchase Goodyear TBA" (286 F. 2d at 836-37). What concerned the Court was not the oil company's power but its use of pressure and coercion:

> "Of course, a seller may attempt to persuade a buyer to purchase his products rather than those of his competitors, and such salesmanship efforts do not run afoul of the anti-trust laws, unless the sale of one product (the tying product) is made under an agreement, arrangement or condition under which the buyer must also purchase another (the tied) product.
> "* * * Sinclair-Sherwood's efforts to induce their dealers to carry a substantial quantity of Goodyear TBA went beyond mere persuasion or salemanship to effectuate Sinclair-Sherwood's policy and constituted an actual requirement and condition for the continued sale of gasoline under their leases." (286 F. 2d at 836).

It is submitted that this Court and the Court in Osborn have consistently viewed tying as a problem of abuse of power; that the Hearing Examiner was faithfully applying precedent and common sense when he confined the remedy to prohibition of coercive acts by Atlantic; that the Commission in effect recognized that "tying" analogies gave it no basis for absolute prohibition of a sales commission plan; and that the Commission's order may not now derive sanction from tying analogies.

Conclusion.

The Hearing Examiner was clearly correct when he concluded that it was proper for Atlantic to "sponsor" TBA and thus seek to persuade its dealers in their TBA purchases—so long as Atlantic itself did not engage in improper behavior such as coercion or tying. The Commission and the Court below refused to adopt that eminently sound approach, substituting for it a simple quantitative test of illegality which treats actual conduct as irrelevant and ignores the many justifications for using the sales commission method to distribute TBA.

The decision under review is thus a departure from the antitrust mainstream, an effort to avoid the careful economic analysis and weighing of alternatives which this Court has consistently required. To permit the Commission's decision to stand would be to acquiesce in the Commission's assuming for itself the right to condemn business conduct as illegal per se without concern for either fact or law. This Court should reverse.

II.

EVEN IF THE COMMISSION'S ABOLITION OF THE GOODYEAR-ATLANTIC SALES COMMISSION PLAN WERE PROPER, ITS PROHIBITION OF ALL GOODYEAR PLANS WITH ALL OIL COMPANIES IS COMPLETELY UNWARRANTED.

The preceding Point I urges that the Commission could not properly abolish the sales commission arrangement between Goodyear and Atlantic. This Point II demonstrates that, in any event, the Commission had neither factual nor legal basis for its far broader prohibition barring Goodyear from all sales commission plans with all oil companies.

The Commission's opinion is void of information about Goodyear's sales commission agreements with oil companies who were not respondents in this proceeding. The only specific references by the Commission to such agreements are as follows: (a) claimed coercion by Sinclair-Sherwood of two of its dealers in 1948 (R. 162-64), (b) a tabulation showing the number of Goodyear supply points servicing the dealers of nine non-respondent oil companies (R. 173), (c) the dollar amount of Goodyear's total TBA sales to dealers of a group of non-respondent oil companies under sales commission plans in the two years 1951 and 1955 (R. 162), and (d) a naked finding that Goodyear's agreements with other oil companies "are in all material respects identical with the Goodyear-Atlantic contract" (R. 162). The Commission made no effort to show that the sales commission plans as implemented by other oil companies were in any respect comparable to the Atlantic plan as implemented.*

As to other oil companies, there are no findings whatsoever as to the following:

a. How the sales commission plan with each of them works in actual practice;

b. The terms of, and the actual operations under, the oil company's contractual arrangements with its retail outlets

* The non-respondent petroleum companies with which Goodyear has sales commission agreements present a variety of different situations which the Commission has simply swept under the rug. The companies are of different sizes, operate in different areas, face different competitors, have different positions in their respective markets, provide markets for differing amounts of TBA, operate with different types of dealer outlets, etc.

(although, in the case of Atlantic, the Commission and the Court below found such arrangements to be the "keystone of the actual relationship between Atlantic and its dealers" (R. 3690));

c. How each oil company selects its dealers or how, if at all, it operates or participates in dealer training schools, dealer meetings, tire clinics, promotional programs, cooperative advertising or quota systems, or otherwise promotes the sale of Goodyear TBA;

d. How each company deals with initial stocks of TBA, check-out of dealers, the selection of supply points, TBA display, station identification, or non-sponsored products.

This failure of proof is emphasized by the procedural posture of this matter. For example, the Commission's order before this Court prohibits Goodyear, inter alia, from a continuation of its sales commission plan with Shell, although there is virtually no pertinent evidence in the record here. Yet there is still sub judice before the Fifth Circuit the very issue whether Shell should be permitted to continue its sales commission plans generally, including that with Goodyear. It is in that latter case, not this, that the Commission had the opportunity to examine Shell's relationship with its dealers—the Commission's own touchstone of legality of a sales commission plan. It is in that case, not this, that Shell's rights should be decided. But the Commission has so framed its order in this case that Shell is to be voiceless in a determination which affects its vital interests and which lacks the factual foundation necessary to such determination. This bizarre result is not alone a showing of unfairness to Shell; it is an irrefutable demonstration that the Commission's order in this case ranges destructively far beyond the record before it.

Nor is this all. Beyond the lack of findings as to oil companies other than Atlantic with whom Goodyear had sales commission arrangements at the date of the record, there is a further vacuum. The order is not content to nullify Goodyear's sales commission plans as of 1956: it bars Goodyear from entering into any sales commission plan with any marketing oil company at all in the future, without knowledge of that company's size, that company's actual relations to its dealers or the economic factors which this Court has ruled to be the governing criteria in antitrust cases.*

Thus, the Commission's order would void Goodyear's sales commission arrangements as of December, 1964 with 21 marketing oil companies (including Atlantic). Most of these companies are not "major" oil companies—14 are not deemed to be among the largest marketing oil companies (21 or 22 in number) in terms either of total assets* or daily average refinery runs.

The Commission's catch-all prohibition as to the future after 1956 has an ironic twist. One of the 21 companies with whom Goodyear now has a sales commission arrangement is Texaco (which has non-exclusive sales commission agreements with Firestone, Goodrich and United States Rubber Company as well). The Commission has thus held that it is unlawful for Goodyear to have a sales commission agreement with Texaco because of a presumed "power" by Texaco over its dealers, while at the same time Texaco itself, under the decision of the District of Columbia Circuit, is completely free to have such an agreement with Goodyear or anybody else because there was insufficient evidence in the Goodrich-Texaco case to establish that Texaco had any such power over its dealers. If this case involved coercion or other abuses by Goodyear, such a result might have a faint tinge of rationality (although it would be a rationalization only the Commission itself could provide, as is clear from Securities and Exchange Commission v. Chenery Corp., 318 U. S. 80). Since, however, the only basis here put forward by the Commission for branding the sales commission plan unlawful is a presumption of power by all oil companies over their dealers, it is ridiculous to contend that it is unlawful for Goodyear to deal with Texaco after the Commission has tried but failed to show that Texaco has the requisite power.

Even assuming arguendo that the District of Columbia Circuit was wrong in concluding that the record in Goodrich-Texaco did not support a finding that Texaco has the requisite "power" over its dealers, that Court was at least absolutely correct in determining that the evidence for the finding should be assessed. Clearly, the existence of oil company "power" is, in each individual case, a matter of fact to be determined on a record. The Commission cannot properly determine the relationship of each company in the entire oil industry to its own particular dealers simply by purporting to examine the relationships between each of three oil companies and their respective dealers. For example, merely the gross disparity in size between Texaco on the one hand and Quaker State on the other* may or may not have anything to do with the power either can, or does in fact, exercise over its dealers, but the Commission has not even considered the possibility that such differences do exist in the oil industry. Moreover, Atlantic's experience with purchase-resale indicates that small marketing oil companies have no feasible alternative to sales commission distribution of TBA.

The Seventh Circuit treated in a brief paragraph the Commission's failure of proof as to the entire range of oil companies, small, medium or large, embraced and vitally affected by the Commission's order:

* Texaco's refinery runs for the year ended March 31, 1964 averaged 724,191 barrels per day; Quaker State's refinery runs averaged 9,049 barrels per day for the some period. (In this respect Texaco was second in the nation while Quaker State was sixty-eighth.) The Oil & Gas Journal, July 13, 1964, pp. 49, 51.

"We think the Supreme Court answered petitioners' contentions in F. T. C. v. Ruberoid Co., 343 U. S. 470, 473 (1952), when it said:

> " 'Orders of the Federal Trade Commission are not intended to impose criminal punishment or exact compensatory damages for past acts, but to prevent illegal practices in the future. In carrying out this function the Commission is not limited to prohibiting the illegal practice in the precise form in which it is found to have existed in the past. If the Commission is to attain the objectives Congress envisioned, it cannot be required to confine its road block to the narrow lane the transgressor has traveled; it must be allowed effectively to close all roads to the prohibited goal, so that its order may not be bypassed with impunity.' " (R. 3696).

Ruberoid has no application to the issue here. The quotation in Ruberoid was in answer to a contention by Ruberoid that the Commission could not interdict admittedly illegal behavior in which the company had not specifically engaged. Significantly, the Court went on to point out that the company was not being prevented from engaging in lawful acts (343 U. S. at 473-76). Here, the Commission did not bar Goodyear from sales commission agreements with all oil companies as a matter of remedy addressed to a "transgressor". Rather, it grandly assumed that oil company "power" over dealers permeated the entire oil industry and barred Goodyear on the reasoning that a sales commission arrangement by any oil company would necessarily result in a violation of Section 5. Thus, the issue is whether the sales commission plan is an unfair trade practice at all when Goodyear engages in it with companies which do not have (or have not been proven to have) the power over their respective dealers which is the sine qua non of the Commission's unique new formulation of an unfair method of competition. Whatever the purported evidence as to Atlantic, neither Ruberoid nor the Seventh Circuit nor the Commission sheds any light on why the Goodyear sales commission plan should be unlawful when used with any other marketing oil company in the country.

The Commission's order here is all the more remarkable because within the past month the Commission has specifically recognized that it does not know enough of the "highly complex" facts as to competitive conditions in the marketing of gasoline; that this "dynamic industry" changes rapidly and has significantly altered since a record which was closed in the 1950's; and that the Commission would forego "specific remedial measures" against "a few oil companies" before it obtained a "solid factual foundation" on an industry-wide basis.

In a situation involving marketing oil company cases growing out of practices with respect to dealers faced with gasoline price wars, the Commission's recent order held:*

> "(1) * * * The specific practices challenged in these cases occurred almost a decade ago, in the mid-1950's, and competitive conditions in this dynamic and rapidly changing industry appear to have altered significantly since then.
> "(2) The Commission has this date announced the initiation of a broad inquiry into the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline. Orders to cease and desist entered against a few oil companies—orders which would probably not become final, if at all, until completion of lengthy review proceedings in the Federal Courts of Appeals and the Supreme Court—could not provide complete or effective solution to the competitive problems of the gasoline industry. It would appear to be more desirable, from the standpoint of effective administration of the law, that the Commission concentrate its necessarily limited resources on a comprehensive industry-wide approach to the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline." (Emphasis supplied.)

(That order by the Commission, the dissent by Commissioner MacIntyre and an accompanying "Statement of the Federal Trade Commission Announcing Broad Inquiry Into The Problem of Competition In The Marketing of Gasoline" are set out as Annex A hereto.)

The statement announcing the Commission inquiry specifically recognizes that the Commission lacks expertise in petroleum marketing:

"The Commission has received a large number of inquiries, complaints, and petitions from various groups in the gasoline industry, from members of Congress, and from members of the consuming public, with respect to competitive problems in the marketing of gasoline. It is evident both from these submissions and from the Commission's experience in this industry in enforcing the laws which it administers that a broad, comprehensive, and industry-wide approach to the competitive problems of the industry is necessary, and that specific remedial measures required in the public interest should not be attempted before obtaining a solid factual foundation in regard to competitive conditions of gasoline distribution. As the Supreme Court stated in a recent decision, proper and effective remedial action in this industry requires that the Commission make realistic appraisals of relevant competitive facts, and these facts are highly complex. The Commission has accordingly deter> mined forthwith to institute an industry-wide inquiry into the competitive problems of marketing gasoline. The Commission intends to employ its flexible administrative powers of investigation and fact-finding as may be found necessary to assure a complete, fair, and realistic understanding of the structure and dynamics of competition in the industry." (Emphasis supplied.)

The Commission's present view that "proper and effective remedial action in [the petroleum marketing] industry requires that the Commission make realistic appraisals of relevant competitive facts" contradicts the course the Commission has pursued in this case. Its present recognition of the complexity of the markets with which this case is concerned and of the need for industry-wide data about "the structure and the dynamics of competition in the industry" is an unintended concession that there is no basis in the empty and stale record of this case for a conclusion that the sales commission plan cannot ever be legal if entered into with any oil company.

As is clear from Point I, supra, no realistic appraisal of relevant facts has been made by the Commission in the case of Atlantic. As for all other oil companies—whether they have sales commission plans with Goodyear or not—there is no appraisal at all. There is here not a mere inability to meet the proper standards of proof but a complete failure to find evidence of unlawfulness.

It is submitted that this Court should take stock of the Commission's present acknowledgment—more than eight years after the date of the record here and close to four years after the date of its order here—that it lacks sufficient knowledge of the relevant facts in the marketing of gasoline: this proceeding should be dismissed.

III.

IN FIXING ITS REMEDY, THE COMMISSION FAILED TO PERFORM THE DUTIES WHICH THE CONGRESS AND THIS COURT HAVE HELD TO BE ESSENTIAL.

Quite apart from the substantive argument in the preceding two Points that the Commission seeks to bar a legal and proper economic practice, it is clear that the Commission fixed its remedy without performing the functions which this Court requires of an administrative agency in the determination of an appropriate remedy.

Nowhere in its opinion does the Commission indicate that it gave consideration to an order more limited and specific than the order here. Instead there is the stubborn failure of the Commission to consider the benefits of the sales commission plan, to weigh any remedy short of flat abolition or to set out reasons why less Draconian relief would not suffice. Still, the requirement that an order by the Commission be reviewable is a requirement that there be a stated basis for the order, including reasoned explanation why the order could not be framed in less sweeping terms.

The importance to a reviewing court of an agency's articulation of the rationale underlying choice of remedy is forcefully set out in this Court's decision in Jacob Siegel Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 327 U. S. 608. In that case the Court held that the Commission had erred in ordering an outright prohibition of any use of a trade name which it had found to be deceptive; the Commission should have first considered whether measures short of so drastic a remedy would effectively eliminate the deception. The Court stated:

"For the Commission seems not to have considered whether in that way the ends of the Act could be satisfied and the trade name at the same time saved. We find no indication that the Commission considered the possibility of such an accommodation. It indicated that prohibition of the use of the name was in the public interest since the cease and desist order prohibited the use of the name. But we are left in the dark whether some change of name short of excision would in the judgment of the Commission be adequate." 327 U. S. at 613.

The basis of the holding was put as follows:

> "[The Commission's] expert opinion is entitled to great weight in the reviewing courts. But the courts are not ready to pass on the question whether the limits of discretion have been exceeded in the choice of remedy until the administrative determination is first made." 327 U. S. at 614.

The Court recently affirmed this rule in two cases reviewing orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Gilbertville Trucking Co. v. United States, 371 U. S. 115 and Burlington Truck Lines v. United States, 371 U. S. 156. In each instance the Court approved the Commission's holdings as to statutory violation, but remanded for the Commission's consideration of remedies less harsh than those adopted. In Gilbertville, where divestiture of an individual's stock interest in a corporation had been ordered, this Court said:

> "'. . . the choice of remedy is as important a decision as the initial construction of the statute and finding of a violation. The court or agency charged with this choice has a heavy responsibility to tailor the remedy to the particular facts of each case so as to best effectuate the remedial objectives just described. Cf. Hecht Co. v. Bowles, 321 U. S. 329-331.
> . . . . . .

> "By referring to these mitigating considerations, we have no intention of prejudging the Commission or implying that divestiture would be unwarranted after proper treatment of the issue. These considerations merely indicate that a doubt can be raised and that a remand to the Commission is not purely academic for the sake of procedural regularity. When the Commission has exercised its judgment and issued its considered opinion, the propriety of the remedy chosen will be ripe for review. Jacob Siegel Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n, supra; Administrative Procedure Act, §8(b), 60 Stat. 242, 5 U. S. C. §1007(b)." 371 U. S. at 130-31.

In Burlington, the Commission had concluded that certain union-indueed refusals to accept or deliver traffic from or to particular carriers or shippers were illegal and resulted in serious inadequacies in the service available. The Court agreed. However, the Commission chose to remedy the situation by certificating additional carriers. The Court remanded for the Commission to consider whether a cease and desist order addressed specifically to the discriminatory practices would have cured the violation:

> "There are no findings and no analysis here to justify the choice made, no indication of the basis on which the Commission exercised its expert discretion. We are not prepared to and the Administrative Procedure Act will not permit us to accept such adjudicatory practice. See Siegel Co. v. Federal Trade Comm'n, 327 U. S. 608, 613-614. Expert discretion is the lifeblood of the administrative process, but 'unless we make the requirements for administrative action strict and demanding, expertise, the strength of modern government, can become a monster which rules with no practical limits on its discretion.' New York v. United States, 342 U. S. 882, 884 (dissenting opinion)." 371 U. S. at 167 (footnote omitted).

The facts are even stronger here than those present in Siegel, Gilbertville and Burlington. The value of the trade name in Siegel is more than matched by the worth of a traditional marketing practice whose varied benefits were not denied by the Commission. Goodyear's right to continue to employ this method to distribute its products involves considerations at least as important as the right of a person whose family controls one motor carrier to own stock in another (as in Gilbertville) and the desire of motor carriers to avoid certification of additional competition (as in Burlington).

Moreover, the variety of possible remedies available to the Commission here is significantly greater than that available in the cited cases. In Siegel, for example, the Commission's function was to adopt a proper remedy with respect to a specific trade name, and the choice of remedies—once use of the trade name was found to be deceptive—was obviously restricted to a choice between an outright prohibition or a requirement of full disclosure to the public. Here, the various factors to which the Commission has already pointed in finding an improper restraint themselves indicate the broad range of specific remedies which the Commission could have and should have considered. Among such specific remedies are the following, as already set out in our petition for certiorari (pp. 34-5):*

1. An injunction against the exertion of undue pressure upon oil company dealers to purchase Goodyear TBA,

* The listing of possible remedies short of total prohibition of all Goodyear sales commission arrangements does not, of course, mean that these possible remedies are appropriate on the facts and law here. Rather, the listing is undertaken to demonstrate that the Commission failed to consider remedies directly pertinent to the Commission's own view of the case.

 Although such an injunction could here be entered only against Atlantic, the Commission should have shown that it considered whether to enjoin Goodyear from entering into any sales commission agreement with a marketing oil company which did not promise in that agreement to meet such standards.

making clear that dealers were free to purchase TBA products from anyone at any time. This might include requirements that:

(a) All oil company dealers be furnished a copy of the Commission's order;

(b) All oil company dealers be reminded periodically that they have freedom of choice;

(c) All oil company dealer complaints received by the oil company or the rubber company be passed on by the recipient to the Commission with an explanation as to the facts and any corrective measures taken.

2. An injunction circumscribing oil company "power" by modifying an element of the oil company-dealer relationship such as:

(a) Lease terms;

(b) Equipment loans;

(c) Credit card coverage;

(d) Cooperative advertising; and

(e) Joint merchandising.

3. An injunction against an oil company's limitation of a particular sales commission agreement to a geographical portion of its total sales commission arrangements.

4. An injunction assuring that an oil company in its sales commission arrangements affords its dealers an alternative choice of sponsored brands of TBA.

5. An injunction against any limitation of the number of Goodyear "supply points", coupled with requirements that:

(a) The "supply point" function be assigned to anyone who meets objective standards and is willing to assume the responsibilities; and

(b) unless completely impracticable in a particular case, an oil company dealer have more than one supply point available to him.

Furthermore, the Commission would not have been breaking new ground in adopting a remedy involving petroleum products and TBA which stopped short of total abolition of sales commission arrangements. In United States v. Richfield Oil Corp., 99 F. Supp. 280 (S. D. Cal. 1951), aff'd per curiam, 343 U. S. 922, total requirements and tying arrangements were voided, but the decree left intact a sales commission plan for automobile accessories. Moreover, in two other litigated cases and a consent decree, the right of the oil company to "sponsor" TBA products was specifically preserved. United States v. Standard Oil Co. of California, 78 F. Supp. 850, 891 (S. D. Cal. 1948), aff'd 337 U. S. 293; United States v. Sun Oil Co., 176 F. Supp. 715 (E. D. Pa. 1959) (decree unreported); United States v. Standard Oil Co. of California, CCH 1959 Trade Cas. ¶69,399 (S. D. Cal. 1959).*

Rather than following precedent (indeed, rather than even mentioning precedent), the Commission fixed upon destruction of Goodyear's sales commission plans. But given the undisputed benefits of such plans, the finding that Goodyear did not itself engage in any pressuring of Atlantic's dealers, and the complete failure of proof of illegality in Goodyear's arrangements with other oil companies, there is no reasonable basis for broad scale banishment.*

* It was obviously the judicial judgment that the oil company "power" which concerns the Commission could be properly handled by restraint of its exercise. Moreover, another remedy available if such "power" were to result in undue pressure against a dealer is a treble damage action. See Osborn v. Sinclair Refining Co., 286 F. 2d 832 (4th Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U. S. 963, discussed in Point I, supra.

The order here represents a refusal by the Commission to use the very expertise which Congress intended it to exercise. No legislative purpose is fulfilled by unskilled obliteration of an entire marketing institution.

It is submitted that in imposing its remedy the Commission failed to perform its required duties.

CONCLUSION.

This Court should reverse and remand for dismissal of the complaint.

Final Order.

In the exercise of the Commission's administrative discretion, and without rendering decisions adjudicating any issues of law or fact involved,

IT IS ORDERED that the initial decisions in the above-captioned proceedings be, and they hereby are, set aside, and that the complaints be, and they hereby are, dismissed, for the following reasons:

(1) In three of these cases, there is no quorum of the Commission at the present time for rendering adjudicative decisions on the merits and issuing any orders to cease and desist based upon findings of violation of law. Adjudication of these cases would require reargument of the appeals. The specific practices challenged in these cases occurred almost a decade ago, in the mid-1950's, and competitive conditions in this dynamic and rapidly changing industry appear to have altered signficantly since then.

(2) The Commission has this date announced the initiation of a broad inquiry into the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline. Orders to cease and desist entered against a few oil companies—orders which would probably not become final, if at all, until completion of lengthy review proceedings in the Federal Courts of Appeals and the Supreme Court—could not provide complete or effective solution to the competitive problems of the gasoline industry. It would appear to be more desirable, from the standpoint of effective administration of the law, that the Commission concentrate its necessarily limited resources on a comprehensive industry-wide approach to the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline.

By the Commission, with Commissioner Dixon not participating and with Commissioner MacIntyre dissenting for the reasons stated by him in the accompanying dissenting opinion.

Commissioner MacIntyre, dissenting:

These cases are of vital importance, not only to the public but to the businessmen engaged in the petroleum industry. Likewise, it is of importance that the vital issues involved in these adjudicative cases be resolved. This the Commission has decided to avoid. In its order the Commission states that the cases are being dismissed "without rendering decisions adjudicating any issues of law or fact involved." This is error. The "aggrieved" are entitled to a resolution of the issues involved here. This is demanded by not only the equities involved but also as a matter of moral right and by at least the spirit of the Administrative Procedure Act.

The Majority excuses its action by stating that these adjudicative matters are being dismissed "In the exercise of the Commission's administrative discretion" and "without rendering decisions adjudicating any issues of law or fact involved." I respectfully submit that the portion of the Administrative Procedure Act commencing with Section 5 under the heading of "Adjudication" contemplates no such treatment. Moreover, the further excuse is advanced through the indication that if remedial measures should be required regarding any practice, it would be attempted following the initiation of a broad inquiry into the problems of competition in the marketing of gasoline. In that connection, it is stated that orders to cease and desist, if entered in these cases, would not provide a complete or effective solution to the competitive problems of the oil industry. Let it be understood my dissent here is not directed against the absence of cease and desist orders in these cases; rather, I am dissenting to action by the Majority which avoids adjudication of the vital issues involved. The Majority has not fulfilled its responsibility for making findings of fact and stating its conclusions thereon regarding the practices involved. Thus, it is advising no one concerning the existence or the significance of any of the practices involved.

I am mindful of a statement in the Commission's "Final Order" to the effect that "there is no quorum of the Commission at the present time for rendering adjudicative decisions on the merits." With that assertion I emphatically disagree. The Commission has mustered a quorum sufficient to act and with which it is acting on these cases. I agree that if the members of the Commission, who are acting to dismiss these cases without an adjudication of the issues, should undertake to adjudicate the issues involved, it would be appropriate for them to hear re-arguments on the appeals.

It is the position of the Majority that it would be inappropriate to hear re-arguments on the appeals. Reference is made to the limited resources available to the Commission. Re-arguments in these cases would not unduly draw upon the limited resources of the Commission. No convincing proof has been advanced which would show the need of any substantial additional allocation of funds or personnel to provide for re-argument of these cases. The work is done and the funds allocated to the cases have been spent. In passing, it should be noted that the Commission's records disclose that the tax payers contributed substantially to those funds. For example, the records show that the government has spent between $125,000 and $200,000 in covering the costs of the litigation in these cases. Undoubtedly the respondents spent much larger sums on the cases in the course of litigation. The result we get is the disposition of the issues without deciding the appeals on the merits.

The opinion of the Majority points to an intent to try the use of industry-wide methods for dealing with the problems and practices said to exist in the petroleum industry and for advising businessmen about their responsibilities concerning such problems and practices. On its face, this expression of intent is admirable. I hope, however, that I may be pardoned, under the circumstances, for finding this formula less than reassuring. The two most obvious avenues to an understanding of gasoline marketing problems are either making findings in the pending adjudicative cases or in the rule making fact finding proceeding requested by important segments of the industry. The proposed "broad inquiry" does not expressly provide for the Commission to make findings of fact on the data submitted as it is obliged to do in adjudicative cases or in a trade regulation rule proceeding.

Unfortunately, I am unable to discern an interest here to find the facts and act on them in grappling with these challenging problems. Indeed, our present inability to act seems part and parcel of a more extensive malady. A recent line of Commission decisions evince a regrettable trend toward disposing of adjudicatory matters on procedural grounds, thus avoiding difficult legal and policy problems.[1] Undoubtedly this is a convenient formula, at least in the short run, for those of us responsible for administering these statutes. On final analysis, however, it plainly constitutes an abdication of the Commission's functions, which is charged with advising businessmen of their obligations under the law.

As a member of the Commission who participated with other members of the Commission in hearing appeals in these cases, I am convinced from what I have learned in hearing and considering these cases that undoubtedly in some of the cases the Commission on some issues would have found complaints not sustained. Findings on those [1] E.g., S. Klein, 60 F. T. C. 388, 419 (1962). A case involving a most important commerce question was dismissed without reason for that action. In General Electric Company, Docket 8487, F. T. C. (February 28, 1964), a case involving very significant questions under Section 2(d) of the Robinson-Patman Act, as well as issues of price fixing under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, was dismissed on February 28, 1964, "without adjudicating any issue of fact or law contested on this appeal." In The Papercraft Corporation, Docket 8489, F. T. C. (December 24, 1963), a charge of fictitious pricing was dismissed, although the issue had been fully tried because ". . . in the particular circumstances of this case, the public interest requires that the initial decision be vacated, and the complaint and complaint counsel's appeal dismissed, without determination of the merits of the charge." Further, the Commission refused to initiate a trade regulation rule proceeding, although requested to do so by representatives of the Gift Wrappings Industry, who contended such practices were rife in the industry. The Commission, in Papercraft, therefore, while abandoning the "case by case" basis, at the same time failed to act on an industry-wide basis in response to an industry-wide problem.

issues in those cases undoubtedly would have been differentiated from findings on other issues in other cases. I repeat, here we avoid dealing with those troublesome problems in cases where records on facts have been made. Indeed, we are here confessing bankruptcy in our efforts to find the facts and make judgments on these problems. Certainly, this is true to this date, insofar as the marketing problems of the oil industry are concerned. Although I am unable to accept as justifiable this bankruptcy at this point in time, I do find some consolation in the promise of the Commission that after a "broad inquiry" in the future the Commission will undertake to make some determination whether competitive problems really exist in the petroleum industry in the marketing of gasoline.

December 28, 1964

Statement of the Federal Trade Commission Announcing Broad Inquiry into the Problems of Competition in the Marketing of Gasoline.

The marketing of automotive gasoline to the public is a matter of direct and immediate concern to every American who owns a car, to the more than one hundred thousand independent retail gasoline dealers, to the producers, refiners, jobbers, and wholesale distributors of gasoline and other petroleum products, and to the nation's economy generally. The Federal Trade Commission has a broad range of responsibilities with respect to the preservation of fair and free competition in such marketing. The Commission is responsible for the prevention of deceptive and misleading advertising of gasoline to the consuming public. It is responsible for preventing discriminatory and other monopolistic and anticompetitive methods and practices in the distribution of gasoline. Most comprehensively, the Commission, in the role of watchdog of the free competitive system, has a responsibility to scrutinize the competitive functioning of the gasoline industry and, if necessary, to take appropriate administrative action within its powers, and recommend legislative or other remedies to such competitive problems as may not be susceptible of effective solution under existing laws and procedures.

The Commission has received a large number of inquiries, complaints, and petitions from various groups in the gasoline industry, from members of Congress, and from members of the consuming public, with respect to competitive problems in the marketing of gasoline. It is evident both from these submissions and from the Commission's experience in this industry in enforcing the laws which it administers that a broad, comprehensive, and industry-wide approach to the competitive problems of the industry is necessary, and that specific remedial measures required in the public interest should not be attempted before obtaining a solid factual foundation in regard to the competitive conditions of gasoline distribution. As the Supreme Court stated in a recent decision, proper and effective remedial action in this industry requires that the Commission make realistic appraisals of relevant competitive facts, and these facts are highly complex. The Commission has accordingly determined forthwith to institute an industry-wide inquiry into the competitive problems of marketing gasoline. The Commission intends to employ its flexible administrative powers of investigation and fact-finding as may be found necessary to assure a complete, fair, and realistic understanding of the structure and dynamics of competition in the industry.

As the initial step in this inquiry, the Commission will conduct public hearings, to be held before the members of the Commission in Room 532 of the Federal Trade Commission Building, Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street, commencing at 10:00 A. M. on May 3, 1965. All interested persons, including but not limited to members of the public and of the gasoline industry, are invited to participate in these hearings. Participants are invited to submit data, views, and argument on the following topics: (1) the market structure and competitive behavior of the various segments and levels of the gasoline industry; (2) the pricing of gasoline at all levels of distribution; (3) the causes and effects of so-called "price wars"; (4) competition between branded and unbranded gasoline and between integrated and non-integrated refiners; (5) gasoline grades and qualities, with specific reference to the bearing of gasoline exchange agreements, additives, and octane ratings; (6) other matters pertinent to competition in the marketing of automotive gasoline.

All interested persons are invited to file written data, views, or argument concerning the subject-matter of these hearings with the Secretary of the Federal Trade Commission, Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. 20580, not later than April 5, 1965. If practicable, twenty (20) copies of all written submissions should be filed. Any person desiring to present his views orally at the hearings commencing May 3, 1965, should so inform the Secretary of the Commission by April 26, 1965, and also inform the Secretary of the estimated time required for oral presentation. The Commission may impose reasonable limitations upon the time allotted to any person or organization. The data, views, and argument presented orally or in writing will be available for examination by interested persons at the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

Argument: Page

I. The Commission correctly held that Atlantic's sales commission agreements with Goodyear and Firestone constitute unfair methods of competition in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act 36

A. Atlantic has the power to require its dealers to purchase substantial quantities of TBA and, pursuant to its agreements with Goodyear and Firestone, has exercised the power to accomplish that result 38

1. Atlantic's relationship with its dealers gives it the power to require them to purchase substantial quantities of TBA 38

2. In performing the sales commission agreements Atlantic exercised its power over its dealers to require them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA 44

The opinion of the court of appeals (A.R. 3282–3299, G.R. 3681–3697 [1]) is reported at 331 F. 2d 394.

[1] The record in this Court in No. 292 (Atlantic Refining Co.) is cited as "A.R.", and the record in No. 296 (Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.) is cited as "G.R." These are the two records filed in the court below upon petitions to review the same Commission decision and order, and they contain much overlapping evidence. We have used the Atlantic record as our primary

The opinion of the Federal Trade Commission (A.R. 61–130; G.R. 118–187) is reported at 58 F.T.C. 309.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on April 24, 1964 (A.R. 3299). The petitions for writ of certiorari were filed on July 17, 1964, and were granted on December 14, 1964 (A.R. 3301, G.R. 3699; 379 U.S. 943). The jurisdiction of this Court is conferred by 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the Federal Trade Commission properly held that it is an unfair method of competition, in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, for a major rubber company and a major oil company to enter into an agreement under which the oil company, in return for a commission, promotes the sale to its dealers of the rubber company's products.

2. Whether having found that such an agreement between petitioners The Atlantic Refining Company and The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company violated Section 5, the Commission properly entered an order source and cite it alone for material duplicated in the two records.

The reason there are separate but overlapping records is that the Commission received evidence relating not only to the Atlantic-Goodyear contract (which evidence involves both petitioners and is contained in both records), but also to Atlantic's contract with Firestone (printed in the Atlantic record) and Goodyear's contracts with other oil companies (printed in the Goodyear record). The effect of the hearing examiner's order limiting the admissibility of the two latter categories of evidence to the party involved, is discussed infra, pp. 15–16, fn. 10.

prohibiting each petitioner from entering into or performing any similar agreement with any other company.

STATUTE INVOLVED

Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 45, provides in pertinent part:

(a)(1) Unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair * * * acts or practices in commerce, are declared unlawful.

* * * * *

(6) The Commission is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations * * * from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair * * * acts or practices in commerce.

(b) Whenever the Commission shall have reason to believe that any such person, partnership, or corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition or unfair * * * act or practice in commerce, and if it shall appear to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the interest of the public, it shall issue and serve upon such person, partnership, or corporation a complaint stating its charges in that respect and containing a notice of a hearing upon a day and at a place therein fixed at least thirty days after the service of said complaint. * * * If upon such hearing the Commission shall be of the opinion that the method of competition or the act or practice in question is prohibited by this Act, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and cause to be served on such person, partner> ship, or corporation an order requiring such person, partnership, or corporation to cease and desist from using such method of competition or such act or practice. * * * After the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for review, if no such petition has been duly filed within such time, the Commission may at any time, after notice and opportunity for hearing, reopen and alter, modify, or set aside, in whole or in part, any report or order made or issued by it under this section, whenever in the opinion of the Commission conditions of fact or of law have so changed as to require such action or if the public interest shall so require * * *.

STATEMENT

These cases present the question whether the so-called "sales commission" plan of distributing tires, batteries and accessories ("TBA") is an unfair method of competition under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Under the plan, an oil company agrees to promote the sale to its dealers of a tire company's TBA (known as "sponsored TBA") in return for a commission on the goods sold. The complaint of the Federal Trade Commission charged that The Atlantic Refining Company ("Atlantic") and The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company ("Goodyear") violated Section 5 by entering into such a sales commission plan; and that like agreements between Atlantic and The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company ("Firestone") and between Goodyear and oil companies other than Atlantic were similarly illegal (A.R. 5–13). After full administrative proceedings, the Commission in a lengthy opinion (A.R. 61–130) held that the sales commission method of distributing TBA violates Section 5, and ordered Atlantic and Goodyear to terminate their existing sales commission agreements and to refrain from entering into or performing any similar agreements with others (A.R. 131–134).[2]

1. THE COMPANIES INVOLVED

(a). The Atlantic Refining Company. Atlantic is a major producer, refiner and distributor of gasoline and other petroleum products (A.R. 82) which it sells in 17 states along the Eastern Seaboard (A.R. 2451). It divides the area into six marketing regions which, in turn, are subdivided into 29 districts (A.R. 43–44, 75, 83). In 1948 its sales in this area constituted 2½ percent of total national gasoline sales (A.R. 82, 2560–2561).[3] In 1954 Atlantic's total operating revenues exceeded $500 million (A.R. 82).

[2] In two companion cases, In the Matter of Texaco, Inc. and The B. F. Goodrich Co., 58 FTC 1176; and In the Matter of Shell Oil Company and The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, 58 FTC 371, the Commission held other sales commission agreements illegal and entered similar orders. In the Texaco-Goodrich case, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit (Judge Washington concurring in part and dissenting in part) reversed the Commission and remanded the cause to the agency with instructions to dismiss the complaint (Texaco, Inc. et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, 336 F. 2d 754, petition for writ of certiorari pending, No. 635, this Term). In a proceeding to review the Commission's decision in Shell-Firestone, the Fifth Circuit has heard oral argument. The clerk of that court has advised that the court intends to withhold decision until this Court has decided the present cases.

[3] Since Atlantic's 17-state marketing area accounted for about 36.7 percent of the gasoline sold in 1948 (American Petroleum Institute, Petroleum Facts and Figures, pp. 13–14), Atlantic's

Atlantic distributes its products to the general public through wholesale distributors and retail service station dealers (A.R. 82–83, 273).[4] Wholesale distributors maintain and operate bulk plants and delivery equipment (A.R. 88) and enter into contracts with Atlantic to purchase gasoline and lubricants (A.R. 89, 274, 2515, 2524). Retail dealers are subdivided into lessee dealers, who lease their service stations from Atlantic, and contract dealers, who either own their stations or lease them from someone other than Atlantic (A.R. 83, 87). (The relationship between Atlantic and its dealers is discussed below, pp. 7–11). In 1955 Atlantic had 2,493 lessee dealers, who purchased 39.1 percent of the gasoline sold by Atlantic, and 3,044 contract dealers, who bought 18.1 percent of such gasoline (A.R. 83, 273). Approximately 50 percent of the contract dealers operate service stations. The other 50 percent operate grocery stores, garages and other types of outlets which have gasoline pumps but which, in general, do not sell TBA (A.R. 86–87).

(b) The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. Goodyear is the largest manufacturer of rubber products in the United States. In 1954 its sales were more than $1 billion (A.R. 100).

Goodyear distributes tires, tubes and accessories

2.5 percent share of the national market represents about 6.8 percent of gasoline sales within the 17-state marketing area. Actually, Atlantic's share of its marketing area was somewhat higher because it covers only parts of some of these 17 states (A.R. 43, 75).

[4] Atlantic also sells to commercial accounts, who purchase for their own consumption rather than for resale (A.R. 82).

through 57 warehouses located throughout the country (A.R. 100). It does not warehouse batteries; "Goodyear" batteries are manufactured and directly distributed to Goodyear outlets by the Electric Auto-Lite Company and Gould-National Batteries, Inc. (A.R. 100–101).

Goodyear sells its products at wholesale and retail through approximately 500 company-owned stores and through numerous independent dealers (A.R. 101–102, 394). Its franchised dealers include more than 12,000 independent dealers, and some Atlantic wholesale petroleum distributors and retail petroleum jobbers (A.R. 101). Goodyear also has a substantial number of nonfranchised dealers; most service station customers, including Atlantic stations, are in this category (A.R. 101–102).

2. THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ATLANTIC AND ITS DEALERS AND DISTRIBUTORS

The Commission found (A.R. 64; see the almost identical finding at A.R. 124) that "Atlantic has sufficient economic power over its wholesale and retail distributors to cause them to purchase substantial amounts of sponsored TBA." This power flows primarily from three sources: (a) the short-term leases and gasoline contracts under which the dealers operate; (b) the loans of money and equipment that Atlantic makes to the dealers; (c) the control that Atlantic has over the advertising that may be displayed at its service stations.

(a) The leases and contracts between Atlantic and its dealers and distributors. The leases of Atlantic service stations are standard documents prepared by Atlantic (A.R. 274; CX 86A–B, A.R. 2458; CX 88A1–2, A.R. 2466; CX 88E1–2, A.R. 2477 [5]). The lease provides that the "sole purpose and use of the leased premises shall be the lawful, diligent and businesslike operation of a first-class automotive service station retailing petroleum products and TBA merchandise normally handled at competitive service station outlets" (A.R. 83–85; CX 88A1–2, A.R. 2467; CX 88E 1–2, A.R. 2478).

Although the terms of the leases range from three months to three years, the usual period is one year (A.R. 83 see A.R. 276, AX31A, A.R. 3274–3275; AX 18 (unprinted). In addition to signing a lease, the dealer also is required to sign a document known as the "Eleven Point Lease Letter," which obligates him to maintain his station in accordance with designated standards covering eleven categories of operations

[5] "CX" refers to Commission exhibits, and "AX" to Atlantic exhibits. There are no Goodyear exhibits.

[6] The letter specifies the following standards (CX 88B, A.R. 2473–2474):

"1. Housekeeping—Clean, sanitary premises, inside and out.

"2. Use and Upkeep—Careful use and upkeep of building and equipment in safe, good operating condition.

"3. Display—Neat, orderly arrangement of merchandise and advertising in a manner reasonably calculated to attract and solicit the attention of the motoring public.

"4. Illumination—Safe and adequate to attract customers during night operation.

"5. Personnel—Sufficient manpower to give prompt service and allocated to handle peak operating hours. Clean uniforms, courteous, trained to sell, adequate knowledge of services to be rendered.

"6. Hours of Operation—Uniform daily operating sched-

(A.R. 84–85, 274). Atlantic may cancel the lease for various reasons, including delinquency in paying the rent for five days, and failure to comply with the requirements of the Eleven Point Lease Letter (A.R. 85; CX 250–272, A.R. 2963–2996). Atlantic has both threatened to cancel, and has cancelled, leases for these reasons (A.R. 85, CX 250–272, A.R. 2963–2996); some of these threats were made to dealers who had been with the company a long time or had sold large volumes of gasoline (A.R. 433, 439, 441, 536, 540–541). Atlantic reserves the right in all instances to decide whether to renew a lease (AX 31A, A.R. 3275).

Atlantic requires its lessee dealers to enter into contracts for the purchase from it of automotive lubricants (A.R. 85). While the dealers are not required by contract to handle only Atlantic gasoline, in fact they "purchase and resell Atlantic motor fuels exclusively" (A.R. 85–86).

Contract dealers also sign a standard form of agreement, usually for one year, under which they agree to purchase a specified annual amount of gasoline at ule based on buying habits of potential trade in the area.

"7. Services—At least on a par with competition as to kinds of services rendered and efficiency of performance.

"8. Adequate Inventory—Quality products and merchandise on hand to serve normal customer needs without delay.

"9. Sales Promotion—Regular program for expanding sales, involving direct mail campaigns, personal solicitation, and advertising.

"10. Prices—Competitive, quality and service considered.

"11. Accounting—Maintenance on current basis of records adequate to reflect financial status and return from various phases of your business."
